Daily crude oil imports averaged 5.2 million barrels, unchanged from the rate of the previous week but below the year-ago pace of 5.6 million barrels a day.

Imports of refined petroleum products rose to 1.7 million barrels a day last week from 1.3 million a day in the prior week and 1.4 million a day in the year-earlier week.

U.S. refineries operated at 83 percent of capacity last week, down from 83.2 percent in the previous week and 86.1 percent in the same week last year.

Gasoline inventories crept up to 218.3 million barrels last week from 217.3 million in the prior week but remained slightly below the 222.1 million in storage in the year-earlier week.

Daily gasoline production tapered off to 6.6 million barrels from 6.7 million the week before and from 7 million a year earlier.

Gasoline imports jumped to 272,000 barrels a day from 140,000 in the preceding week and 152,000 a day in the comparable 1989 week.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 27) UPI - Researchers said Tuesday they have begun tests on Army personnel and family members infected with the deadly AIDS virus to see if an experimental AIDS vaccine can boost the immune system and delay symptoms.

Genentech Inc. of South San Francisco, Calif., said tests of its candidate AIDS vaccine began last week at Walter Reed Army Institute of Research in Washington, D.C. About 55 volunteer patients will take part in the 10-month study, which will continue and be expanded if the results are promising, the company said.

Such tests in otherwise healthy people infected with the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, are the first step to determining if the vaccine can boost their immune response and delay the onset of illness, Genentech said.

The firm is also evaluating the possibility of a separate study to see if the vaccine can protect uninfected people against HIV infection.

''Results of our work in chimps appear to warrant doing both'' HIV- infected and non-infected people, said Genentech spokesman Jack Murphy.

A study published in June in the journal Nature showed the vaccine protected two chimpanzees from HIV infection, and marked the first report of animals being protected by a vaccine made of only a small piece or ''subunit'' of the AIDS virus. The two chimps have resisted HIV infecton for at least 14 months, Murphy said.

The Genentech vaccine is a genetically engineered version of a natural HIV protein, called gp120. Because the vaccine is synthetic, it cannot cause AIDS.

The idea of using AIDS vaccines to enhance HIV-infected people's weakened immune systems is not new. A whole, killed virus vaccine developed by polio vaccine pioneer Dr. Jonas Salk has produced some encouraging early results in HIV-infected people in California, as has a subunit vaccine made by Microgenesys Inc. of West Haven, Conn., that was also tested on HIV-infected Army personnel.

The Genentech vaccine is the seventh potential AIDS vaccine authorized by the Food and Drug Administration for human testing. Last week, government researchers and Immuno-U.S. Inc. of Rochester, Minn., announced the start of tests of their jointly developed AIDS vaccine in about 60 healthy people.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 27) UPI - Food prices will rise between 2 percent and 5 percent in 1991, a return to more moderate levels of price inflation after two years of increases in the range of 6 percent, according to a government forecast.

The Agriculture Department estimate suggested that food prices might return to the stable levels of the mid-1980s when annual increases rose roughly 2 percent or 3 percent.

Food prices zoomed 5.8 percent in 1989 and are expected to jump about 6 percent this year due in part to higher prices for fruit and vegetables stemming from last winter's freeze in the South. Milk and meat prices also ran at high levels for months.

''For 1991, a food price rise of 2 percent to 5 percent is in prospect,'' said James Donald, chairman of the department's World Agricultural Outlook Board.

''Projected record meat supplies, higher dairy product output and the likelihood of bigger citrus crops this season will moderate food price rises '' he said.

Donald added that projections for lower inflation would hold down any increases in marketing costs.

Higher oil prices that followed Iraq's invasion of Kuwait could play a role in determining the size of food price increases.

Higher energy costs would affect virtually every phase of the food system, from the expense associated with growing crops to the cost of shipping, packaging, processing and selling.

Major price hikes this year were in fresh fruits, expected to rise 14 percent to 17 percent; pork, up 10 percent to 14 percent; processed fruits, up 10 to 13 percent and dairy products, up 8 percent to 10 percent.

Estimates showed that farmers will produce a record 64.25 billion pounds of beef, pork, veal, mutton and poultry meat in 1991. That is a 3 percent increase over this year and represents 226.6 pounds of meat for every American.

Milk output is projected to rise between 1 percent and 2 percent from this year's 148 billion pounds although prices are expected to soften.

The citrus crop, slashed by a devastating Christmas weekend freeze last year, is projected at 13.5 million tons this season, up 26 percent. The new harvest is under way.

NEW YORK (NOV. 27) UPI - Striking Daily News reporters have returned to their beats, this time covering the city for the ''Real News,'' the striking unions' newspaper that put out a second issue Tuesday.

The new edition of the ''Real News'' contained what the unions said were a series of exclusive reports, including one story of the Dinkins administration's plans to shut seven firehouses to help close the budget gap.

The first issue of the ''Real News'' dealt exclusively with strike- related matters from the unions' point of view.

The new issue, although it contained stories headlined ''Strike Leaves Tribune Teetering,'' was filled mainly with traditional Daily News fare, including a column about the expected indictment of John Gotti and four pages of sports coverage.

News management meanwhile charged that ''intimidation and threats'' by striking union employees have scared away its largest advertisers including Alexander's department stores, a $9 million-a-year ad account.

Alexander's announced Monday that it had no plans to continue advertising in the News ''at this time,'' adding that it was making an ongoing evaluation of all media.

News spokesman John Sloan refused to verify Alexander's withdrawal, commenting ''Due to the pattern of intimidation and threats against our advertisers, we are not going to confirm or deny any specific advertisers either leaving or staying in the News.

Alexander's completed the withdrawl of the News' ''big three'' advertisers. Macy's and A&S stores, both of which spent at least $6 million on News ads annually, stopped advertising last week.

Most small advertisers also have withdrawn, leaving the News with only 40 of its 615 pre-strike advertisers, according to striking ad employees at the News York Newspaper Guild strike headquarters.

''The paper had gross revenues of $420 million last year and 75 percent of that came from ads,'' a Guild spokesman said. ''If the News doesn't negotiate an end to this strike soon, it will be force to close down.''

About 2,500 members of the Guild and eight unions represented by the Allied Printing Trades Council walked off their jobs at the News Oct. 25 after 10 months of fruitless contract negotiations. Since then there have been sporadic talks between union negotiators and managment with federal mediators in attendance.

(NOV. 27) UPI - A changing of the political guard will take place in Britain tomorrow. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher will formally submit her resignation to Queen Elizabeth. Minutes later, Thatcher's hand-picked successor, John Major, will take over the keys to Number 10 Downing Street. The current chancellor of the exchequer is the son of a former trapeze artist and is hailed by Thatcher as ''a true man of the people.''

It appears that sentiment is growing in the Senate to stall any imminent military action against Iraq to give economic sanctions an opportunity to work. Massachusetts Democrat Edward Kennedy says ''If ever there was a case for giving peace a chance, this is it.'' And while Democrat Sam Nunn of Georgia did NOT endorse a delay in sending more U-S troops to the Persian Gulf he says ''The question is whether military action is wise at this time.''

Defense Secretary Cheney and General Colin Powell won't testify until Monday... well after the expected U-N action Thursday on a resolution authorizing military force to get Iraq out of Kuwait.

The government is forecasting some positive economic news. The Agriculture Department says food prices will rise a moderate two to five percent next year... less than the six percent inflation projected for this year. Last winter's freeze in the South drove up fruit and vegetable prices while milk meat prices ran at high levels for months. The government says projected record meat supplies, higher dairy product output and the likelihood of bigger citrus crops this season will help keep food price hikes at moderate levels.

But the trickle-down theory is NOT bringing good financial news to some residents of Austin, Texas. While Internal Revenue Service agents clean out a country club and recording studio owned by Willie Nelson... many of his employees and road crew have scattered in search of new jobs. The I-R-S seized the property in Texas and five other states when the entertainer was UNable to pay millions in back taxes. Casey Monahan, director of the Texas Music Office, says the closing of Nelson's studio is a blow to Austin's prestige as a music center. The I-R-S says it will sell Nelson's property within 30 days.

New York City's health commissioner is defending his department's procedure in a recent recall of 750-thousand condoms that turned out to be possibly defective. Commissioner Woodrow Myers Junior says his people three weeks ago contacted all 300 public organizations that received the condoms. The recall only became public knowledge yesterday. 15 lots of the Saxon spermicidal condoms may exceed the four per one-thousand pinhole leakage rate allowed by federal Food and Drug Administration.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 27) UPI - A federal judge Tuesday ordered the Food and Drug Administration to release safety data on silicone breast implants to consumer activists who claim such implants imperil women's health.

Public Citizen Health Research Group, founded by Ralph Nader, filed suit against the FDA in February 1989 after the agency refused to release 30 years worth of research on the safety of implanted materials like silicone gel. The research had been submitted to the FDA by Dow Corning Corp., of Midland, Mich. the major maker of silicone gel used in breast implants.

Dow Corning performed and paid for a number of studies on the safety of silicone implants in the 1960s and early 1970s but never released the results.

Since the 1960s, more than 2 million American women have received breast implants - about 85 percent to enlarge their bustline and about 15 percent to reconstruct a breast after mastectomy. About another 130, 000 women women get implants annually.

Silicone gel has been shown to cause a deadly soft-tissue cancer in laboratory animals, Public Citizen said, and has been associated with the development of chronic arthritis and immune diseases like scleroderma in humans. Women may also suffer complications shortly after surgery like inflammation and scarring of the breast and surrounding tissues and swollen lymph glands, the consumer group said.

The FDA argued that results of 750 ''biosafety'' studies and 39 toxicology studies it received from Dow Corning was ''confidential commercial information'' so the documents could not be provided to Public Citizen. The group's additional request for a summary of consumer complaints about Dow Corning's breast implants was opposed by the Michigan firm, which had furnished the FDA the list.

In his ruling, U.S. District Judge Stanley Sporkin said he found ''neither the animal studies nor the complaint summary were exempt from (public) disclosure'' under the Freedom of Information Act.

Under the judge's order, Public Citizen will receive more than 5,000 pages of research data and a list of consumer complaints dating from 1984 through 1988.

''We plan to share this information with the 2 million women'' who have received the implants, said Dr. Sidney Wolfe, head of Public Citizen. ''A large number, tens of thousands of women, suffer complications from being implanted.''

FDA officials said Tuesday they had not had a chance to review the suit, and Dow Corning officials could not be reached for comment.

Public Citizen has called on the FDA to pull silicone gel breast implants off the market, saying manufacturers never submitted data to prove the devices were safe. The FDA is expected to finalize regulations next month that will ask companies to produce data showing such implants are safe, Wolfe said.

''It is tragic that we must sue our government to obtain information about the safety of a device that has been implanted in more than 2 million women. This is information that the FDA should have required ... as part of pre-market approval process some 25 years ago,'' Public Citizen has said.

The first issue of the ''Real News'' dealt exclusively with strike- related matters from the unions' point of view.

News management meanwhile charged that ''intimidation and threats'' by striking union employees have scared away its largest advertisers - including Alexander's department stores, a $9 million-a-year ad account.

SAN FRANCISCO (NOV. 27) UPI - A math teacher who was called a ''babbler'' and the ''worst teacher'' by his high school's student newspaper has no grounds for a libel claim, a state appeal court ruled Tuesday.

Larry Moyer, a teacher for 24 years, sued ''In Flight,'' the student newspaper at Foothill High, the principal, the Amador Valley Union High School District in Alameda County, and several students for defamation and emotional distress over the 1988 article.

But the 1st District Court of Appeal ruled unanimously that calling Moyer the worst teacher was ''clearly ... an expression of subjective judgment by the speaker.''

Expression of opinion is protected under the First Amendment, Justice John Racanelli wrote in the court's ruling.

The suggestion that he was a ''babbler'' was a ''form of exaggerated expression conveying the student-speaker's disapproval of (Moyer's) teaching or speaking style,'' Racanelli wrote.

The 1988 story, headlined ''Students terrorize Moyer,'' reported a smoke bomb set off in Moyer's classroom.

The article quoted a student identified only as ''The Shadow,'' who supplied the smoke bomb because ''Mr. Moyer is a babbler, and babblers are annoying to me. ... He is the worst teacher at FHS.''

Moyer also complained about the headline's use of the word ''terrorize.''

Racanelli said that, although ''terrorize'' was an exaggeration of the event, ''it nonetheless falls within the protectible category of rhetorical hyperbole.''

VANCOUVER (NOV. 27) UPI - Production of aluminum wheels at a Toyota Motor Corp. plant in Delta, British Columbia, will by doubled to 960,000 a year, according to plans released Tuesday.

Minoru Azuma, president of Canadian Autoparts Toyota Inc., said in a statement the company will build an additional facility to house advanced computerized casting and machining equipment and a sophisticated, four-coat paint process to increase the corrosion resistance of the wheels.

Canadian Autoparts Toyota was set up by the Japanese automaker to supply aluminum wheels for plants in Japan and North America. Ninety percent of the wheels made in British Columbia are shipped to Japan and 10 percent to plants in North America.

''Because of the demand for aluminum wheels continues to be high, further doubling of production is warranted,'' Azuma said.

Wheel production at the Delta plant began early in 1985 with a capacity of 240,000 wheels. Production capacity was doubled to 480,000 in July 1989.

The provincial government has provided Canadian Autoparts Toyota with a five-year, $4.7 million loan to help assist expanding the plant.

It wasn't immediately known when the new facility would be ready for production.

Also Tuesday, Toyota Motor Manufacturing U.S.A. Inc. unveiled plans to build a second car assembly plant that will double capacity to about 400,000 cars annually at its Georgetown, Ky., complex.

The $800 million expansion is expected to begin operations by late 1993 and add about 1,500 new jobs, the Toyota subsidiary said. The new plant will produce more Camrys, which will undergo a major restyling for 1992.

When the expansion project is completed, Toyota's car production in the United States will exceed 600,000 units.

PANAMA CITY, PANAMA (NOV. 27) UPI - The U.S. Peace Corps returned to Panama Tuesday after a 19-year absence with U.S. Ambassador Deane Hinton swearing in six volunteers of the grassroots aid organization.

The Peace Corps returned at the request of the Panamanian government, which was installed during the U.S. invasion last December that ousted military ruler Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Opposition legislators accused the Peace Corps of working with U.S. intelligence agencies, but a bill authorizing the return of the organization to Panama was passed with wide support in the National Assembly earlier this month.

Panamanian military strongman Gen. Omar Torrijos expelled the Peace Corps in 1971, accusing volunteers of spying.

The number of volunteers in Panama will increase to 42 by the end of 1991. They will assist Panamanians in agricultural projects, environmental protection, small business development and other areas.

''You are returning at a time when our country is going through difficult times and striving for recovery,'' said Alonso Fernandez, president of the National Assembly, who addressed the six volunteers at the ceremony.

''We accept and are thankful for the help foreign organizations can offer us '' he added.

Panama is slowly recovering from three years of economic decline and $1 billion in invasion damage, although 40 percent of the country's 2.2 million people continue to live in poverty.

UNITED NATIONS (NOV. 27) UPI - Harvard economist John Kenneth Galbraith urged the United States Tuesday to refrain from using force in the Persian Gulf, saying poor Americans and foreigners would suffer disproportionately from an armed conflict.

Galbraith, in an address to U.N. delegates, said American troops in Saudi Arabia tended to be from less affluent homes as was the case with armed forcesduring the Vietnam war.

''Let us have patience, otherwise we will have the poor killing the poor,'' Galbraith said. He called for continuing the economic sanctions against Iraq rather than resorting to military force.

The Security Council is expected to vote Thursday on a resolution authorizing the use of force against Iraq to liberate Kuwait from Iraqi occupation.

Galbraith urged developed countries to increase aid to poorer states because less privileged populations may fall prey to ethnic violence and fundamentalism in areas like Sri Lanka, Africa, Indochina and the Middle East.

''For the last half century, conflict and death have been the unique affliction of the poor on the poor,'' Galbraith said.

''With industrial development have come international peace and internal stability. With poverty there has been discord and death,'' Galbraith said.

MONTREAL (NOV. 27) UPI - Bombardier Inc. reported Tuesday third-quarter earnings of $18.2 million, or 25 cents a share, up 14.5 percent from the $15.9 million, or 23 cents a share, earned a year earlier.

Revenues in the quarter jumped to $659.9 million from $409.2 million, reflecting the inclusion of results from two acquisitions made in 1989 and the company's purchase of Learjet Inc. in April.

For the first nine months, earnings increased to $56.8 million, or 81 cents a share, from $52.0 million, or 77 cents a share, in the same period in 1989. Revenues increased to $1.73 billion from $1.07 billion a year ago.

Laurent Beaudoin, chairman of Bombardier, said the company's earnings have been maintained despite the economic slowdown.

Bombardier has interests in mass transit, rail, aircraft and consumer products.

The company, which operates plants in Canada, the United States, Europe and Scandinavia, has among its subsidiaries Short Brothers in Northern Ireland, ANF-Industrie in France, Canadair Challenger Inc. in Connecticut and Pullman Technology Inc. in Chicago.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (NOV. 27) UPI - Conglomerate Litton Industries Inc. reported Tuesday earnings of $39.6 million, or $1.76 a share, for the first quarter ended Oct. 31, an 11 percent decline from earnings of $43. 6 million, or $1.73 a share, in the year-ago quarter.

Sales for the first quarter were $1.23 billion, compared with $1.22 billion for the first quarter of fiscal 1990.

The company said the earnings-per-share figure increased because of the repurchase of 1.4 million shares during the first quarter.

Operating earnings declined in the advanced electronics to $36.4 million from $41.6 million and in industrial automation systems and products to $9.1 million from $19.7 million.

Operating earnings increased is resource exploration services to $24 million from $18.6 million and in marine engineering and production to $35.1 million from 31.1 million.

Litton shares were unchanged Tuesday at $75 a share on the New York Stock Exchange.

(NOV. 27) UPI - Britain's new prime minister is a ''man of the people,'' who grew up in a working-class section of London and dropped out of school at age 16. Currently Chancellor of the Exchequer, a position similar to the treasurer in the United States, John Major tomorrow morning will take the political helm of Britain just minutes after Margaret Thatcher offically submits her resignation. Last month, Major cut interest rates and took the pound into a European exchange-rate mechanism, a feat his predecessors failed to achieve. Major will be the the 20th prime minister of Britain this century and the youngest one in 150 years.

(NOV. 27) UPI - Britain's new prime minister is the youngest person to hold the post in more than 150 years. 47-year-old Chancellor John Major, Margaret Thatcher's hand-picked successor, was elected today in a second-round ballot of Conservative members of Parliament. Major fell four votes short of the 187 he needed to win outright, but his two opponents conceded defeat and urged that he be made party leader and prime minister.

Thatcher, who had been prime minister for 11-and-one-half years, is to formally tender her resignation to Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace tomorrow morning. Shortly afterwards, Major- the son of a trapeze artist- will become the 20th prime minister of Britain this century. Major never went to college and spent time on welfare before finally landing a job in banking and working his way to the top.

Researchers at the University of Iowa... in a study conducted for the Boston medical unit of the U-S Postal Service... found workers who tested positive for drugs did indeed have higher rates of injury, accident or other problems on the job than those who tested negative. But they say the extent of the impairment has been exaggerated. For example, it has been claimed that drug-abusing workers take 16 times as much sick leave. The study found the job absentee rate less than six percent higher than other workers.

(NOV. 27) UPI - British Prime Minister Thatcher ends her 11-and-a-half years at the helm of Britain's government tomorrow when she formally hands in her resignation to Queen Elizabeth. Minutes later, John Major- the man she groomed to succeed her- will become Britain's 20th prime minister.

Sentiment apparently is growing in the Senate to stall military action against Iraq and wait and see if economic sanctions work. Massachusetts Senator Edward Kennedy said today- quoting- ''If ever there was a case for giving peace a chance, this is it.''

Former President Ronald Reagan says he supports the massive deployment of U-S troops in the Persian Gulf. In a radio interview today in San Siego, Reagan said Iraq's invasion of Kuwait shouldn't have been a surprise. He says Iraq's use of nerve gas to quell internal strife ''should have alerted us'' to Baghdad's penchant for aggression.

President Bush is back at the White House after a two-day trip to Mexico in which he sought to move quickly toward a landmark free trade accord. Bush says a Bilateral Free Trade Agreement will allow the United States and Mexico ''to expand markets.''

The U-S Peace Corps has returned to Panama after a 19-year absence. U-S Ambassador Deane Hinton swore in six volunteers of the grassroots aid organization today in Panama City. The military government expelled the Peace Corps in 1971, accusing volunteers of spying.

Rockwell International Corporation says it has agreed to pay 280- thousand dollars to settle alleged violations of hazardous waste control laws at two of its plants in the Los Angeles area. Rockwell did NOT admit liability, but says it settled to avoid costly and time-consuming litigation.

A San Francisco high school math teacher has lost his libel claim against his school's student newspaper. A California appeals court ruled today that Larry Moyer has NO grounds for his claim. Moyer sued for defamation and emotional distress after the paper labeled him the ''worst teacher.''

(NOV. 27) UPI - Conservatives in Britain's Parliament have elected Chancellor John Major to succeed his mentor Margaret Thatcher as prime minister. The 47-year-old Major, who made his humble start as the son of a trapeze artist, will become Britain's youngest prime minister this century tomorrow. That's when Thatcher ends her 11-and-a-half-year premiership by formally handing in her resignation to Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace.

The White House reportedly had lined up the necessary votes in the U- N Security Council to pass a resolution authorizing force against Iraq. The Security Council is scheduled to vote Thursday on a resolution setting a January 1st deadline for Iraq to withdraw its troops from Kuwait. The Washington Post reports the five permanent members of the Council appeared to have agreed on the use of force with the only sticking point being whether the resolution set a pullout deadline of January 1st or January 15th. At least one permanent Council member has said it would favor a January 15th deadline.

In Baghdad, Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz today accused the U-N Security Council of adopting a policy of double standards. But Baghdad Radio quotes Aziz as saying the government of Saddam Hussein would never succumb to pressure. According to the report, Azia said- ''Iraq's position on Kuwait will remain unchanged.''

In New York, striking Daily News reporters have returned to their beats, but they're covering the city for the ''Real News,'' the striking unions' newspaper. The unions put out a second issue today. It contained what the unions said are a series of exclusive reports, including one story of Mayor David Dinkins administration's plans to shut seven firehouses to help close the budget gap.

The U-S Supreme Court says federal law pre-empts most state regulations governing self-funded group insurance plans used by Millions of American workers. The high court in effect ruled today that uninsured employee benefit plans are NOT technically considered ''insurance companies'' for the purposes of state laws that regulate insurance... and thus are governed by the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974. The ruling comes in the case of a Delaware-based company that operates a self-funded employee benefit plan.

DENVER (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Pfeiffer Public Relations Inc. Wednesday announced that it has been retained to assist in developing and implementing a corporate communications program for Good Times Restaurants Inc. (NASDAQ:GTIM) of Boulder, Colo.

Good Times Restaurants operates Good Times! Drive Thru Burgers stores, a chain of double-drive-through, ultra-fast-service restaurants that offer a limited, high quality menu for drive-through and walk-up customers only. The concept is designed to exploit a trend in the restaurant industry of take-out and drive-through sales growing at a faster rate than on-premises consumption.

Recently, Good Times Restaurants announced it has retained nationally prominent Francorp Inc. to design and execute a comprehensive franchise development program for the company.

Pfeiffer Public Relations Inc. is a Denver-based firm that provides investor relations and public relations services to companies in a broad range of industries. Founded in 1982, Pfeiffer Public Relations handles clients in Colorado, California, Arizona and Florida.

CARMEL, IN (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Stephen C. Hilbert, chairman and CEO of Conseco Inc. (NYSE:CNC), speaking before an investor meeting in New York late yesterday (Tuesday, Nov. 27), said:

(1) Conseco agrees with analyst projections of $5.50 to $6.00 in operating earnings per share in 1991. As previously announced, Conseco expects 1990 operating earnings per share to equal or exceed $4.50, up from the $3.21 earned in 1989.

(2) Conseco expects approximately $2 billion in premium income in 1991, including premiums from companies owned by Conseco Capital Partners, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership to which Conseco and several institutional investors have committed $70 million in equity capital for the purpose of acquiring and operating life insurance companies. As previously announced, Conseco expects premiums of approximately $1.1 billion 1990.

(3) Conseco has placed with institutional investors $10 million of the previously-announced $25 million private placement of Series C Redeemable Preferred Stock. Conseco expects to place the remaining $15 million during the first quarter of 1991. As previously announced, the company intends to use the proceeds from the sale of the Series C Preferred Stock for general corporate purposes, including the repurchase of shares of its common stock pursuant to its stock repurchase program. The Series C Preferred Stock would not be convertible into common shares.

SALT LAKE CITY (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - MicroMath Scientific Software has announced a grant program for accredited schools, colleges and universities in the United States.

When a school purchases four or more programs for its computer center, a ''buy one, get one free'' site licensing policy takes effect. Through these matching grants, MicroMath hopes to make its software available to a wide range of students.

This new policy applies to all software developed by MicroMath: GRAPH, for scientific plotting and data transformation; MINSQ, for curve fitting and model development; EQUIL, for solution chemistry equilibrium calculations; LAPLACE, for numerical inversion of Laplace transforms; and RSTRIP, for polyexponential curve stripping.

''Our experience with software development can be dated to our student days in graduate school at the University of Michigan,'' says company President Myles Lamson. ''Because we've spent so much time using software in academic settings, we have a strong firsthand knowledge of the needs of student users.''

Approximately 45 percent of MicroMath's program users professors, research teams or students. A major appeal of these programs is that when graphical and numerical solutions to problems are readily available, students are able to manipulate their data in many different ways, leading to a greater understanding of the subject at hand.

''My students can concentrate on the chemistry instead of grinding through hours of algebra,'' says Dr. Jeffrey Fox of the University of Utah's Pharmaceutics department.

Another advantage of these programs is the ease of use. With menu-driven software such as this, learning the program is relatively simple. Again, this contributes to greater student comprehension.

By making its programs readily available to colleges and universities, 0icroMath hopes to help provide scientists and engineers in training with the tools they need to develop meaningful contributions to our current body of research.

Interested schools are welcome to contact MicroMath Scientific Software at 800/942-MATH for further information.

MILPITAS, CA (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - LSI Logic Corp. (NYSE:LSI), and Synopsys Inc. announced Wednesday an agreement to incorporate Synopsys' logic synthesis tools into LSI Logic's Silicon 1076 VHDL (VHSIC Hardware Description Language) design environment.

In addition, LSI Logic will license Synopsys' tools for installation in their major design centers.

Under the terms of the agreement, LSI Logic will integrate Synopsys' tools to provide a complete VHDL ''Concept-to-Silicon'' systems design environment. The Synopsys tools synthesize LSI Logic's NDL (Netlist Description Language) from VHDL source code, producing optimized logic under the control of the Silicon 1076 synthesis manager.

Silicon 1076, announced at the 1990 Design Automation Conference, is the first comprehensive ''Concept-to-Silicon'' VHDL design environment to enable top-down design of complex Application Specific Integrated Circuits (ASICs) and Application Specific Standard Products (ASSPs).

The coupling of Synopsys' VHDL synthesis technology with LSI Logic's Silicon 1076 promotes an integrated methodology, beginning with high-level design capture and going through physical layout of the completed chip. This significantly speeds system time-to-market for complex high-performance integrated circuits.

Silicon 1076 integrates the following major functions:

- Architectural what-if analysis
- Interactive behavioral synthesis
- VHDL synthesis from Synopsys
- VHDL simulation from Vantage Analysis Systems
- Design verification

o Release to manufacturing

Through integration of these modules, Silicon 1076 provides significant productivity enhancement over other conventional design methodologies.

Synopsys Inc. develops and markets high-level systems simulation and synthesis tools for designing ASICs and electronic systems. The Synopsys tools support VHDL and Verilog for HDL-based design.

Synopsys is the market leader in synthesis, one of the fastest growing segments in the electronic design automation market, with installations in over 150 companies worldwide. The company has headquarters at 1098 Alta Ave., Mountain View, CA 94043.

LSI Logic Corp. is a leading supplier of high-performance semiconductors. The company is the premier manufacturer and marketer of HCMOS application-specific integrated circuits (ASICs), with over 10,000 designs completed worldwide.

In addition, the company manufactures and markets MIPS and SPARC architecture RISC microprocessors as well as a growing line of digital signal-processing circuits. The company also develops and sells chipsets and graphic boards used in IBM-compatible computers.

CUPERTINO, CA (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Gene M. Amdahl, chairman and president of Andor International, announced Wednesday the following management appointments to the organization:

Len Duncan is president of Andor America, the sales and marketing subsidiary of Andor International. Len has over 20 years experience in the systems industry, most recently, from 1976 to 1990 as vice president of systems integration with Hitachi Data Systems, previously National Advanced Systems. Prior experience also included six years marketing experience with IBM.

Dave Hansen will be joining the organization as president of Andor Products Inc., the manufacturing subsidiary of Andor International. Dave has a broad background in the computer systems industry that includes 13 years with IBM and 12 years in manufacturing management with Amdahl. Recent experience also included four years as vice president of manufacturing for the Teradata Corp.

In addition, the company announced that James K. Dutton was recently appointed to the Andor International board of directors. Dutton is currently a director of Caere Corp., System Industries and Elxsi Ltd. Previous business experience included being vice president of marketing for Amdahl from 1975 to 1979, which followed a 20 year career at IBM in a wide range of marketing and general management positions.

The company also announced that it had signed a contract with Dave N. Martin as an advisor to the company. Martin was previously executive vice president of National Semiconductor and president of National Advanced Systems. He is currently engaged in his own business of providing strategic direction and decision-making support to chief executives of selected companies.

Andor International is engaged in the design, manufacturing and worldwide marketing of a full line of IBM compatible systems products utilizing large scale technology, office systems environmentals and specific applications in the disaster avoidance and recovery markets.

SAUSALITO, CA (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Autodesk Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:ACAD) Wednesday announced that it will make FLI files produced by its MS-DOS-based 2D and 3D animation programs accessible under the multimedia extensions to the Microsoft Windows graphical environment announced Wednesday by Microsoft Corp.

Autodesk is currently developing a Windows player that will allow FLI animation files created in Autodesk Animator or Autodesk 3D Studio to be played back in a window under Windows 3.0. The Autodesk Windows Player is implemented as a Dynamic Link Library (DLL), which means it can be accessed by other Windows 3.0 applications, including multimedia authoring tools.

If used with the multimedia extensions to Windows 3.0, the Autodesk Windows Player will allow the simultaneous playback of digitized sound and FLI animation files. The final product can then be played back from any mass-storage device -- including magnetic, optical or CD-ROM discs -- allowing inexpensive, 286-based computers without large amounts of RAM to become powerful, multimedia computers.

Autodesk will make the Autodesk Windows Player available to qualified developers in first quarter 1991.

Since its introduction in 1989, Autodesk Animator has won several industry awards for bringing two-dimensional animation to 286-based IBM PCs (or compatibles), equipped only with a Video Graphics Array (VGA) card and a pointing device.

Just last month, Autodesk began shipping its newest animation package, which makes creation of three-dimensional, studio-quality animation possible on a more advanced desktop platform: the 386- and 486-based PC.

Autodesk 3D Studio creates 3D objects and uses them to generate images and animations on 386- and 486-based machines running MS-DOS, Version 3.3 or later and equipped with a hard disk, math coprocessor, pointing device and 3 megabytes of RAM.

Autodesk 3D Studio outputs three-dimensional FLI files, which can be played either on any machine capable of running Autodesk Animator, or the Autodesk Windows Player.

Autodesk 3D Studio, the award-winning Autodesk Animator, and the expanding line of Autodesk Animator Clips are the first offerings from Autodesk's Multimedia Division. Formed this August, the new division will grow this introductory product line into a complete suite of multimedia software tools.

Autodesk Inc. develops, markets and supports a family of computer-aided design engineering and animation software products for desktop computers and workstations.

SANTA ANA, CALIF (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Novadyne Computer Systems Inc. Wednesday announced an exclusive value-added service for Tandem customers called Remote Monitoring.

Remote Monitoring is a proprietary, proactive diagnostic system that regularly dials into the customer's computer system and identifies potential problems. The procedure consists of establishing communication with the customer's central processing unit, reviewing its recent error status and reporting anomalies to the local field service manager.

The advantage of Remote Monitoring is that it improves systems utilization and productivity by enabling scheduled repairs to be made before problems develop. When anomalies are detected, the designated Novadyne field service manager is alerted and proactive maintenance service is arranged, minimizing the impact on information processing operations.

John Swarbrick, director of sales and marketing, says that Remote Monitoring is beneficial to the company and its customers. ''This service is very useful because it helps to predict failures before they actually happen. It is also cost-effective since problems can be corrected at the customers' convenience, not during an emergency situation,'' he said.

Novadyne Computer Systems is a total-solution field service company delivering national on-site maintenance from more than 125 field offices to Tandem, DEC and Sun end users.

Novadyne's products and services are marketed to companies in all facets of commerce including aerospace, retailing, transportation, distribution, communications, health care, educational organizations and federal and local government agencies. Revenues exceeded $100 million in 1989.

DALLAS (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Ormand Industries Inc. (ASE:OMD) Wednesday reported that the Securitites and Exchange Commission has initiated an investigation into the financial data released by the company in connection with its recent acquisition of IOI Acquisition Corp. (a medical equipment and supplies concern based in Florida).

Such investigation concerns the existence of the accounting firm which purportedly conducted the 1989 audit of the financial statements of IOI Acquisition Corp. (''IOI'') and, as a consequence, the accuracy of such financial statements. The company included such financial statements in or as a part of recent filings made by the company with the Securities and Exchange Commission including the company's Form 8-K dated as of June 19, 1990, and the company's Form 10-Q for the second quarter of 1990.

IOI was acquired in June 1990 from M.K. Alexander, a director of the company and Robert B. Crows, formerly a director and president of the company, as a result of the IOI transaction Messrs. Alexander and Crows became the two largest shareholders of the company owning together in excess of 50 percent of the voting securities of the company.

Trading in the company's common stock on the American Stock Exchange (''Amex'') was halted on Nov. 21, 1990, pending a full evaluation by the Amex of the matters discussed in this press release and the company's continued listing eligibility. There is no certainty if or when the Amex will allow trading to resume with respect to the company's common stock or whether the Amex will permit continued listing of the company's common stock.

The company stated that it has agreed with Alexander and Crows that the company will return the stock of IOI to Alexander and Crows and that the company will reacquire from them all of the company's capital stock issued in connection with the IOI acquisition. One million shares of the company's common stock and three million shares of the company's preferred stock were issued by the company to Alexander and Crows. In connection with this transaction, Crows has resigned from all positions as an officer and director of the company.

The company also announced that litigation has been filed against the company in Indianapolis in connection with $1,600,000 of promissory notes allegedly executed by Crows on behalf of the company to Robert Fitzgerald. The company has not yet been served in such proceedings.

The company indicated that it is uncertain as to when it will be able to release its financial results for the third quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990. The company further stated that recision of the IOI transaction will significantly adversely impact the company's stockholder's equity and will impair its ability to continue as a going concern.

ST. JOSEPH, MO (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Dwight V. Svuba has been elected to the new position of vice president-power supply for St. Joseph Light & Power Co., Terry F. Steinbecker, president, said Wednesday.

Svuba, who joined Light & Power in 1966, has been serving as director of system power operations. The board of directors elected him to a vice presidential position at its Nov. 28 meeting.

Steinbecker said that action is the result of the company's internal restructuring. For the last several months, Svuba has been reporting directly to the president in his responsibilities of heading production and generation planning functions at Light & Power.

Steinbecker said the reorganization of the company also has resulted in changing the title of Ralph B. Mayer from vice president- operations to vice president-engineering and construction.

The company has two other vice presidents, Robert L. Slater, administration, and Larry J. Stoll, finance.

During his 24-year career, he also has served as chief engineer, superintendent of system operations and manager, system operations and planning. He was named young engineer of the year in 1974 by the Northwest chapter of the Missouri Society of Professional Engineers.

A graduate of Iowa State University with a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering, Svuba also earned a master's degree in electrical engineering from the University of Missouri-Columbia. He is a registered professional engineer in Missouri.

Svuba and his wife, Sharon, are the parents of two sons, Douglas and Matthew.

ENGLEWOOD, COLO (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - CHATFIELD DEAN & CO. INC., a Denver-based securities broker-dealer, announced Wednesday that it has taken over control of another broker-dealer, THE STUART-JAMES CO. INC.

By terms of a management agreement effective after the close of business yesterday, Chatfield Dean is handling all of Stuart-James' brokerage activities and overseeing shut down of the company.

Sanford D. Greenberg, Chatfield Dean's president, said, ''Stuart-James' customers are now fully protected and can be confident that their investment needs will be met at Chatfield Dean.'' Some Stuart-James customers have been concerned that Stuart-James might have to be liquidated by the Securities Investor Protection Corp. (SIPC) and their accounts frozen.

''This takeover of Stuart-James removes any threat of SIPC liquidation,'' Greenberg said.

The transaction also avoids delays caused by the need for regulatory approval of new Chatfield Dean branch offices in Florida. ''We have been advised that application to the Florida Comptroller's Office is not needed when one broker-dealer takes over another,'' Greenberg said. Chatfield Dean began operating Stuart-James' former offices in Tampa, Fla., Clearwater, Fla., and Boca Raton, Fla., this morning.

In addition to the Florida offices, Chatfield Dean now has offices in Denver; Chicago; San Diego; Seattle; Darien, Conn.; Bethesda, Md.; Roslyn, N.Y.; Atlanta; and Irvine, Calif.

Greenberg stressed that his company will not be involved in the ''penny stocks'' handled by Stuart-James. ''Our company offers investors safe, conservative investments appropriate to fixed income customers, discount brokerage services where the customer can talk to a broker instead of a clerk, professional portfolio management, and investment opportunities in capital formation for sound ongoing companies,'' Greenberg said.

SAN DIEGO (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Sym-Tek Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:SYMK) Wednesday announced that it has received an order worth $2.8 million from a major Pacific Rim semiconductor manufacturer for handlers capable of testing up to 32 semiconductors at one time.

This capacity represents a doubling of the current 16 test sites per handler and allows greater throughput for the final test process.

These handlers are slated for delivery in the first quarter of 1991 and are designed for the next-generation 4 megabyte Dynamic Random Access Memory (DRAM) chips expected to be in full production by the second quarter of 1991.

''By listening to our customers and incorporating innovative design features into this new handler, we won the order over stiff Japanese competition,'' said Bruce O'Connor, executive vice president, ''This order begins Sym-Tek's shift to the next generation of memory handler technology.''

''As the semiconductor industry begins to gear up for the 4 megabyte DRAM, we expect that this handler will lead Sym-Tek to even better financial performance than has been experienced recently,'' added Ray Twigg, president.

Sym-Tek recently reported that net income for the six months ended Sept. 30, 1990, was $678,000 (46 cents per share), compared with net income of $230,000 (15 cents per share), for the first six months of the previous fiscal year.

The quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, was the company's sixth profitable quarter in a row, the company's longest continued level of profitability since the third quarter of 1987.

Sym-Tek Systems manufactures and sells electromechanical handlers that heat or cool integrated circuits to precise temperatures, place them into position for testing and sort them based on test results. The market for the company's products is driven by worldwide capacity increases for semiconductors as well as the continually changing packages that house integrated circuits.

PROVO, UT (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Novell Inc., (NASDAQ:NOVL) developer of NetWare systems software products, Wednesday announced that a Spanish court has ruled that Computer Technology de Espana, S.A., a Madrid-based software development firm, violated Novell's intellectual property rights by copying NetWare and marketing it as a networking program called CompNet.

The court concluded that CompNet had been copied directly from Novell's Advanced NetWare, one of the company's network operating system products.

''Spanish software copyright laws are among the best in the world, but cases such as this continue to proliferate,'' said Robert Holleyman, managing director of the Business Software Alliance (BSA), an industry advocacy group formed to advance free and fair software trade worldwide.

''We applaud this decision and commend Novell for taking a decisive leadership role in this matter.'' Software piracy and copyright infringement cost the Spanish economy nearly $800 million in 1989 alone, according to BSA statistics.

In rendering its decision in the Novell case, the Court of First Instance, Civil 14, Madrid, barred Computer Technology de Espana from continuing to sell CompNet.

In addition, the court required the company to turn over all copies of the product in stock and ordered an accounting of all revenue derived from CompNet sales to determine damages. The court has prohibited the software developer from further ''manufacturing, marketing or business retailing'' of the CompNet product.

Novell Senior Vice President and General Counsel David Bradford expressed satisfaction with the verdict. ''Novell has mounted an aggressive, ongoing campaign to identify and prosecute cases of software piracy and copyright infringement,'' he said.

''We're encouraged by this decision, and we intend to continue protecting our intellectual property rights whenever and wherever they are threatened.

''In addition to affecting Novell financially, cases of this nature hurt our distribution channels and, most significantly, users who unwittingly buy inferior products,'' Bradford added. ''Customers deserve a fully functional, fully documented, fully supported product. They're certainly not going to get that when they buy pirated software.''

Novell was first alerted to the similarities between NetWare and CompNet in 1988 by Keylan S.A., a Barcelona-based distributor of Novell products. Novell subsequently conducted an internal review to disassemble and compare the two programs.

This review identified several specific areas in which NetWare and CompNet codes were identical, including the basic NetWare kernel, security schemes, file structure implementation, cache algorithms, and some user utilities.

Based on these findings, Novell filed suit in 1989 against Computer Technology de Espana in Spanish civil court seeking damages for copyright infringement and an injunction against further sales of CompNet.

During the trial, a court-appointed software expert confirmed Novell's own comparative analysis. On Sept. 15, 1990, the court ruled in Novell's favor. Final disposition of the case is pending appeal.

Novell Inc. develops NetWare systems software products that manage and control the sharing of data across a variety of network computing environments, including computer workgroups, departmental networks and business-wide information systems.

BASKING RIDGE, NJ (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Science Management Corp.

(AMEX:SMG) Wednesday announced that results for the first nine months of 1990 included sales from continuing operations of $42,122,000 compared with the sales of $49,679,000 for the same period of 1989.

A loss after taxes from continuing operations of $1,611,000, or 57 cents per share was incurred in the period compared with a loss of $952,000, or 34 cents per share in the 1989 months.

The loss from continuing operations before taxes was $936,000 in the 1990 nine months vs. a loss of $474,000 in the 1989 period. Income tax expense resulted from Foreign and State Income taxes payable on profitable operations. The company had an after tax loss from discontinued operations of $1,247,000, or 44 cents per share in the 1990 nine month period in comparison to a loss of $290,000, or 10 cents per share in the 1989 nine months. The third quarter and nine months of 1990 also include an estimated loss of $750,000, or 27 cents per share, on the pending disposal of a discontinued business, the sale of which is being negotiated.

SMC further announced that the company has engaged in the investment banking firm of Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc. to assist the company in a strategic review of available options regarding financing and opportunities to increase shareholder value.

In making these announcements, James A. Skidmore Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of SMC said, ''continuing operations showed a loss in the third quarter this year because of lower sales in management services in North America, computer systems operations and mechanical design engineering services, as well as seasonal effects on European operations due to the usual heavy vacation period there in the third quarter. While markets for our domestic management consulting and computer services continue to be affected by the declining economic conditions, we expect improvement in SMC's results in the fourth quarter primarily due to engineering and management services operations,'' Skidmore concluded.

NASHVILLE, TN (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - James W. Egan, executive vice president and chief financial officer of REN Corporation-USA (NASDAQ/NMS:RENL) Wednesday announced that the company has retained KPMG Peat Marwick as its new independent accountants following the resignation of Price Waterhouse effective Nov. 20, 1990.

Commenting on the change in accountants, Egan said: ''We chose KPMG Peat Marwick as REN's new accountants because of their extensive experience in auditing companies in the health care industry. Their selection follows a thorough review by our Audit Committee of the capabilities of several national accounting firms.''

The Securities and Exchange Commission requires that a change in independent accountants be reported in a Form 8-K. In the company's filing with the SEC, REN stated that ''there were no disagreements with Price Waterhouse regarding any matters of accounting principles or practices, financial statement disclosures, or auditing scope or procedures'' during fiscal 1988, 1989 and for the period Jan. 1, 1990 through Nov. 20, 1990.

During this time frame, the reports of Price Waterhouse did not contain an adverse opinion or a disclaimer of opinion, and were not qualified or modified as to uncertainty, audit scope or accounting principles. In addition, there were no ''reportable events'' as defined in Item 304(a)(1)(v) of Regulation S-K under the Securities Act of 1933.

REN Corporation-USA is engaged primarily in providing renal dialysis services to patients suffering from chronic kidney failure. Dialysis services are provided principally at the company's 27 freestanding outpatient REN Centers located in ten states.

The company also provides outpatient dialysis services to patients in their homes and inpatient dialysis services through contracts with 20 hospitals. In addition, the company performs blood, tissue and urine testing services for its REN Centers, as well as for independent physicians and industry, at its three clinical laboratories.

EVANSVILLE, IN (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Shareholders of Warrick Financial Corp., the single-bank holding company for Warrick National Bank of Boonville, Ind., have voted unanimously in favor of a merger with Old National Bancorp (NASDAQ:OLDB), and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency has issued its approval for completion of the company's third merger of the year.

With $95 million in assets, Warrick National Bank is Warrick County's largest bank. The bank's main office in Boonville, and two full-service offices in nearby Newburgh will become branches of Old National Bancorp in Evansville in mid-December.

Old National Bancorp recently consummated two other bank mergers, bringing Security Bank and Trust Co. of Mt. Carmel, Ill., and Farmers Bank & Trust Co. of Henderson, Ky., into its three-state regional holding company.

Old National Bancorp Chairman Dan W. Mitchell, said: ''All three of these new partnerships represent opportunities to take advantage of already existing strength in their respective communities. The three mergers add approximately $330 million to total company assets, and we expect an annual earnings contribution that should easily exceed $3 million.''

Completion of the mergers in Warrick County, Henderson, Ky., and Mt. Carmel, Ill., brings the total Old National Bancorp assets to nearly $2.6 billion. With the new affiliate locations, the company will have 68 bank offices in Indiana, Kentucky and Illinois.

TORONTO (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Central Crude Ltd. (ToSE/VcSE:CLC) reported that Noranda Exploration Company Ltd., the company's operator, has reported a further 21 diamond drill holes completed on the company's Moss Lake project located some 80 km west of Thunder Bay, Ontario.

The Moss Lake project is a joint venture, 60/40 between the company and Tandem Resources Ltd. and Storimin Exploration Ltd. The company is attempting to establish the economic viability of a large tonnage low-grade gold, copper and silver open pit operation.

The mineralized zone has now been drill indicated for approximately 8,000 feet to date and the current results continue to establish widths of low-grade mineralization in excess of 300 feet to a vertical depth of approximately 600 feet.

Additional assaying and metallurgical testing is continuing to determine recoverable grades of the mineralization. All 21 diamond drill holes reported encountered the mineralization.

CHICAGO (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - FMC Corp. Wednesday announced the sale of its 1.35 million shares of Centocor Inc. for a price of $45 per share.

Centocor is a biotechnology company with products and research based on monoclonal antibody technology.

FMC received the shares in 1986 in exchange for its interest in a research and development biotechnology joint venture with Centocor. The sale of the shares will generate $61 million in pre-tax cash flow for FMC, and an after-tax gain of $16+million, or $0.45 per share. It is anticipated that part of this gain will be offset by charges related to a softening economy.

According to Robert H. Malott, FMC chairman and chief executive officer, ''Although the Centocor shares represented a successful financial investment for FMC, the association did not contribute strategically to our core businesses.''

FMC Corp., headquartered in Chicago, is one of the world's leading producers of machinery and chemicals for industry, government and agriculture. The company operates 88 manufacturing and mine facilities in 24 states and 21 foreign countries. The company divides its businesses into five major segments: Industrial Chemicals, Performance Chemicals, Precious Metals, Defense Systems, and Machinery and Equipment.

PORTLAND, OR (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Peripheral Systems Inc. announced plans at its Nov. 27 annual shareholders' meeting to restructure its operations in order to provide necessary working capital.

Ralph E. Carp, who became president of Peripheral at the end of July, told shareholders that Peripheral and its subsidiaries, TriSys, Peak Beam and Nucell will all need cash infusions.

Carp further stated that Peripheral's other subsidiary, X-Ray, cannot generate sufficient cash to support all of these subsidiary and parent corporation cash needs.

At the annual meeting, shareholders elected a new board of directors, consisting of Carp, Clifford Sawyer (president of Nucell) and Barry Hulin.

Management and the new board of Peripheral do not believe that an equity offering is feasible at this time. Immediate cost cutting measures have been implemented, but will not provide the required working capital. Accordingly, Carp advised that Peripheral has undertaken a restructuring program whereby it will divest the TriSys and Peak Beam subsidiaries.

In addition, parent company staff will be reduced significantly and the corporate offices of Peripheral will be relocated to the facilities of X-Ray at 7500 Perimeter Road, Seattle, Wash., 98108, telephone number 206/763-1919.

Finally, the board is considering available alternatives for X-Ray and Nucell. These alternatives include the sale of X-Ray and use of those proceeds to fund the development of Nucell.

Carp concluded by stating that ''the economic realities are that the resources required to continue to own and operate all of the companies are too great, and we are faced with making some hard choices. Based on market potential, management and the board believe the company's future should focus on X-Ray or Nucell or, if possible, both.''

MILPITAS, Calif. (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - System Industries Inc. (ASE:SYI) Wednesday announced that it had received initial funding under its new $8 million revolving line of credit with CoastFed Business Credit Corp. and Silicon Valley Bank.

This line is secured by substantially all of the North American assets of the company.

The initial funding allows the company to fully extinguish the outstanding amounts for the company's existing bank line of credit, to pay down a substantial portion of debt owing under the convertible subordinated notes that had previously matured and will provide funds for the company's general working capital needs.

''This financing package positions the company well for its growth requirements in 1991,'' said Paul Emery, the company's chief executive officer. ''We are enthusiastic about our new relationship with Silicon Valley Bank and CoastFed Corporation,'' he said.

It is also anticipated that future drawdowns on the line, to the extent permitted under the financing, will provide additional funds for the company's general working capital needs.

The company's convertible subordinated notes, in an aggregate principal amount of $4,850,000 matured on May 23, 1990.

In connection with the payment of approximately 50 percent of the outstanding principal balance of such notes and the issuance of warrants to purchase approximately 205,125 shares of common stock of the company, the holders of substantially all of the notes have formally extended the maturity date with respect to such notes an additional 90 days.

Founded in 1968, System Industries Inc. provides innovative data storage subsystems integrated with comprehensive supporting services for the DEC operating environment.

System Industries' corporate headquarters is located at 1855 Barber Lane, Milpitas, Calif. 95035. For further information, contact Andrew D. Wahl, vice president of finance and chief financial officer, at 408/434-6800, extension 2179.

PHOENIX (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Senior management from Del Webb Corp. (NYSE/PSE:WBB) will address the New York Society of Security Analysts on Wednesday, Nov. 28.

The presentation will take place at noon at 71 Broadway, New York, N.Y. Joining Chairman Philip Dion will be Donald Mickus, vice president and treasurer; John Spencer, vice president and controller; and Jack Gleason, vice president.

Del Webb is the nation's leading developer of active adult communities. The company is primarily engaged in the design, development and marketing of master-planned active adult communities in Arizona, Nevada and California. The company's recently completed restructuring and recapitalization has allowed it to focus its full attention on this business.

Del Webb has 30 years of acknowledged experience in the development of active adult communities whose long-term nature provides a buffer against real estate cycles. The recapitalization of the company has placed it in a position of having significant operational cashflows as well as liquidity from recently restructured bank lines.

Del Webb is a unique company and currently has distinguished itself in today's real estate markets. In view of the general state of the economy, nationwide home-building trends and the weakness of some markets, Del Webb has performed well. Some accomplishments over the past year include:

-- Completing the restructuring which has resulted in improved fundamentals with a primary focus on the development of active adult communities;

-- Earning $1.45 per share in fiscal 1990 (June 30, 1990), compared with a loss of $1.51 in the prior year. This was followed by first-quarter (Sept. 30 1990) earnings of 26 cents per share. The company anticipates continued profitable results from operations for the second quarter and remainder of the fiscal year;

-- Achieving a return on equity of 22 percent in fiscal 1990;

-- Increasing, by 12 percent, sales for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, vs. Sept. 30, 1989;

-- Maintaining the backlog of homes sold but not yet delivered at over 1,000, representing future revenues for Del Webb of over $140 milliion;

-- Acquiring land and starting the entitlement process for a new Sun City project in Palm Springs, Calif.;

-- Conducting property searches in new regions including Texas, the middle Atlantic states and Northern California for future Sun City projects; and

-- Acquiring, at very favorable prices, new acreage to expand the Sun City West project.

Del Webb is the leading developer of active adult communities in the United States.

SEATTLE (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Barden ''Bud'' Erickson, Nordstrom vice president and corporate director of store planning will retire from the company on Monday, Dec. 3.

Erickson has been with Nordstrom in the position since 1976.

Erickson's contributions to Nordstrom and to architecture in the retail industry have been significant. Since taking the helm of the store planning division, Erickson has supervised the design and construction of 59 of the company's 63 stores. Many of the concepts the company has introduced have been adapted by other major retailers including Nordstrom's more open shopping atmosphere utilizing the escalators as a focal point.

In an industry not traditionally known for its innovative architecture, Erickson has helped Nordstrom become a pacesetter among major retailers. Working with the Callison Partnership staff, Erickson and his team have demanded that each store be unique, reflecting the flavor of the local community.

Recent stores opening in Paramus, N.J., Santa Barbara, Calif., and San Francisco have received recognition for their integration of state-of-the-art features such as the lighting systems and custom furnishings combined with unparalleled customer amenities like comfortable seating lounges, concierge desks and piano galleries.

Erickson is quick to point out that his intent has always been to ''design stores for the public, not for the approval of other architects. It is this commitment to detail that best demonstrates the company's sensitivity to customers and their needs.''

A Seattle native, Erickson attended Roosevelt High School and went on to graduate from the University of Washington School of Architecture. Prior to joining Nordstrom, Erickson was one of the founding partners in the architectural firm of Callison-Erickson-Hobble, the firm that eventually became The Callison Partnership.

Upon retirement, Erickson plans to devote more time to his favorite hobbies including golf, writing and painting.

Erickson will be replaced by David Lindsey, president of The Callison Partnership, the firm which has worked with Nordstrom to design all of their new stores.

WALLINGFORD, CONN. (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - NOVAMETRIX MEDICAL SYSTEMS INC. (NASDAQ/NMS Symbol: NMTX) Wednesday announced results for the second quarter and six month period ended October 28, 1990.

Revenues for the quarter ended October 28, 1990 were $4,282,808 compared to $2,337,505 reported for the second quarter of fiscal 1990. The Company reported a net loss for the quarter of $551,693, or $0.14 per share, compared to a net loss of $7,965,863, or $2.10 per share, reported for the quarter ended October 29, 1989.

For the six month period revenues were $8,310,653 compared to $8,372,918 reported for the comparable six months of fiscal 1990. The Company reported a net loss of $1,805,901, or $0.45 per share, compared to a net loss of $8,692,327, or $2.30 per share, reported for the six months ended October 29, 1989.

In commenting on the results for the quarter, William J. Lacourciere, President and Chief Operating Officer, stated, ''We experienced a modest improvement in revenues of 8% during the second quarter as compared to our first fiscal quarter. However, losses for the second quarter decreased by more than 50% through the reduction of expenses. Losses would have been reduced more significantly were it not for better than anticipated utilization of completed inventory, resulting in excess manufacturing capacity.''

Lacourciere continued, ''We are pleased to report an overall improvement in sales and, in particular, that this increase has been experienced worldwide and across the entire product line.''

NOVAMETRIX MEDICAL SYSTEMS INC. is a leading designer, developer, manufacturer and marketer of medical electronic instruments which non-invasively and continuously assess a critically ill patient's oxygen and carbon dioxide status. The Company's products are primarily used in operating rooms, intensive care units and respiratory therapy departments.

DALLAS (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - CYBERTEK Corp. (NASDAQ:CKCP) announced Wednesday the annual release of new enhancements and features for its CK4 system.

CK4 provides processing support for individual life, health and annuity policies from initial sale, through the life of the contract.

CYBERTEK makes this major release on an annual basis to keep the system current with regulatory reporting changes and new product innovations. With these planned, coordinated releases, CYBERTEK clients can be sure that their businesses stay one step ahead of new regulations, new technology such as imaging and expert systems and new insurance products that enter the marketplace.

Since 1984 CYBERTEK has provided this important annual release through its Strategic Business Support (SBS) Services group, which consists of an alliance of CYBERTEK clients formed to help direct future development of the CK4 system.

This type of cooperative effort also eliminates the need for clients to devote costly resources to in-house development. For the sixth straight year, CYBERTEK has met the scheduled release date for the functional and technical enhancements to improve the CK4 system.

CYBERTEK devoted in excess of $3.5 million to provide this annual release to its customers. Over 25 employees were dedicated to the research, development, testing and installation of this year's release. In addition, the Quality Assurance Program, a CYBERTEK user-type employee group, tests each release in a live environment to ensure that each client receives a fully tested system and the updates for the comprehensive user and technical documentation which accompany it.

All of the 1990 enhancements will be on display at the Release Preview Meeting to be held on Nov. 29, 1990, at the CYBERTEK INFOMART location in Dallas.

This is a user and technical forum for SBS Services clients that previews both the technical and the functional enhancements at one time.

For over 20 years, CYBERTEK has pioneered the development of real-time computer systems and software programs designed to increase productivity for customers. CYBERTEK is traded over the counter on the NASDAQ National Market System.

MIAMI (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Noven Pharmaceuticals Inc. (NASDAC:NOVN), announced Tuesday that it has developed a new dental anesthetic delivery system for the alleviation of pain without the administration of injections.

The Transoral Mucosal Anesthetic product, which resembles a small wafer, can be placed in the oral cavity for delivery of a dental anesthetic. Noven has conducted extensive in-vitro studies and is confident that the product will provide a substantial numbing effect after being applied for approximately five minutes.

Noven's Transoral Mucosal Anesthetic Delivery System should effectively provide local anesthesia for light fillings, cleanings, injection sites, and a wide variety of soft tissue dental procedures.

Billy Beal, executive vice president of Marketing and Sales for Noven said, ''Today in the United States there are approximately 150,000 practicing dentists who provide upwards of one million injections per day in order to obtain local anesthesia.

''For the many dental patients who fear needles and the pain of injections this new product should provide a level of comfort and relief that is currently unavailable. The huge market potential and the apparent need for this unique product makes it one that should be enthusiastically accepted by both patients and dentists.''

Commenting on the regulatory status of the product, Steven Sablotsky, chairman of the board and president of Noven said, ''We will be filing an IND (Investigational New Drug) application with the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) very shortly and we anticipate beginning human clinical trials in the first half of 1991.

''A New Drug Application (NDA) could be filed with the FDA in mid to late 1991.''

Noven Pharmaceuticals Inc. is engaged in the development and manufacture of transdermal delivery systems. Transdermal systems move drugs or other substances through the skin and into the bloodstream. The many benefits of transdermal drug delivery include controlled delivery for a finite period, improved patient compliance and the avoidance of problems associated with oral drug delivery.

GREENWICH, CONN. (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - The board of directors of Stolt Tankers and Terminals (Holdings) S.A. (NASDAQ:STLTF) has declared a semiannual cash dividend of 30 cents per common share, matching the previous dividend paid last July.

This dividend will be paid Jan. 18, 1991, to shareholders of record as of Dec. 28, 1990.

''In the first nine months of 1990, we have achieved earnings from operations of $38.8 million or $1.44 per share, which is a little lower than in the same period last year.

''The fourth quarter appears to be strong as a result of the very active parcel tanker market resulting from the Persian Gulf crisis,'' said John H. Blankley, the company's chief financial officer.

Blankley added, ''The fall of our share price appears to us to have no basis relative to the state of the business of the company.''

Stolt Tankers and Terminals (Holdings) S.A. is an international transportation company specializing in the distribution of bulk liquids, both by land and sea.

The company operates worldwide, with 21 offices in 12 countries. Stolt-Nielsen provides distribution services among most maritime countries with its combination of transoceanic and coastal parcel tankers; door-to-door intermodal tank container service throughout the world, combined with tank container leasing; five regional storage and distribution centers in the United States, Northwest Europe and Brazil; as well as barges, railcars and tank trucks.

MENLO PARK, CA (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - ETAK Inc., a unit of News Corp., reported that General Motors Corp. has amended the Patent License and Technology Agreement between the two companies to allow ETAK to make its navigation technology available to other automakers building and selling cars in North America.

This option was part of the 1985 agreement that gave GM exclusive North American OEM rights to ETAK's dead reckoning and map-matching technology for in-vehicle navigation. All other aspects of the agreement, which continues in force until expiration of ETAK's patents, remain essentially unchanged. In addition, GM intends to purchase from ETAK the digitized maps it requires.

Honey noted that with GM's encouragement from the outset, ETAK has licensed its map database both to commercial users and to other U.S. automakers for development of their own in-vehicle navigation systems.

Now covering 75 percent of the country's metropolitan roads, ETAK's maps have become a virtual standard, in wide everyday use by truck fleets for routing and scheduling, by dispatch centers for public safety and emergency vehicles, and by utilities for facilities management.

Using ETAK's navigation technology, GM helped to launch Pathfinder, an experiment of intelligent vehicle highway systems (IVHS) now underway in Los Angeles.

In the test, each of 25 Oldsmobiles is equipped with a Travelpilot, a navigation system manufactured by Robert Bosch GmbH under license from ETAK.

The Travelpilot displays an electronic map on a CRT in the car. A radio link permits congested areas ahead to be shown on the display, allowing the driver to navigate around the blockage.

ETAK technology is also playing a key role in TravTek, a larger, more ambitious IVHS experiment planned for Orlando, Fla., in 1992. A hundred GM cars, 75 of which will be rental units, will use ETAK's digital map data and technology for navigation. This will be supplemented with AAA's business listings and digital maps for driver information.

Other ETAK licensees are Clarion Corp., in Japan and Asia, and Robert Bosch in Europe. GM's Delco Electronics, which works directly with ETAK, is the world's largest manufacturer of automotive sound systems, followed by Clarion, the second largest, and Bosch, the third.

READING, PA (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Sovereign Bancorp Inc. (NASDAQ:SVRN), the parent company of Penn Savings Bank and Yardley Bank for Savings, ranked 20th in the nation of best-performing large thrifts, according to a United States Banker survey released in November 1990.

The ranking was based on a formula which considered quality and total sizes of assets, reserves for loan losses, non-performing loans, tangible equity, return on assets and return on equity.

Jay S. Sidhu, president and chief executive officer of Sovereign, attributed this ranking to the company's philosophy of ''doing a few things right.'' For the past four years, Sovereign's subsidiaries have been focused on core consumer banking -- primarily serving the homeowners market.

Six specific characteristics of Sovereign's strategy have been turned into working objectives which management refers to as its ''Six Critical Factors of Success.'' They include high asset quality, low interest rate risk, high volumes of adjustable rate loan originations, low overhead, excellence in sales and service and staff development.

''We believe that if we can continue to succeed in instituting these characteristics, in time we will be acknowledged as an outstanding financial institution,'' said Sidhu. ''We are very pleased with the U.S. Banker survey rating,'' he continued.

Sovereign stock is traded on the NASDAQ Over-the-Counter Market System as SVRN. The closing price on Tuesday, Nov. 27, was $9.

ENGLEWOOD, CO (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Nu-West Industries Inc. (NASDAQ:FERT) announced it has received a $3.5 million senior subordinated term loan from certain affiliates on Nov. 23, 1990, and it has filed an appeal of the $2.1 million judgement in Clarendon vs. Nu-West Industries Inc.

The company stated that the proceeds of the new long-term loan will be used to collateralize a $2.3 million bond required for the appeal of the Clarendon litigation and will provide additional working capital to enable the company to pursue the diversification of its Conda, Idaho operations through a potential joint venture for the development of mineral extraction technologies.

The $3.5 million senior subordinated secured term loan from affiliates of Weiss, Peck and Greer bears interest at a fixed rate of 15 percent, payable quarterly, and the prinicpal is payable at a maturity on Oct. 1, 1994.

The lenders received warrants to purchase 2.5 million shares of common stock, exercisable beginning in April 1992 and expiring 10 years from the date of the loan.

The initial exercise price of the warrants is 5 cents per share, increasing by 5 cents per share during each twelve months after November 1992.

The lenders have the option of receiving common stock in lieu of cash for interest payments due after the first four quarters of the loan based on the fair market value of the common stock on the interest payment date.

Additionally, the lenders have the option to convert the prinicpal of the loan to common stock based on the fair market value of the common stock at the maturity date.

Nu-West is engaged in the manufacture and sale of phosphate fertilizer products.

CHESTNUT HILL, MA (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Designs Inc. (NASDAQ:DESI), operator of specialty retail stores that sell exclusively Levi Strauss & Co. clothing and accessories, announced Wednesday its financial results for the third quarter ended Oct. 27, 1990.

Sales for the quarter rose to $35.6 million, compared with $23.8 million a year ago, a 50 percent increase. For the first nine months of the fiscal year sales were $80.3 million compared with $51.1 million, representing an increase of 57 percent. Comparable store sales, those 58 stores open a full fiscal year, increased 9 percent for the quarter and 12 percent for the year to date.

Gross margin rate (including the costs of occupancy) remained stable at 31 percent for the quarter and 28 percent for the first nine months of the fiscal year compared with the same periods last year. This performance is very encouraging in the current competitive market place and was made possible by the continued favorable impact the stronger sales have had on our fixed occupancy costs as a percent to sales.

Net income for the quarter was $1.6 million, or 33 cents per share compared with $515,000, or 10 cents per share for the third quarter last year. For the first nine months of the current fiscal year net income was $226,000, or 5 cents per share compared with a net loss of $1.5 million, or 29 cents per share for the comparable period in the prior fiscal year.

In reporting the results, Geoffrey M. Holczer, treasurer and chief financial officer, noted: ''We are very pleased with the results of the third quarter especially when compared with a relatively strong third quarter in the prior fiscal year. This is our third consecutive quarter of increased sales and earnings over comparable periods in the prior year. Looking to the upcoming Holiday season, we feel that we are well positioned to do business in the current environment and we look forward to another quarter of increased sales and earnings.''

Designs Inc.'s 70 traditional stores and 32 outlet stores sell exclusively Levi Strauss & Co. clothing and accessories under the ''Designs exclusively Levi Strauss & Co.'' and ''Specials exclusively Levi's'' names. The stores are located in enclosed regional shopping malls and outlet parks in 26 states throughout the eastern half of the country.

HOUSTON (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Buttes Gas & Oil Co. has reported a loss for the three month period ending Sept. 30, 1990 of $2,276,000 or 3 cents per share compared to a loss of $1,149,000 or 2 cents per share in the third quarter of 1989.

Revenues in the 1990 quarter were $5,844,000 compared with revenues of $5,994,000 in last year's third quarter. A primary reason for the increased net loss in the 1990 quarter was attributable to the agricultural segment, which had a 39 percent decrease in revenues as compared to the 1989 period due to a lower crop yield ($2,021,000 in 1990 compared to $3,306,000 in 1989).

The nine months ending Sept. 30, 1990 reflects a loss of $2,950,000 or 4 cents per share compared to a loss of $1,181,000 or 2 cents per share in the 1989 period. Revenues in the nine month period of 1990 were $12,049,000 compared with revenues of $12,498,000 in 1989. The 1989 periods have been restated to conform to a revised method of accounting for the agricultural segment beginning in 1990.

The company has been advised that the Pacific Stock Exchange authorized trading of the company's common stock to begin on Nov. 5, 1990, under the trading symbol ''BGO''.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - The Company is pleased to announce that:

$2 MILLION FUNDING

The sum of $2 million has been committed to a credit facility for use in connection with the Company's proposed acquisition of Richmond Plywood Corp. Ltd. (''RichPly'').

The monies have been placed under the control of the law firm of Norton Stewart & Scarlett in trust on terms which include their retention until the first to occur of the following:

a/ the Company issuing a press release withdrawing from the Richply acquisition;

b/ completion of the RichPly acquisition; or c/ Jan. 31, 1991, which is the intended closing date of the transaction.

The funds have been provided by William Botham, Jr., a shareholder of the Company who will have the right of final approval of the transaction prior to advance of the funds for the RichPly acquisition.

PRIVATE PLACEMENT

Effective Wednesday, and subject to the requisite regulatory approvals, the Company has negotiated a private placement of 500,000 units (the ''Units'') at a price of $1.50 per Unit, from which the Company will realize $750,000.

Each Unit will consist of one common share and one non-transferable share purchase warrant entitling the holder thereof to purchase one additional common share of the Company at a price of $1.50 per share until Nov. 26, 1991. Upon exercise of the warrants the Company will realize an additional $750,000.

LICENSING AGREEMENT

A dispute has arisen between the Company and Zaba Lee Enterprises Ltd. (''Zaba Lee'') as to the timing of a $100,000 payment claimed due under the licensing agreement governing use of the Isosyl resin within Canada, excepting British Columbia.

It is the position of Zaba Lee that the payment was due Nove. 9, 1990. It is the Company's view that no payments can be made pending prior approval of the contract by the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Zaba Lee gave the Company notice of default with respect to the payment Nov. 21, 1990.

The license agreement provides a period of 30 days from the date of notice after which the license may be terminated at the option of the Licensor. The Company and Zaba Lee are working toward resolution of the dispute within a timely manner.

The Company is current with respect to payments on the contract for use of Isosyl resin within British Columbia.

EL PASO, TEXAS (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Texscan Corporation (NASDAQ:TXCND) Wednesday reported net income of $226,000, or $.10 per share, on revenues of $9,405,000 for the second fiscal quarter ended October 27, 1990.

The company reported net income of $435,000, or $.19 per share, on revenues of $12,483,000 for the three months ended October 28, 1989.

For the six months ended October 27, 1990, Texscan reported net income of $650,000, or $.29 per share, on revenues of $19,490,000, compared with net income of $574,000, or $.25 per share, on revenues of $23,633,000 for the six-month period ended October 28, 1989.

Commenting on the second quarter, Mr. William H. Lambert, Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer noted, ''Our European fiber optic business has been performing well and European cable revenues and earnings are strong; the North American cable television business is very soft. While our market share has remained relatively unchanged, all the North American cable television electronic suppliers have been adversely affected in the current market.''

The company said that as of October 27, 1990, it had more than $9 million in cash and equivalents, a current ratio of 4.5x and stockholders' equity per share of $5.01. Order backlog was approximately $7.6 million, basically unchanged from first quarter levels.

In the second quarter the company adjusted its cost infrastructure, realizing a nearly $1 million annualized reduction in employee expenses.

On October 31, 1990 the company effected a 1-for-5 reverse stock split; per share data for current and prior year reflects this reverse split.

Headquartered in El Paso, Texas, Texscan Corporation (NASDAQ:TXCND) is best known as a designer and manufacturer of a broad line of distribution and commercial insertion electronics for the cable television industry, as well as an integrator of large scale fiber optic systems in Europe.

MCLEAN, VA. (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Unisys Corp.'s Defense Systems unit and Energetics Satellite Corp. have teamed to build and operate a satellite system offering commercial geolocational, messaging and remote equipment-monitoring services.

Unisys revenue from the 10-year, exclusive teaming agreement may exceed $250 million.

The system will provide substantially enhanced inventory management control to companies that own rental cars, railroad cars, trucks, railers, or container and cargo ships. Vehicle or vessel locations can be determined in two minutes and pinpointed within 50 feet for stationary objects. The direction of a moving object can be plotted every four to six minutes.

Additional applications include remote monitoring of utility lines and usage, petrochemical storage tank levels and pipeline flow, and similar field equipment or operations. Individuals could use the messaging service to report roadside or home emergencies and send for help.

Under the agreement just concluded, Unisys will design, develop, install and operate the system's ground stations. The computer corporation also will supply software, hardware and parallel processors for the Satellite Tracking Radiolocation and Communications system, or SAT/TRAC.

''This is the corporation's first commercial space project and one of the first commercial space ventures worldwide,'' said John B. Munson, vice president and general manager of the Unisys Space Systems Division (SSD), the operating unit of Unisys Defense Systems that has responsibility for the program.

Unisys Space Systems Division supplies software products, services and support for Space Shuttle and Space Station operations, Space Station Control Center development, Mission Control Center upgrades, and software product and quality assurance at the Johnson Space Center. The division also provides satellite control and supercomputer systems engineering.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Loral Corp. has announced that Richard W. Koepke has been named a group vice president reporting to Frank C. Lanza, president and chief operating officer of Loral Corp.

In his new position, Koepke will be responsible for four divisions in the company's newly formed Products Group -- Loral Information Display Systems in Atlanta, Ga.; Loral Control Systems, Archbald, Pa.; Loral Hycor, Woburn, Mass. and Loral Rolm Mil-Spec Computers, San Jose, Calif. He will be based in New York City. The four divisions have annual revenues of approximately $150 million, primarily from airborne graphic display systems, instruments and controls for naval vessels, expendable countermeasures and mil-spec and rugged computers.

Koepke, 53, joined Loral in 1981 as vice president and general manager of Loral Electronic Systems in Atlanta. In 1984 Loral Information Display Systems was formed and Koepke was named president. Under his management, LIDS has tripled its annual revenues.

Koepke holds a bachelor's degree in mathematics and science from Memphis State University, as well as a bachelor's degree in aeronautical/mechanical engineering from the Air Force Institute of Technology. He grew up in Memphis Tenn., and spent eight years as an officer in the U.S. Air Force. He currently resides in Big Canoe, Ga., with his wife, Roxanne.

Walter Spuler, 55, vice president of product development for Loral Information Display Systems, will succeed Koepke as president of the division. Prior to joining Loral Corp. in 1985, Spuler spent 15 years with TRW Inc., where he was director of business development and senior program manager.

Spuler holds a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from Northrop Institute of Technology and an MBA from the University of Northern Colorado. He currently resides in Norcross, Ga., with his wife Cynthia.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Drexler Technology Corp. (NASDAQ:DRXR) has received the $9 million front-end cash payment under an optical card manufacturing license agreement announced on Nov. 13.

The nonexclusive, royalty-bearing license agreement was subject to foreign regulatory approvals, which were obtained sooner than anticipated. Drexler also received a $1 million U.S. income tax credit because of the 10 percent Japanese withholding tax on the $10 million license fee.

The company will record the $10 million license revenue in the current third quarter ended Dec. 31, 1990, which will result in a net profit for the quarter and the fiscal year.

The licensee is a new Japanese corporation established by four Japanese companies who last week publicly forecast a $750 million to $1.5 billion worldwide optical memory card market in 1995.

Using this market forecast as a guide, the estimated royalties to Drexler Technology under its seven royalty-bearing licenses could be in the range of $22 million per year in 1995. This royalty estimate assumes that the worldwide market for optical cards and related reader/writers in 1995 would be $750 million at the wholesale level.

The newly licensed company was formed in Japan on Nov. 19, 1990 by Dai Nippon Printing Co. Ltd., Olympus Optical Co. Ltd., Omron Corp. and Nippon Conlux Co. Ltd.

The optical cards will be manufactured by Dai Nippon Printing Co. The other three companies manufacture optical memory card read/write equipment under separate, royalty-bearing licenses from Drexler.

These three companies are expected to commit to major production of reader/writers, which should lower prices of reader/writers and increase their availability, thereby accelerating market expansion.

Drexler's card-related revenues are derived from three business sectors: license fees and royalties; the manufacture of LaserCard optical memory cards; and systems integration and software. The new license is expected to stimulate industry growth, resulting in greater earnings potential for Drexler.

Optical memory cards are credit-card sized data storage devices containing approximately 3 megabytes of digital information that can be written and/or read by computer peripherals. The cards function as a portable information file -- for example, a medical history card carried by patients and updated at doctors' offices.

Drexler Technology Corp. is headquartered in Mountain View. At Sept. 30, 1990 the company had 6,914,615 shares of common stock outstanding.

LOS ANGELES (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Advanced telecommunications facilities and services stimulate the revitalization or rural communities in the United States.

That is the conclusion of a study submitted by the United States Telephone Association to the National Telecommunications and Information Administration (NTIA) on Oct. 30. ''Telecommunications and Rural Economic Development'', prepared by MESA Consulting, examines network modernization initiatives undertaken by independent telephone companies to spur economic development in rural areas.

The study concludes that an advanced telecommunications infrastructure attracts new businesses to rural areas, boosts the competitiveness of firms already located in those areas, and diversifies the economic base of rural communities. Network modernization also enhances the quality of rural life by upgrading local health care, education, and social services.

The USTA study looks at rural telecommunications applications in Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska, Ohio, Tennessee, and other states. In many of these cases independent telephone companies are forming strategic alliances with community groups and state and local institutions to upgrade rural networks to digital capacity.

Spotlighted in the report are efforts by independent telephone consortia in Iowa, Minnesota, and Kansas to construct fiber-optic systems which enable rural users to access a host of sophisticated communications services. Fiber-optic networks are also at the center of efforts by public institutions in Texas and Kansas to provide rural citizens with quality education and health care services via two-way interactive video technology.

Although other countries may be pursuing rural network modernization more aggresively than the United States, the study is optimistic that advanced network facilities and services will soon be widely available to subscribers in rural America. Two factors are key to this process; progressive state regulatory policies that encourage local exchange carriers to provide digital and fiber-optic capabilities in their service areas, and the presence of motivated ''local heroes'' committed to improving their communities. These local heroes share a vision that telecommunications is critical to helping rural communities preserve their treasured lifestyle by overcoming geographic isolation, stemming outmigration, and reversing economic decline.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - The Global Government Plus Fund Inc. - November 1990 Monthly update Investment adviser commentary

- Global bond markets performed extremely well in October, as evidenced by the 4.52 percent return of the Salomon Brothers World Bond Index. The fund, benefitting from its large exposure to Japan, returned 5.30 percent for the month on a gross basis.

- The Federal Reserve eased monetary policy after Congress passed the new budget. In response, the U.S. dollar suffered steep declines against many major currencies, especially the yen. In dollar terms, Japanese bonds returned 12.04 percent for the month.

- Higher interest rates overseas may lead to additional weakness in the U.S. dollar. Accordingly, the fund has underweighted (39.6 percent) U.S. bonds relative to the Salomon World Index weighting of 51.3 percent. Instead, the fund manager favors Canada where lower inflation makes yields more attractive than U.S. yields.

- The fund continues to avoid the German bond market due to the large supply of bonds issued to finance unification. By comparison, the Dutch bond market has attractive yields and does not suffer from an oversupply.

- The fund maintains only a small exposure to the U.K. bond market in light of its high inflation. Despite joining the exchange rate mechanism of the EMS and cutting interest rates, British gilts are not competitive with bonds in continental Europe.

- Ireland and Denmark are high yielding markets that do not suffer from strong inflation and slow growth that plague the U.K.

- The fund adviser has written puts on some bonds and will increase option writing should war become imminent.

- Until the Persian Gulf crisis is resolved, the adviser will exercise caution in view of both exchange-rate and interest-rate risk.

MEXICO D.F. (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Banco Nacional de Comercio Exterior S.N.C. (BANCOMEXT), Mexico's Eximbank, and Barclays Bank PLC (Barclays) Wednesday announced that they have signed an export finance agreement for Barclays to provide funding for the receivables of Mexican companies who export products to the United States, Canada and Puerto Rico.

The facilities will be provided by Barclays' Miami office through a receivables financing arrangement with Barclays Commercial Corp., the bank's factoring subsidiary based in Charlotte, N.C. The announcement was made by Dr. Humberto Soto Rodriguez, director general of BANCOMEXT and Gonzalo Valdes-Fauli, executive vice president, International Banking Group, of Barclays Bank PLC.

The initial amount available under this agreement is U.S. $50 million and additional funds may be made available at a later date.

The facility enables Mexican exporters to receive funding for their term export sales upon presentation of documentation to the Sociedades Nacionales de Credito (S.N.C.s), Mexico's commercial banks.

BANCOMEXT, based in Mexico City, with U.S. $8.8 billion in assets and U.S. $1 billion in capital, is a Mexican credit association and development bank founded on June 8, 1937. It is the Mexican government's coordinating agency in charge of granting promotional and financial support to both the exporters and importers in Mexico.

With 37 promotional foreign offices around the world, BANCOMEXT operates as a wholesale bank through the commercial banks in Mexico.

Headquartered in London, Barclays Bank PLC, which traces its history back to the 17th century, ranks as one of the world's leading banking groups. With U.S. $203 billion in assets and some U.S. $15 billion in capital (year-end 1989), it is one of the few major banking institutions to receive a Triple-A rating from both Standard & Poor's Corp. and Moody's Investors Service.

The bank maintains a network spanning over 70 countries.

Barclays Commercial Corp. was established in 1946. Based in Charlotte, N.C., with regional offices in Dallas; Louisville, Ky.; New York and Los Angeles, it is one of the largest factoring companies in the United States.

WAYNE, NJ (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - American Cyanamid Co. stated Wednesday that a lawsuit filed by Mylan Pharmaceuticals Inc., against Cyanamid's Lederle

Laboratories Division is totally without merit.

The suit, filed on November 20, contends that Lederle had failed to perform certain obligations under its agreement with Myaln involving Maxzide triamterene/hydrochlorothiazide, a leading potassium-sparing diuretic.

Maxzide and its distinctive ''bow tie'' tablet shape are registered trademarks of American Cyanamid Co.

Cyanamid further stated that Mylan's claims are unfounded. Lederle has unequivocally met all contractual obligations to Mylan. The Mylan allegation that Lederle is not maximizing sales of Maxzide - thus limiting its own profit potential - is absurd.

In fact, in its 1988 Annual Report to shareholders, Mylan itself reported that Maxzide ''is enjoying consistent growth and continues to penetrate the SmithKline Dyazide market.''

Lederle's investment in Maxzide has benefitted Mylan greatly, contributing a significant percentage of Mylan's consolidated net sales and profits. Since 1984, Lederle has paid Mylan in excess of $100 million in connection with Maxzide.

Despite generic competition for Maxzide and declining market potential for diuretics generally, Lederle has achieved outstanding results in terms of both net sales and market share.

In fact, in 1990, Maxzide perscription market share has increased while the market demand for diuretics overall continues to decline. Futhermore, generic substitution for Maxzide has decreased in 1990.

Since the Maxzide introduction in November 1984, Lederle Laboratories has invested substantial financial and human resources and expertise to establish Maxzide as a leading potassium-sparing diuretic.

Lederle has informed physicians about the significant benefits of Maxzide in clinical practice, based on the results of clinical research, including Lederle-sponsored studies involving thousands of patients.

NEW ORLEANS (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - The Louisiana Land and Exploration Co. (NYSE:LLX) (''LL&E'') Wednesday announced U.K. Department of Energy approval of the East Brae Plan of Development.

LL&E, through its wholly owned subsidiary LL&E (U.K.) Inc., has a 5.886 percent interest in this significant gas/condensate field located in the U.K. sector of the North Sea.

Below is an excerpt from a press release issued by Marathon Oil U.K. Ltd., operator of the property:

''East Brae is located in Blocks 16/3a and 16/3b, some 165 miles northeast of Aberdeen. East Brae is a gas condensate field and will be produced by gas cycling, an enhanced recovery method first applied in the North Sea at the Brae Group's North Brae field.

''East Brae field reserves are estimated at more than 300 million barrels of liquid hydrocarbons and 1.5 trillion cubic feet of gas. First production is planned for December 1993 and liquid production is expected to peak at more than 100,000 barrels of condensate per day in 1995.

''Gas sales from the Brae area as a whole are scheduled to begin around the end of 1993 or early 1994 and production is expected to continue beyond the year 2010. Gas will be exported through the SAGE line to St. Fergus in Scotland. The SAGE System is 50 percent owned by the Brae Group, and is currently under construction.''

LL&E previously announced that it owns a 2.943 percent interest in the Scottish Area Gas Evacuation (SAGE) System.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - US Sprint and Cable & Wireless Wednesday announced that Canadian carriers Teleglobe and Unitel have agreed to market the world's first Global Virtual Private Network.

Global Virtual Private Network was developed by US Sprint and Cable & Wireless and was demonstrated last May at ICA in New Orleans. Since that time, Global Virtual Private Network has been successfully tested with customers.

The agreement extends the network that already exists between the United States, United Kingdom and Hong Kong, offering six additional route permutations to Global Virtual Private Network customers.

Negotiations are continuing with other major carriers including Telecom Ireland, International Digital Communications (IDC) of Japan and PTT Telecom Netherlands and further announcements are expected soon.

Teleglobe Canada will be the exclusive Canadian participant in the provision, planning and development of the international Global Virtual Private Network service. Unitel, a Canadian domestic carrier will sign with US Sprint and Cable & Wireless to become a provider for Canada-U.S. and the Canadian domestic Global Virtual Private Network service.

''It is a unique product in that it offers the only truly global virtual private network with the same service available to customers around the world '' says Wayne Hart, director of Market Development at Teleglobe.

Global Virtual Private Network was publicly demonstrated for the first time in the United Kingdom by Cable & Wireless subsidiary Mercury Communications Ltd. at the Telecommunications Managers Association exhibition in Brighton between Nov. 26-28. The live demonstration linked the exhibition with Hong Kong and US Sprint headquarters in Kansas City, Missouri.

US Sprint is a unit of United Telecommunications Inc., a diversified international telecommunications company with $7.5 billion in revenues. US Sprint, with the United States' only nationwide all-digital, fiber-optic network, provides a comprehensive array of global voice, data and video communications products and services.

ATLANTA (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Seal-Jet USA Inc., one of Atlanta's fastest-growing companies, will celebrate the grand opening of its new 8,000 square foot expansion at noon on Nov. 30.

This adddition to Seal-Jet's present 7,000 square foot headquarters is a tribute to Jonesboro, Ga., native Jerry D. Whitlock, one of Atlanta's rising stars in a growing group of local entrepreneurs successfully expanding home-grown enterprises onto the international business scene.

Whitlock, president of Seal-Jet USA Inc., and company Chairman Helmut Mayerhofer, have combined over 40 years of experience in the seal industry to create Seal-Jet, which experienced a 250 percent growth rate in fiscal year 1989-90 and projects a 500 percent growth rate in fiscal 1990-91.

This explosive success is based on a revolutionary manufacturing method discovered by Austrian Helmut Mayerhofer that produces hydraulic, pneumatic and rotary seals without the use of molds, allowing for dramatic reductions in production time, labor costs and inventory overhead.

Seal-Jet employs 100 people nationwide and plans to have a 54-branch marketing manufacturing and service network coast-to-coast by August 1991. To date, 25 outlets have opened.

Grand opening festivities will include comments by area dignitaries, including the Honorable Jerry Stubbs, chairman of the Clayton County Board of Commissioners. A tour of the Seal-Jet operation at 1560 Commercial Ct. (off Highway 1941) in Jonesboro will follow lunch.

MEMPHIS, TENN. (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Seven Oaks International Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:QPON) Wednesday announced that M.E. Bond, age 51, has been elected a director to fill the unexpired term of A.M. Sackett, who resigned last month.

Bond's current term of service as a director will extend until the annual meeting of shareholders in 1992. Seven Oaks' board of directors presently consists of seven directors who are divided into three classes which serve for staggered three-year terms.

Frank J. Donato, chief executive officer, said that the election of Bond followed the unanimous decision of a special committee of directors appointed to recommend a nominee to fill the vacant position.

He remarked: ''We believe M.E. Bond's background in finance and economics, as well as his position as an outside director, will contribute importantly to the work of the board. We look forward to his participation as a director and to his counsel about the future direction for Seven Oaks.''

M.E. Bond currently holds the position of Professor of Finance and Economics at Memphis State University. His professional training was received at the University of Iowa. He has also held faculty positions at Arizona State University and The University of Iowa. Bond has published a number of articles dealing with finance and economics in various professional publications.

During his academic career, Bond has served as a classroom instructor as well as a university administrator. He has also served as a consultant and consulting lecturer to both corporations and government units. Prior to starting his academic work, Bond was employed in the banking industry.

Seven Oaks International operates as a clearinghouse between retailers and product manufacturers in processing cents-off coupons. The company's common shares are traded over-the-counter under the National Market System symbol QPON.

WALTHAM, MA (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - SofTech Inc. (OTC:SOFT) announced that its second quarter earnings will be adversely affected as a result of a one-time pre-tax charge to expense of $2,900,000 to provide for the company's excess office space lease commitment in Alexandria, Va.

The excess space results from the expiration of a large sublease in November. The amount of the charge was determined on the basis of subtenant prospects and expected market lease rates in the generally poor leasing market in the Washington D.C. area.

Beyond the one-time impact of the write-off, SofTech does not expect that this will have any ongoing impact on SofTech's business. SofTech has ample cash reserves and resources to provide for operating needs. The DoD niches which form the basis of SofTech's government business are areas that are expected to retain strong support in future Defense budgets.

Information Decisions Inc., SofTech's principal commercial business acquired in April 1990, continues to grow and operate profitably.

SPRINGFIELD, MA (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Monarch Capital Corp. (MCC) (NYSE:MON) announced that MCC and Monarch Life have Wednesday entered into a ''standstill'' agreement with the banks that are party to MCC's primary credit agreement and Monarch Life's financing agreement.

Pursuant to the standstill agreement, the banks have agreed that, until Dec. 31, 1990, with respect to certain existing defaults under the credit and financing agreements and subject to certain terms and conditions, they will not take any actions to enforce their rights to payment.

Under the standstill agreement, the currently outstanding $159 million receivable owed by MCC to Monarch Life will be reduced by the transfer by MCC to Monarch Life, or or about Nov. 28, 1990, of MCC's interest in certain entities, with an estimated aggregate value of $60 million.

In addition, Monarch Life will proceed toward consummating its previously announced reinsurance agreement with certain Merrill Lynch life insurance companies, which is subject to certain regulatory reviews. Pursuant to the standstill agreement, Monarch Life has declared a $25 million dividend, payable following consummation of the indemnity portion of the reinsurance agreement and the satisfaction of certain other conditions, including the approval of the Massachusetts Insurance Commissioner.

The dividend will be immediately applied by MCC to reduce a portion of the outstanding principal amount owed the banks that are party to MCC's primary credit agreement.

The standstill agreement further requires an additional payment of $14 million of principal under MCC's primary credit agreement to be made with the proceeds of the sale of certain computer assets by certain subsidiaries of MCC in connection with the Merrill Lynch reinsurance agreement.

MCC also expects, pursuant to the standstill agreement, to enter into negotiations to amend certain of the terms of its primary credit agreement, to establish a new revolving credit facility under the credit agreement for up to $14 million to be used to pay working capital needs and to provide for further principal payments in the amount of $100 million (in addition to the $25 million payment described above) by Dec. 31, 1991.

As previously announced, the reinsurance agreement between Monarch Life and certain Merrill Lynch life insurance companies is expected to provide a ceding commission to Monarch Life based on the covered policies in force as of the closing date of the transaction. Had the transaction been consummated on Sept. 30, 1990, the initial ceding commission would have been approximately $86 million.

Monarch Capital Corp. is a financial services company that designs disability income insurance and variable life insurance and annuity products. These products are distributed through a network of other financial service firms in regional and national markets.

BETHESDA, MD (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Survival Technology Inc. (NASDAQ:SURV) Wednesday announced that it has received additional orders with a ceiling price of $11.8 million from the United States Department of Defense (DoD) for the production of its Mark I Nerve Gas Antidote Kits.

The DoD has exercised the right to purchase this quantity under a previously announced letter contract. A company spokesman explained that under DoD regulations, letter contracts serve to expedite the commencement of deliveries until pricing and other final terms are negotiated. Production of the additional quantities will begin immediately and are expected to be completed in this fiscal year.

The company's military automatic injectors are intended to be used by military personnel for the self-administration, under combat conditions, of antidotes against the effects of chemical warfare.

The Mark I Antidote Kit consists of two injectors: (1) the AtroPen, Auto-Injector, filled with atropine, which counteracts the effect of the nerve agent, and (2) the ComboPen Auto-Injector, filled with pralidoxime chloride, which helps restore the normal functioning of the body, allowing the soldier to leave the area for possible further treatment.

Survival Technology Inc. provides pharmaceutical delivery systems and cardiac monitoring services for the treatment of emergency medical problems.

OAKLAND, CA (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Kaiser Permanente, the nation's largest American health maintenance and group practice medical care organization, and Agfa Corp.'s medical diagnostic imaging division, Agfa Matrix, will launch an innovative radiology management program beginning Jan. 1, 1991.

The announcement was made Wednesday by William Sheehy, director of purchasing of Kaiser Permanente, Medical Care Program, Southern California Region. The value of the program is estimated in excess of $60 million.

''We're delighted to be able to initiate such an innovative management program for all our healthecare facilities,'' said Sheehy. ''With this plan, we can improve productivity, as well as increase efficiency in all our radiology departments.''

The program, called ''Radiology Management By Objective'' will focus on making all Kaiser Permanente radiology departments highly efficient with the help of Agfa Matrix equipment. Agfa Matrix Division manufactures imagers and networking devices designed to increase the productivity of medical diagnostic scanners. The program also furnishes Kaiser Permanente with Agfa film, equipment, accessories, and support staff and services necessary for efficient management of radiology departments.

Kaiser Permanente is a group practice prepayment plan providing comprehensive medical and hospital services to more than 6.3 million voluntarily enrolled members in 12 regions in Northern and Southern California, Colorado, Hawaii, Ohio, Oregon/Washington, Texas, Connecticut/New York/Massachusetts, North Carolina, Georgia, Kansas/Missouri, and the Washington, D.C./Virginia/Maryland area. Each of the program's established regions is a federally qualified health maintenance organization or HMO.

Agfa Corporation's Matrix Division, headquartered in Orangeburg, N.Y., designs manufactures and markets medical and industrial diagnostic imaging systems, non-destructive testing systems and business information systems for healthcare, hospital, business management, and industrial design and maintenance professionals.

Two other divisions of Agfa Corp. are Agfa Photo (photographic and cine films, papers, chemistry and processing equipment) and Agfa Compugraphic (electronic and photographic prepress systems). Agfa Corp., the imaging company of Bayer USA Inc. (the management holding company of Bayer AG, West Germany), employs more than 5,000 people and has sales of about $1 billion.

VIENNA, VA (NOV. 28) BUSINESS WIRE - Routing Technology Software Inc. (RTSI) has unveiled its first 33 MHZ, 486-based ROADSHOW system workstations at Continental Baking Corp. (CBC).

The new 486-based workstations will provide greater speed and capacity for determining least-cost delivery routes over broad geographic regions of the United States.

''We are very anxious to use this new 486 machine. It will give us the capacity we need to handle our branches that exceed 2,500 customers,'' stated John Thompson, the ROADSHOW implementation project manager at CBC.

Over the past two years CBC, one of the largest bakeries in the United States, has implemented new delivery routes across the country using the ROADSHOW routing and scheduling system. Currently, CBC is using multiple ROADSHOW systems at facilities across the United States to determine more efficient and balanced routes and to maintain customer service levels.

The PC-based ROADSHOW system analyzes information about the bakery's distribution process and uses proprietary video routing technology to calculate the most cost-effective routes and schedules for pickup and delivery.

The ROADSHOW system features full-color images of commercial maps displayed on a high resolution monitor. These familiar, real maps enable dispatchers to use the system easily and assures routing accuracy.

RTSI specializes in the development and application of PC-based vehicle routing systems. Since its introduction in 1987, the ROADSHOW system has been licensed at over 100 sites worldwide in industries ranging from foodservice, beverage, and newspapers to armored cars, bakery, and tobacco.

ANNOUNCEMENT:

In a press release dated Nov. 23, 1990, Unicorp Canada Corp. announced it financial result from the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990: a net loss of $6.1 million compared to $66.1 million for the same period last year; natural gas production increased 21 per cent over the same period in 1989 and crude oil and natural gas liquids production increased 8 per cent, gas marketing volumes increased 13 percent, and transportation, storage and distribution volumes were adversely affected for the period due to the weather being 13 percent warmer than normal. The Corporation is reviewing the divestiture of its investment in the common shares of Unicorp American Corp.(TICKER: UAC). Due to the further decline in market value of these shares, the Corporation has determined that separation of ownership from the investment in Unicorp American Corp.(TICKER: UAC) could be achieved expeditiously by way of a sale rather than as previously announced distribution to its Class A and Class B shareholders. The board has authorized the solicitation of offers for Unicorp American common shares held by the Corporation during a sixty day period from purchasers who must be approved by the Office of Thrift Supervision in the United States. Mr. George Mann stated that he will be considering making an offer for these shares.

BONN (NOV. 28) - About 60 million people are eligible to vote Sunday in the first pan-German parliamentary elections since World War Ii.

The vote will cap the German unification process, which began last fall with the peaceful revolution in the East and led to the Germanys' merger in October.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl, 60, and his conservative-liberal coalition - in power since the end of 1982 - are expected to win handily.

According to recent opinion polls, Kohl's Christian Democrats (CduCsu) can expect 43.5 to 45.5 per cent of the vote, with nine to 10 per cent likely for the Liberals (Fdp).

Social Democratic (Spd) standard-bearer Oskar Lafontaine, 47, is thought to have little chance to unseat Kohl, who particularly among eastern Germans is touted as ''the unity chancellor''.

The latest polls give the Spd between 31.5 and 35 per cent of the vote. The Greens and their partner Alliance 90, formerly an East German civil rights organisation, hope to win seven to 11 per cent.

Under German electoral law, five per cent of the vote is required for parliamentary representation. An exception is being made Sunday: The five per cent rule will be applied separately in the eastern and western halves of the country.

That gives the Party of Democratic Socialism, successor to East Germany's ruling Communist Sed, a chance to win seats in the Bundestag (lower house).

BRUSSELS (NOV. 28) - The main European car manufacturers have rejected hostility towards Japan by the French Peugeot group by deciding to create a new association to defend their interests, informed sources said Wednesday.

The move, which effectively isolates Peugeot president Jacques Calvet, could facilitate current negotiations with Japan to open the European market progressively to Japanese manufacturers from 1993, the sources said.

Mr. Calvet is the most outspoken opponent of an arrangement with Tokyo to import Japanese cars into the European Economic Community (EEC). These imports to several countries, including France, are tightly controlled by quotas.

At a meeting in Paris on Tuesday 11 of the 12 members of the CCMC (committee of EEC car manufacturers) decided to leave the committee over a disagreement with Mr. Calvet.

The 11 companies were BMW, Daimler-Benz, Fiat, Volkswagen, Renault, Porsche, MAN, Rover, Volvo, DAF and Rolls Royce.

They asked the head of BMW, Eberhard Von Kuenheim, to propose quickly the statutes of a new structure to represent the whole of the European auto industry, sources close to the companies said.

At the CCMC headquarters officials declined to confirm these reports.

The U.S.-based General Motors and Ford companies, which have several factories in Europe, were invited to participate in the new association.

The new organisation would in effect replace the CCMC and the other European grouping, the CLCA (liaison committee of car manufacturers in the EEC).

The new structure would be more "efficient" and would enable the European auto industry to "speak with a single voice", a representative of the European car industry in Brussels said.

It would be able to take some decisions by qualified majority vote instead of unanimously.

Informed sources said the dispute on Tuesday between Mr. Calvet and the other companies was on this point.

BAGHDAD (NOV. 28) - The organ of Iraq's ruling Baath party Wednesday said the country would ignore a new United Nations Security Council resolution, which might authorize the use of force to oust Iraqi forces from Kuwait.

The daily Ath-Thaura said in an editorial that a U.N. resolution passed under United States influence could neither shake Iraq's stance nor force it to give up its historic right, Kuwait, the Iraqi News Agency Ina reported.

The newspaper warned U.S. President George Bush and his allies that they would ''bear the dire consequences of any military aggression''.

The parties meeting Thursday in New York to discuss the U.S.-proposed draft resolution will be ''fully responsible for giving the United States a free hand to declare a war of aggression against Iraq under the United Nations flag'', it said.

Bush and his allies ''should remember that Iraq, which stood firm during eight years of war (against Iran till 1988) and came out of that test even stronger, is capable of fighting for years and ready to sacrifice life and property in defence of its land''.

Ath-Thaura said Bush is to blame for impeding a political solution to the Gulf crisis.

PARIS (NOV. 28) - The number of people unemployed in France rose by 0.9 percent or by 22,000 people in October from September to total 2,522,400 on a seasonally-corrected basis from 2,500,400, according to official figures released Wednesday.

The rate of unemployment was steady at 8.9 percent of the workforce, and the figure was 0.1 percent down on the figure a year earlier.

On an unadjusted basis, the number of people unemployed was 2,588,550 which was 0.4 percent down on a year ago.

ANKARA (NOV. 28) - Turkey refused Wednesday to be held responsible for starvation or deaths to lack of medicine in Iraq, saying it was only abiding by the ''peaceful U.N. sanctions declared in the face of Baghdad's unlawful invasion of Kuwait''.

Foreign Ministry Spokesman Murat Sungar was reacting to a weekend statement by Iraqi Trade Minister Mohammed Mahdi Saleh who said Turkey and Egypt along with the U.S. and Britain would be held responsible for the effects of the sanctions and taken to international courts for compensation.

By signing the U.N. Charter, Turkey had undertaken to obey the resolutions of the U.N. Security Council and to abide by them even if they clashed with the country's other international commitments, Sungar said.

The official said Iraq could procure ready-for-use medicine or medical equipment from or via Turkey because such items were outside the scope of the U.N. embargo.

AMMAN (NOV. 28) - Former Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega left Wednesday for Baghdad to hold his second meeting with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in as many weeks.

"Conditions are good for negotiations" to resolve the Gulf crisis, Mr. Ortega told reporters in Amman. "Iraq has a genuine desire for peace. What we nesd is a genuine proposal which picks up on the Iraqi desire."

The former Nicaraguan president said his current tour of the Middle East was aimed at contributing to peace efforts.

Mr. Ortega held talks with President Hussein on November 15, and he has also visited Jordan and Libya.

MOSCOW (NOV. 28) - Lev Spiridonov was appointed director general of the official Soviet news agency TASS to replace Leonid Kravchenko, TASS said Wednesday.

Mr. Kravchenko was recently appointed head of the state radio and television committee.

Mr. Spiridonov, deputy member of the Communist party's central committee, was since April 1986 deputy editor-in-chief of Pravda, the party's mouthpiece.

Born in 1931, Mr. Spiridonov worked in the central committee's propoganda department between 1983 and 1985.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) - Orders to U.S. factories for durable goods increased 3.6 percent in October, after dropping a revised 1.6 percent the previous month, the Commerce Department reported Wednesday.

Analysts had expected a 0.9 percent decline in October orders.

The Commerce Department announced orders for goods with a life-span of over three years reached a seasonally-adjusted 129.4 billion dollars, the largest gain since May's 4.1 percent climb.

Durable orders dropped 1.6 percent in September, and 0.9 percent in August.

Orders for durable goods provide a basis for industrial production plans, with low order levels in a given sector likely to cause job cuts there.

The department said that since the 132.1 billion dollar high in December 1988, orders followed an unstable path, fluctuating around a monthly average of 125.9 billion dollars.

"Much of the volatility was attributable to transportation equipment," department officials said.

Transportation sector orders hit 37.9 billion dollars, including automobile and aircraft purchases. They dipped 6.1 percent in September, having gained 1.0 percent in August.

Typically variable defense orders slid 10.0 percent to 7.1 billion after a 6.1 percent drop in September and a 12.0 percent rise in August.

Total orders rose 4.5 percent in October with the defense sector excluded.

Orders rose 8.3 percent in the crucial non-defense capital goods sector used as a gauge of planned business expansion, to 41.1 billion. The sector marked a 1.0 percent September gain.

Non-electrical machinery and defense goods posted the only order declines in October.

Orders for non-electrical machinery dipped 1.5 percent to 22.2 billion after a 5.5 percent September boost.

AMMAN (NOV 28) - War in the Gulf between Iraq and the U.S.-led multinational force could last two years and will certainly not be over in a matter of weeks Iraq's first deputy prime minister warned Wednesday.

Taha Yassin Ramadan, quoted in an interview with the Jordanian news agency Petra, said Iraq was ready to confront either a long war or years of economic embargo while under military threat.

"The battle will not just last days or weeks, because a short battle does not bring positive results and does not strengthen a just demand," the deputy premier said.

"We in Iraq are ready, in case war breaks out, to confront a battle that could last one or two years, as well as the economic embargo or the threat of war," Mr. Ramadan said.

He said the U.S.-led multinational force deployed in the Gulf would fall apart "because of the large economic challenge involved in the battle."

"The presence of U.S. and Atlantic forces in the Gulf and the Arab peninsula has had the positive effect of boosting Arab ranks against America and its allies," Mr. Ramadan said.

The comments came on the eve of a United Nations Security Council vote in New York on the possible use of force to evict Iraqi troops from Kuwait, which Baghdad invaded and annexed in August.

HELSINKI (NOV. 28) - Almost 200 Somali refugees have gathered at the border between Finland and the Soviet Union seeking political asylum, the newspaper Aamulethi reported on Wednesday.

But Prime Minister Harri Holkeri said in an interview the refugees could might be turned back. He said they did not meet the criteria of political refugees, as they only wanted to improve their living standards and were fleeing no threats.

Mr. Holkeri said the authorities were unaware how the Somalis got to the Soviet Union in the first place. Visas to enter Finland are needed for arrivals from the Soviet Union, and the Somalis did not have them.

Finnish refugee reception centres are currently full, following an influx of several hundred Somalis some months ago. On average, it is taking eight months to process requests for asylum.

NAIROBI (NOV. 28) - Kenyan President Daniel arap Moi on Wednesday accused foreign journalists, particularly the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC), of constantly provoking the Kenyan government.

Addressing a fund-raising rally in western Kenya's Kakamega district, Mr. Moi charged that even Kenyan newspapers had joined the foreign press in efforts to destroy the country's stability by feeding the public with "nothing but lies".

He challenged the BBC to say "why they no longer reported on neighbouring Uganda, where only children can now be found, nor ask where all the adult men had disappeared."

"But here, where there is peace and stability, even if you chase your chicken to kill, foreign jouranlists who have mostly worked as war correspondents in trouble-torn areas around the world would report that there is war in Kenya", President Moi said amid laughter from the audience.

"Even when a donkey was removed from a Lamu street, the BBC reported that the Kenyan government had arrested a donkey", the Kenyan president said in reference to a light-hearted official Kenya News Agency (KNA) report from the Indian Ocean holiday resort on Saturday that was picked up by most of the foreign press based in the Kenyan capital.

"The BBC was reporting nothing, but provocation on Kenya", President Moi added.

HAVANA (NOV. 28) - Cuban Foreign Minister Isidoro Malmierca will attend Thursday's U.N. Security Council debate on authorizing the use of force to expel Iraq from Kuwait, the government announced Wednesday.

The official news agency AIN said Mr. Malmierca would be accompanied by his top deputy, First Vice-Minister Alcibiades Hidalgo.

He was the only foreign minister of the Security Council's 15 members who had not previously confirmed his participation in Thursday's session, which was called by the United States to vote on a draft resolution authorizing the use of force if Iraq does not pull out of Kuwait by January 15.

Out of 10 Security Council resolutions on the Gulf crisis, Cuba has twice voted against the measures aimed at forcing Iraq's withdrawal, once casting the sole dissenting vote and once joining Yemen, the council's only Arab member.

Cuba has said it would once again join Yemen and possibly other council members in voting against the U.N.-sponsored resolution.

Cuba has also been critical of the United States, currently the council president, for preventing debate on a resolution demanding an international conference on ways to protect Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied territories.

The United States has sought to postpone consideration of the resolution out of fear that it could be forced to veto any measure deemed unfairly critical of Israel and thus anger Arab governments whose support is needed in the confrontation with Iraq.

LAGOS (NOV. 28) - The United States has announced restrictions on imports of Nigerian textiles, the "Business and Economic Digest", the official bulletin of the United Bank For Africa (UBA), said in its current edition.

The edition, delivered Wednesday to AFP here, said the U.S. government took the measure, effective last August, following disruption of the U.S. market by textiles from Nigeria, UBA said. (It is one of the three biggest banks in Nigeria.)

The step is a retaliatory measure by the U.S. against Nigeria, which in 1988 banned imports of wheat and rice following a huge foreign exchange outflow, economist analysts said.

Nigeria, which spent 250 million dollars a year on wheat imports in the early 1980's, was the sixth-largest market for U.S. wheat exports before the ban was imposed, the bulletin said.

A former U.S. ambassador to Nigeria, Princeton Lyman, had threatened that his country would retaliate, an official source recalled.

His successor, Lannon Walker, told Nigerian minister of trade and tourism Senas Ukpanah at a meeting in Abuja, Nigeria's future capital, earlier this year that his country wanted Nigeria to reduce textile exports to the United States.

ALGIERS (NOV 28) - All 32 Belgian hostages in Iraq will be released, informed sources reported here Wednesday.

Quoted by the Algerian news agency Aps, the sources said Iraqi authorities had informed Algiers that the Belgians would be freed.

The release was linked to a visit to Algiers by Belgian King Baudouin Wednesday, Aps said, and Algeria had joined in efforts to have the hostages freed.

In Baghdad, a Belgian parliamentary delegation said it had learned of the intention to free the Belgians from sources in Algiers. A spokesman said a plane bringing medical supplies from Brussels would return to the Belgian capital with the freed hostages.

Two former Finnish government ministers, British ex-minister Tony Benn and American former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali continued to wait in Baghdad Wednesday for news from Iraqi authorities that they could return home with some hostages from their countries.

BRUSSELS (NOV 28) - Death threats have been made against some political prisoners in Rwanda, a committee for respect of human rights and democracy there alleged here Wednesday.

It said mass pits for graves had apparently been dug along the banks of the River Nyabarongo near the capital Kigali. There was a "plan for the physical elimination" of prisoners in the coming few days, the committee said.

Lorryloads of prisoners had been moved from Kigali to unknown destinations which could well be military camps, it said.

Military ruler Major-General Juvenal Habyarimana had on November 13 promised that a full list of all political detainees would be published, but the justice ministry had now said publication was being put off until the end of the month. Relatives feared some "troublesome" prisoners would be secretly executed between now and then, the committee said.

Since rebels attacked from Uganda on October 1, an estimated 3,500 to 6,000 people have been arrested. State radio reported on November 14 that 2,500 people had been freed.

BERLIN (NOV 28) - Siemens AG, Germany's biggest electrical and computer firm, announced Wednesday it would spend at least one billion Deutsche marks (710 million dollars) in 23 projects in the former territory of East Germany.

The plan, one of the biggest expansion schemes in the east unveiled by the private sector, includes purchase of ailing state firms that manufacture basic telecommunication equipment and industrial electronics, Siemens board member Hans-Gerd Neglein told a press conference.

The company already has 6,000 employees in the east, and the figure should rise to 15,000 by the year-end, he said. In the mid-term, the payroll should rise to between 25,000 and 30,000, Mr. Neglein said.

The company is expecting a fivefold increase in the electricals market during the 1990s, and much of the demand will come from eastern Europe, with which the former German Democratic Republic has historical trade ties, he said.

Among the companies bought by Siemens are six units owned by the former Kombinat, or state enterprise, for communications and automation equipment.

Siemens has also signed a cooperation deal with Computer-Elektronik Dresden, a successor of Robotron, the state computer firm, he said.

It is also close to wrapping up five other takeover projects with the Treuhandanstalt, the agency charged with privatising state assets, Mr. Neglein said.

These include two cable factories in Schwerin and Meissen, respectively in the far north and south, a signalisation factory in Berlin, and plants to manufacture high-voltage equipment in Halle and Leipzig, also in the south.

PARIS (NOV. 28) - The Paris Bourse suffered its third straight losing session on Wednesday, as the CAC-40 stock price index finished down 0.29 per- cent on the day, after opening with a drop of 0.69 percent.

French investors retained a very cautious attitude toward putting funds into the stock market, but the market was stimulated briefly by hopes for a

U.S.-Iraqi dialogue on the Gulf crisis.

It quickly fell back into a depressed mood, pending the opening on Wall Street which came in little changed and hence did not stimulate the limping Bourse.

A statement on Wednesday by Fed chairman Alan Greenspan that the U.S. economy has definitely weakened did nothing to restore optimism, and the markets had already drawn the same conclusion.

As to individual stocks, SAE (Societe Auxiliaire d'Entreprises) was again the session's star, jumping by six percent on the day on volume of 177,000 shares. Ten per cent of its capital has changed hands since the start of the week.

Thomson, Peugeot and Saint-Gobain all gained ground, while Ingenico (off six percent) and Olipar (down 5.7 percent) fell to their lows for the year.

KASSEL, Germany (NOV 28) - Soviet and German companies agreed Wednesday to import at least six billion cubic meters of Soviet natural gas to the territory of former East Germany, it was announced here.

Wintershall AG said the agreement was reached between its Berlin subsidiary, Wintershall Erdgas Handelshaus GmbH, and Soyuzgasexport of the Soviet Union, which sells natural gas to the West.

The agreement is based on a long-term cooperation agreement in gas production and marketing, reached October 11 between Wintershall's parent, BASF AG, and Soviet firm Gasprom, the world's biggest gas producer, it said.

The Soviet Union is already the largest gas exporter to west Germany, providing it with around 15 billion cubic metres of its annual needs of 60 billion.

Meanwhile, the east German gas distributor, Verbundnetz AG of Leipzig, unveiled plans to complete conversion of its network from coal gas to natural gas.

If given official approval and funds, the firm would open negotiations with the Soviet Union, Norway and other exporters to gain access to secure supplies, Verbundnetz chairman Klaus-Ewald Holst said.

EINDHOVEN, Netherlands (NOV 28) - Dutch electronics giant Philips has borrowed two billion U.S. dollars from an international banking syndicate led by American bank Credit Suisse First Boston ltd, the group announced here on Wednesday.

Group spokesman Ben Geerts said the funds would be used to pay down part of the group's short- and long-term debt that is coming due.

As of September 30, debts and provisions accounted for 69.9 percent of the Group's total liabilities of 56 billion guilders (34 billion dollars). Short-term debts at that time amounted to 8.8 billion guilders.

The spokesman said the repayment plan is spread out until April 30, 1996, and was concluded "on market conditions". He said the loan shows that the banks "have confidence" in the Group's future.

Last July, new Philips chairman Jan Timmer launched a wide-ranging plan to restructure the multinational, which will lead to the cutting 35,000 to 45,000 jobs worldwide, or 15 percent of the present staff, by the end of next year.

Some 4.5 billion guilders have been added to the company's reserves for financial 1990 for restructuring costs. As a result, the Group expects a net loss of four billion guilders this year.

In addition to CSBF, the syndicate consists of Citi Bank (U.S.), Union Bank (Switzerland), Credit Lyonnais and BNP (France), ABN-AMRO and Rabobank (Netherlands), and Berliner Handelsbank-und-Frankfurter (BHF) of Germany.

Financial circles expressed "concern" about the loan, one Amsterdam stock market operator said. He called it "dangerous" and said "one might well wonder what Philips offered as security".

WASHINGTON (NOV 28) - Any war against Iraq, even with an early victory, would mean a high casualty rate for troops of the U.S.-led allies assembled in the Gulf.

While the U.S. Pentagon talks in terms of several thousand dead, the Center for Defense Information (Cdi) - an institute specialising in defence policy - estimates there would be between 2,000 and 10,000 killed among forces opposing Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, depending on the tactics chosen.

Baghdad, it reckons, would have between 6,000 and 35,000 troops killed. The estimates take no account of civilian casualties.

The bloody scenario is looking ever more likely with the latest signals coming out of the Gulf.

''I think war is justified,'' says Democratic Senator Sam Nunn, Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, who has summoned Defence Secretary Dick Cheney and Chief of General Staff Colin Powell for consultations next week. ''The question is whether it's wise...''

The Iraqis have drawn a solid defence line in Kuwait and southern Iraq. Western experts say any attacking force would have to fight through minefields, napalm traps, earthworks and trenches along a 300-kilometre stretch in the Kuwaiti, Iraqi and Saudi border area.

Any attempt to circumvent it would prove very difficult in the desert terrain.

BEIJING (NOV 28) - China on Wednesday accused the Soviet Union of backtracking on essential components of a peace plan that Moscow ratified along with the four other permanent members of the U.N. Security Council.

"The attitude of the Soviet Union owes nothing to chance," said the People's Daily, the official organ of the Chinese Communist Party.

The newspaper said Moscow, along with Phnom Penh and Hanoi, wanted to restrict the powers of the United Nations, to which the Security Council permanent members planned to delegate the administration of Cambodia before free elections are held.

Moscow now also opposed the dismantling of the Cambodian government of Prime Minister Hun Sen as set out in the peace plan, which called for its replacement with a Supreme National Council (SNC), the People's Daily said.

The SNC is made up of six representatives from Phnom Penh and six others nominated by the tripartite resistance.

The newspaper said the Soviet Union had retreated from the five documents approved by the five permanent Security Council members.

"The Soviet Union wants to restrict the powers vested in the United Nations and has used a variety of pretexts to protect the interests of the Phnom Penh government," the newspaper said.

The criticism contrasts with a recent marked improvement in Sino-Soviet relations, as demonstrated during last week's talks on the Gulf crisis between Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen and his Soviet counterpart Eduard Shevardnadze.

MOSCOW (NOV 28) - The city of Moscow, which has meat supplies for between three and five more days and milk for only 60 percent of its requirements, plans to issue its own currency to regulate food purchases, Moscow executive committee President Yuri Lujkov told journalists on Friday.

The food situation in the Soviet capital was "critical", he said.

Mr. Lujkov indicated that the city was issuing its own currency in order to limit shortages caused by the daily arrival of between two million and three million non-Muscovites, and to assure fixed and stable prices.

"The amount of this money would be linked to the volume of the city's resources. Each person will receive between 50 and 55 rubles in Moscow money, which will permit him or her to buy products at stable, low, non-commercial prices set by the government," he said.

The municipal council, which was meeting for two days to discuss the situation said that unless the city received more meat there remained "between two and five days of meat stocks".

Moscow storage facilities contained 15,000 tons of meat compared with a normal level of between 45,000 tons and 50,000 tons, according to the council.

Mr. Lujkov said that "The situation in the milk product sector is also extremely difficult. It is a question mainly of problems of discipline and of egoism by some regions which should deliver milk products to Moscow, and which in fact limit these deliveries."

CAPE TOWN (NOV. 28) - Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi's Inkatha Party has turned down an invitation to attend a Thursday summit meeting of black political leaders, organizers said Wednesday.

The summit, convened by anti-apartheid cleric Archbishop Desmond Tutu in a bid to foster unity among warring black groups, is to take place at Mr. Tutu's home here.

Archbishop Tutu's office said in a statement that delegations from the black nationalist African National Congress (ANC), led by its deputy president Nelson Mandela and the hardline Pan Africanist Congress (PAC), would be among the participants.

Mr. Mandela and PAC vice-president Clarence Makwetu recently told a summit of African leaders they intend to work towards unity. Mr. Makwetu indicated the PAC would join the ANC in peace talks with the white-minority government if the government could be convinced to form a constituent assembly.

Archbishop Tutu called for the summit during an address last month to the Synod of the Anglican Diocese of Cape Town.

He appealed to black leaders of substantial political movements to get together to plan a joint strategy on negotiations and to adopt a code of conduct on political dealings.

They had to decide how to handle factional violence and promote unity and peace, he said.

Reacting to the Archbisop's summit call at the time, Mr. Buthelezi said he wanted to nurture the ongoing peace talks in the eastern port city of Durban between Inkatha and the ANC and could not see how they could "overfly these peace talks to all of a sudden meet in a summit."

During September and October, some 800 blacks died in South Africa's worst-ever outbreak of political violence, most of which involved clashes between Inkatha-supporters and residents of black townships around Johannesburg loosely united under an ANC banner.

TRIPOLI (NOV. 28) - Libyan leader Colonel Moamer Kadhafi on Wednesday blamed King Fahd of Saudi Arabia for the failure of Libyan mediation efforts between Baghdad and Riyadh.

The two sides had initially agreed to a proposal for an Iraqi-Saudi summit this week but King Fahd "backed down at the last minute," Libyan Information Minister Ali Abu Jazeya quoted Col. Kadhafi as saying.

Col. Kadhafi had proposed the meeting, the minister told reporters in Tripoli, and was hoping the U.N. Security Council would vote against the use of force in the Gulf to allow the mini-summit a chance to achieve a peaceful solution.

The Security Council is to vote Thursday on a resolution authorizing the use of force to drive Iraqi troops out of Kuwait.

"Libya is exasperated by the stubborn parties," Col. Kadhafi was quoted as saying. "The Gulf crisis no longer concerns it, and it will let the parties -- Saudi, Kuwaiti and Iraqi -- pay the price of their stubbornness."

Col. Kadhafi had originally planned to hold a press conference Tuesday to announce the Saudi-Iraqi summit but it was called off because of the Saudi refusal, Libyan officials said.

NAIROBI (NOV 28) - Algeria is closing its embassy in Nairobi and missions in other capitals will also be shut as an economy measure, it was announced here Wednesday.

The outgoing Algerian ambassador, Abdelmajid Fasla, made the disclosure at a farewell luncheon hosted by the Kenyan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

He said Algerian affairs in Kenya would henceforth be looked after by the Algerian mission in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, until circumstances permit to re-open the embassy in Nairobi.

Similar action in many other countries is under consideration, he added. Fasla himself will be transferred to Nigeria.

Recently, Somalia announced that it was closing nine missions abroad for financial reasons, but it did not spell out which embassies would be affected.

BRUSSELS (NOV 28) - A high-ranking European Economic Community (EEC) official called here Wednesday for a big cut in the fishing fleet of EEC countries, and suspension of fishing in EEC waters during spawning periods.

European Fisheries Commissioner Manuel Marin said the need to restore dwindling fish stocks would define future EEC fishery policies.

He said the EEC might help compensate crews and shipbuilders for unemployment over two years from 1992.

Speaking after a meeting of the European Commission, the EEC's executive arm, Mr. Marin quoted a study saying that the fishing fleets of EEC countries were 40 percent too large for fish stocks.

He said all varieties of catches would be affected by the conservation measures and that cuts of over 40 percent could be made mandatory for the most threatened species in the North Sea.

The best way to restore fish stocks, he said, would be a complete ban on fishing from October to March -- a period of "biological rest" when fish could reproduce.

The commissioner added that EEC fishing fleets would not be allowed to make up their catches elsewhere. About 25 percent of the EEC fish haul comes from international waters or waters of other countries.

Studies have shown that 90 percent of the major fish types in the North Sea are being fished out four times faster than they can reproduce. Some experts say the stocks might soon reach a point where recovery is no longer possible.

The commission has recommended that the mesh in fishing nets be enlarged so that younger, smaller fish of threatened species -- particularly cod, haddock and whiting -- can escape and breed.

But last week Britain, the Netherlands and other EEC nations rejected this because they said it would reduce catches by nearly 70 percent.

Mr. Marin complained Wednesday that catch quotas set by the commission were flouted because some EEC countries did not enforce them properly. Satellite surveillance of fishing fleets is being considered.

He said he planned next month to propose a ban on driftnet fishing.

EEC countries have about 300,000 commercial fishermen, but the fishing industry provides nearly two million jobs. In 1987 the total EEC fish catch was nearly seven million tons -- 7.5 percent of the world catch.

TEHERAN (NOV. 28) - Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Petrovski met here Wednesday with Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati and praised Iran's "principled stand" on the Gulf crisis, the official news agency IRNA reported.

The Soviet envoy briefed Mr. Velayati on his country's stand in the U.N. Security Council as well as on the recent visit to Moscow by Iraqi Foreign Minister Tareq Aziz, the agency said.

Praising Iran's "principled stand" on the crisis, he delivered a message from Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and an invitation for Mr. Velayati to visit the Soviet Union.

Mr. Velayati renewed calls for an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait but stressed that security in the Gulf was the responsibility of regional states rather than foreign troops, IRNA said.

The Soviet envoy, quoted by Teheran Radio on his arrival earlier Wednesday, said his mission was the "last phase" of Moscow's efforts to find a peaceful solution to the Gulf crisis.

Mr. Petrovski, who toured Arab states earlier this month, was also expected to deliver a "verbal message" from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to his Iranian counterpart Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani.

The U.N. Security Council was to meet Thursday to discuss a U.S.-sponsored resolution allowing the use of force against Iraq to end its almost four-month-old occupation of Kuwait.

The Soviet Union has said it favours such a vote, but the Soviet deputy foreign minister insisted that Moscow still wanted to give Baghdad "a final chance for a peaceful settlement."

BRUSSELS, (NOV 28) - The European Economic Community (EEC) is considering an 80 per cent cut in its fish quota in the Northwest Atlantic in order to patch up relations with Canada, an EEC official said here Wednesday.

EEC Commissioner Manuel Marin said the EEC's executive was to propose the quota cut in fish caught in international waters off Newfoundland, a measure which would affect mainly Spanish and Portuguese fishing trawlers.

Relations between the EEC and Canada have been tense since 1985 because of the refusal by EEC countries to stick to the organisation's low quotas on the grounds that they were unnecessary to conserve fish stocks.

Last week in Paris, the two countries signed a cooperation accord. An EEC source said here Wednesday that, after signing such an agreement, the EEC could not allow itself to "pirate fish" off the coast of Canada.

Canada has accused EEC fishermen of pillaging fish stocks off Newfoundland. The Northwest Atlantic Fisheries Organisation, which groups 23 countries including the EEC 12, proposed the 80 per cent quota cut in September.

EEC fishery ministers are to discuss the commission's quota cut proposal at their meeting here next month.

NEW DELHI (NOV. 28) - Union Carbide would have no right to reclaim a 470 million dollar settlement on the fatal Bhopal gas leak if India's Supreme Court sets aside the decision, the court heard Wednesday.

Attorney General Soli Sorabjee, representing the Indian government, said the amount the U.S. multinational paid New Delhi under a February 1989 agreement must remain in India on terms and conditions set by the court.

A five-judge panel headed by Indian Chief Justice Ranganath Misra began hearing petitions in April from survivors of the 1984 gas leak, who are challenging the settlement on grounds the award was inadequate.

Some 3,300 people died of exposure to methyl iso-cyanate that escaped from a pesticide plant owned by an Indian subsidiary of Union Carbide in Bhopal, central India, in December 1984. Another 200,000 people were reportedly maimed.

Mr. Sorabjee said that if the court sets aside the award, Union Carbide should be barred from reclaiming the money unless it honours an earlier commitment to maintain its estimated three billion dollar assets in India.

CAPE TOWN (NOV. 28) - The fishing master of the Japanese trawler Toei Maru was found guilty here on Wednesday of fishing in South African waters between September 18 and November 21 without a permit, state-run radio said.

Mitsuo Ebisuda, 46, was fined 300,000 rand (114,000 dollars) or three years imprisonment and a further two years suspended for five years by the Cape Town Regional Court.

The fishing equipment used and the fish were confiscated by the state.

Magistrate J.P. Vermaak said if gill-nets had been used the sentence would have been harsher.

He said illegal fishing was regarded as theft of South African resources and resulted in the loss of much-needed foreign income from exports.

Mr. Vermaak also took into account that this was the first offence by a Japanese trawler.

Earlier on Wednesday, charges against the captain of the ship, Norio Tsutsui, were dropped.

JAMMU, INDIA (NOV. 28) - Indian security forces rounded up 97 suspected Moslem militants and seized dozens of weapons Wednesday in Kashmir, where gunbattles left three militants dead, police said.

Three other people were injured when a powerful bomb exploded outside a shrine here, the Press Trust of India (PTI) quoted police as saying. The agency did not identify the shrine, which was not damaged.

A police spokesman said the army and paramilitary troopers detained 97 suspects in a house-to-house search for militants waging a campaign for the succession of the Moslem-majority Kashmir Valley.

He said 41 Chinese-made AK-47 assault rifles, 31 pistols, 41 Chinese-made hand-grenades, 14 rocket-launchers and rockets, 13 light machine-guns and more than 12,000 rounds of ammunition were also seized.

Security forces shot dead one militant during a gunfight in Anantnag and two others in the Kupwara area of this disputed northern state, the spokesman said.

Four paramilitary troopers were injured in separate militant attacks in Srinagar, the summer capital of the state and urban hub of the militancy, Wednesday, he said.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) - The White House Wednesday said the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) had been misled into reporting that Iraq was not using fissionable material to make nuclear bombs, a threat Washington has been using to justify its strong anti-Iraqi stance.

"The International Atomic Energy Agency is wrong," spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

He was referring to a report the internation agency had issued Tuesday in Vienna saying that 12 kilograms (27 pounds) of nuclear fissionable material in Iraq had been accounted for and was not being used to build a nuclear-weapons facility.

The highly-enriched uranium had been retrieved from Iraq's Osirak nuclear reactor, which the Israeli Air Force bombed in 1981.

The IAEA report, based on an on-site inspection last week by two of its experts, was the latest in a series of wildly conflicting statements on how close Iraq was to building a nuclear bomb.

"They see only what Iraq wants them to see," Mr. Fitzwater said of the IAEA inspectors, a Nigerian and a Soviet.

"We disagree quite strenuously ... we don't believe they saw all the information," he added.

An intelligence report quoted in The Washington Times Wednesday said Iraq was only six months away from developing a crude nuclear device capable of being dropped from a plane.

That report contained the combined assessment of the United States' foremost intelligence agencies and served as a basis for President George Bush's Thanksgiving Day speech in Saudi Arabia in which he sounded the alarm about Iraq's imminent nuclear capability.

Other nuclear weapons experts instead have upheld the IAEA report, saying the agency's six-month inspections were foolproof.

Former Central Intelligence Agency director and defense secretary James Schlesinger testified Tuesday before the Senate Armed Services Committee -- which is holding a hearing on the Gulf crisis -- that Iraq needed between four and 10 years to develop its own nuclear bomb, depending on whether it got outside help.

While acknowledging that "no one knows precisely" how close Baghdad was to having nuclear weapons, Mr. Bush last week said the mission of U.S. forces in the Gulf was marked by "a real sense of urgency."

The United States has brokered a draft U.N. resolution allowing the use of military force to push Iraqi troops out of Kuwait which will be voted Thursday by the Security Council.

ABU DHABI (NOV. 28) - The United Arab Emirates (Uae) has urged Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to pull his troops out of Kuwait in order to spare Iraq and the entire Arab region the disaster of war.

The plea was made by Uae crown Prince and Deputy Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces, Sheikh Khalifa bin Zayed al-Nahyan, in an interview with the London-based Lebanese weekly magazine al-Hawadess to be published Thursday.

Khalifa called on Iraq to respond positively to international peace efforts, saying that the massive military buildup in the Gulf was firm proof of the international community's rejection of the Iraqi aggression and occupation of Kuwait.

Referring to the U.S.-dominated multinational force deployed in the Gulf following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on August 2, he said: ''The Arab, Islamic and friendly forces came to the region only after Iraq invaded Kuwait and posed threats to the states in the region.

''However, these multinational forces will return to their countries whenever asked to do so as previously agreed on.''

WASHINGTON (NOV 28) - The United States Wednesday urged Bangladesh to use restraint in dealing with the violent political problems that have rocked that country in recent weeks, and to work toward free democratic elections.

U.S. State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said "we urge restraint by the government and all parties to avoid further violence."

"We call for all involved to peacefully address the issues that have sparked the violence," Mr. Boucher added, "and to work towards free and fair democratic elections."

Widespread violence has plagued Bangladesh in recent weeks, heightened after a state of emergency was declared Tuesday by President Hussain Mohammad Ershad.

Mr. Ershad, 61, who took power in a bloodless coup in 1982, imposed the state of emergency late Tuesday, outlawing a general strike called by the opposition for Wednesday to protest violence which had raged for several days at Dhaka University.

Bangladesh's top opposition leaders, Sheikh Hasina Wajed of the Awami League and Begum Khaleda Zia of the Bangladesh Nationalist Party, were put under house arrest late Tuesday in a police swoop only hours before the state of emergency was declared.

The emergency proclamation came at the height of an opposition campaign to oust Mr. Ershad and stage fresh elections under a neutral, caretaker government.

Mr. Boucher also said the State Department would issue a travel advisory Wednesday suggesting that U.S. citizens postpone travel to Bangladesh until further notice.

WASHINGTON (NOV 28) - Occupying Iraqi troops took two more U.S. citizens hostage at their homes in Kuwait Tuesday, State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said Wednesday.

Mr. Boucher added that the two U.S. citizens were taken to the Regency Hotel in Kuwait City before their expected transfer to the Hotel Mansour-Melia in Baghdad.

The spokesman said that five of the eight U.S. hostages who were being held at the Melia-Mansour had been transferred to strategic sites within Kuwait. Iraqi officials offered no explanation for the transfer, which marks the first time hostages have been sent to serve as "human shields" in Kuwait and not in Iraq.

Mr. Boucher also said the United States had learned that Iraqi troops had stepped up their searches for Westerners.

"We find that there is an inescapable irony in the fact that Saddam Hussein is attempting to appear magnanimous by releasing hostages while, at the same time he intensifies house-to-house searches for more to take their place," the spokesman said.

With regard to U.S. diplomats still holed up in their Kuwaiti embassy, Mr. Boucher said they planned to stay as long as they were able.

SAN SALVADOR (NOV. 28) - Leftist guerrillas, vowing "black days" ahead for the Salvadoran army, said Wednesday they would keep up their week-old military offensive against the government.

The statement followed a rebel attack on a prison housing political detainees on the outskirts of San Salvador and more fighting in the town of Suchitoto, 44 kilometers (27 miles) east of the capital.

Guerrillas attacked the Mariona prison under a barrage of mortar fire late Tuesday, and fought government troops guarding the penitentiary for nearly six hours before making a predawn retreat.

As many as three soldiers were killed and 11 people were wounded, including two civilians, officials said.

Guerrillas also attacked the positions of an artillery brigade in Suchitoto before dawn, but there were no official reports of casualties in the fighting there.

The FMLN high command issued a statement warning "black days await the anti-democratic armed forces. Our units have instructions to give no rest to enemy troops anywhere in the country."

Fearing a rebel attack, the army has begun documenting all civilians who live in the vicinity of the First Infantry Brigade in San Salvador, the largest military base in the country. Similar measures were being taken at other bases around the country, officials said.

The rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) have carried out attacks almost daily since launching a large-scale offensive November 20 to improve their position in U.N.-sponsored peace talks with the government.

NEW YORK, United Nations (NOV 28) - The U.N. Security Council met in informal session Wednesday but failed to agree on a vote on a Cuban-sponsored draft resolution on the Israeli-occupied territories.

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker planned bilateral meetings on the issue, which loomed as a threat to U.S. efforts to win the Security Council's approval for the use of force against Iraq.

Foreign ministers from the 15 member countries of the Security Council are scheduled to meet Thursday to debate a U.S.-sponsored resolution that would authorize the use of force if Iraq does not withdraw from Kuwait by January 15.

But the U.S. strategy was complicated Tuesday when Cuban Ambassador to the United Nations Ricardo Alarcon de Quesada accused his U.S. counterpart Thomas Pickering of blocking a vote on the draft resolution on the Israeli-occupied territories.

The resolution -- introduced two weeks ago by Cuba, Yemen, Malaysia and Colombia with amendments by Finland -- calls for a U.N. ombudsman in the occupied territories and a conference in Geneva on ways to protect Palestinian residents.

The Cubans had argued that since the Palestinian resolution had been introduced first, it must be voted on first under U.N. rules.

Mr. Pickering, who is chairman of the council during November, responded by calling Wednesday's informal consultations.

Diplomatic sources said agreement on a vote on the Palestinian issue was impossible at Wednesday's meeting, opening the way for the Israeli-Palestinian issue to be taken up Thursday during the foreign ministers meeting on the Gulf.

The United States, which has resisted efforts to link the invasion of Kuwait and the Israeli-occupation of the West Bank and Gaza, apparently was not ready to vote on a resolution condemning Israel, diplomatic sources said.

Two previous Security Council resolutions condemned Israel for a riot in East Jerusalem in which 18 Palestinians were killed by police fire and Israel's refusal to cooperate with a U.N. investigation of the killings.

If the United States voted for the resolution, it would anger Israel and its supporters in the United States. But if Washingtpon voted against, it would risk angering Arabs and alienating allies before the key vote on Iraq.

ROME (NOV. 28) - Italy suffered a balance-of-payments deficit in October of 2.35 trillion lire (2.13 billion dollars), the Italian Statistics Institute ISTAT announced here on Wednesday.

The deficit was 361 billion lire in September, but for the year's first 10 months, the balance of payments shows a surplus of 21.17 trillion lire, an improvement over the surplus of 17.00 trillion lire recorded for the same period last year.

The Institute added that in October, Italy's official foreign exchange reserves fell by about the same amount as that month's balance-of-payments deficit, to a new total at the end of October of 106.55 trillion lire.

FOZ DO IGUAZU, BRASIL (NOV. 28) - The presidents of Argentina and Brazil Wednesday signed an accord designed to end a 35-year-old nuclear rivalry by opening their nuclear industries to inspection and outside control.

Brazil's President Fernando Collor and Argentina's President Carlos Menem signed the agreement here at a ceremony also attended by the director general of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), Hans Blix.

The agreement, said Mr. Menem, would establish the "exclusively pacific ends of our nuclear programs."

Both countries have suspected one another of secretly striving to develop a nuclear weapons ever since Argentine president Juan Domingo Peron established a National Commission on Atomic Energy in 1955.

Neither country is known to have succeeded in building a nuclear device although the Brazilian government earlier this month acknowledged that the military had tried to build one under previous governments.

Mr. Collor personnally shut down a deep shaft that the military had dug in the Amazon for nuclear tests and government officials assured that the A-bomb program had been "completely abandoned."

Under the agreement signed Wednesday, the two countries approved a common system of accounting and control enabling them to monitor each other's activities in the nuclear field.

They also pledged to exchange information on their nuclear installations and produce inventories of nuclear material within 45 days as well as begin inspections of their centralized record-keeping systems.

They also agreed to begin negotiations with the IAEA on a joint agreement on nuclear safeguards.

The two countries further expressed their intention to pursue initiatives to bring them into full compliance with the 1968 Treaty of Tlatelolco, which calls for a Latin America free of nuclear arms.

"We have approved a common system of accounting and control, which will be implemented and applied to all the nuclear activities of our two counties, including those of (uranium) enrichment and reprocessing," said Mr. Collor.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) - The U.S. Defense Department is looking for a way to do battle in the Gulf, but instead of guns and ships it is seeking swimming pools and boats to wage a war against boredom among U.S. troops.

The Pentagon wants to use cruise ships for rest and recuperation (R and R) for the thousands of U.S. forces who have been stationed in the Gulf since Iraq invaded Kuwait last August.

The ships are requested to be able to hold at least 600 passengers, include entertainment, food, bar and hotel service, and English-speaking crews.

Bids were due Tuesday and the first ships could reach the Gulf by Christmas, sources said.

"The interest has been varied because there could be some risks," said an official of a consulting firm serving as an intermediary for several steamship companies considering the Pentagon proposal.

"The owners are also concerned about the wear and tear on ships and also about taking them out of the itinerary for future cruise service," said the official who spoke on condition that neither he nor his company be identified. "So it's not likely that many of the modern ships are going to be looking for this type of job."

Drinking alcohol is illegal in Saudi Arabia where U.S. ground forces are stationed. None of the neighboring countries that allows drinking can or want to serve thousands of fun-hungry troops.

Priority would be given to vessels flying the U.S. flag.

NEW YORK (NOV 28) - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze predicted Wednesday that the U.N. Security Council would approve a U.S.-sponsored resolution authorizing the use of force against Iraq.

Mr. Shevardnandze made the comment at the start of a meeting here with U.S. Secretary of State James Baker, who declined to make any predictions on the outcome of the Security Council vote.

Both are in New York to attend Thursday's meeting of the Security Council, which is to bring together the foreign ministers of the council's 15 member countries.

Mr. Shevardnadze said he expected "a positive vote in the sense that the draft resolution will gain support."

China's Foreign Minister Qian Qichen has said he would not vote in favor of the U.S. draft resolution, which gives Iraq until January 15 to withdraw from Kuwait. But China was not expected to use its veto.

"I don't think it will affect the impact of the resolution," Mr. Shevardnadze said of a possible Chinese abstention. "I do hope we will be able to preserve the unity of the council. I will do my best to preserve the unity."

U.S. efforts to obtain the council's approval for the use of force have been complicated by a parallel resolution sponsored by Cuba on the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza.

Meeting informally Wednesday, Security Council members were unable to reach agreement on the resolution, which called for a U.N. ombudsman to monitor the condition of Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied territories.

With no agreement, the way was open for the resolution to be taken up again at Thursday's meeting, thereby indirectly linking the Gulf crisis to the Arab-Israeli conflict -- a linkage Washington has strived to avoid.

Mr. Baker was scheduled to meet later Wednesday with Cuban Foreign Minister Isidoro Malmierca, their first meeting since December 1988. Mr. Shevardnadze said he too planned to meet with Mr. Malmierca.

PAPEETE, French Polynesia (NOV 29) - France has for the first time authorised an expedition from the ecology group Greenpeace to the controversial French nuclear testing site on Mururoa atoll, officials said here Wednesday.

They said talks were underway for the organisation of the visit by the ship Rainbow Warrior II, the successor to the Greenpeace vessel that French secret agents blew up and sank in Auckland harbour in July 1985.

France was then trying to prevent Greenpeace from investigating conditions at Mururoa, a far-flung atoll of its Pacific territories. One person died in the explosion, which caused a major scandal and was to lead to the resignation of the French defence minister.

French officials here said that the new Greenpeace team would be allowed to meet with scientists on Mururoa and to take samples.

Critics of French testing on the atoll claim that successive explosions have cracked the ocean floor around it, creating a risk that radiation could escape.

France's High Commission for Polynesia said in a statement that it the French state authorities were "ready to organise a Greenpeace visit to Mururoa as soon as the association (Greenpeace) has agreed to the principle" of such a visit.

Greenpeace's coordinator on the Rainbow Warrior II, Stephanie Mills, expressed satisfaction and said things were "going in the right direction."

The vessel was expected to leave for Mururoa, which is several hundred kilometres east of here, on Thursday and to spend around six weeks inspecting the atoll and its environs.

Greenpeace scientists aboard -- Norman Buske and Bruce Gabites -- plan to take samples for analysis. Also present on the expedition is Ingela Maartenson, a member of the Swedish parliament.

Members of the Greenpeace party also said that a dispute over the captain of the Rainbow Warrior II, Peter Willcox, and crew member Sue Ware, was in the process of being resolved, and they would be able to take part in the Mururoa expedition.

French officials had initially refused them permission to go ashore on Tahiti, the island on which Papeete is located, because of an expulsion order made against them during Greenpeace's 1985 campaign.

PIETERMARITZBURG, SOUTH AFRICA, (NOV 29) - A 28-year-old conscientious objector was sentended here to a 12-month suspended jail sentence and 2,400 hours community service for refusing to serve in South Africa's army.

Passing sentence on Michael Graaf, magistrate Johan Grebe said while his refusal to perform national service was not justifiable, he was not "an ordinary type of criminal," the South African news agency SAPA reported.

Mr. Graaf later said his sentence represented a victory, and applauded the logic of community service as a sentence.

The chairman of the anti-apartheid End Conscription Campaign in Durban, Rob Goldman, said the sentence could create a precedent for the treatment of conscientious objectors in future.

He said it was a step forward and indicated a "more open attitude by the state" but said the ideal was to abolish conscription which would help create trust in the negotiation of a new South Africa.

Mr. Graaf was sentenced to perform 40 hours of training under the Red Cross Society and thereafter to perform 2,360 hours over four years at a black hospital in the eastern port city of Durban.

BEIJING (NOV 29) - Shell oil and its joint venture partners should get a green light within the next month to build China's largest oil refinery, the official China Daily reported.

Shell, which owns 50 percent of the joint venture, is to link up with five Chinese oil companies for a total investment of 2.5 billion dollars, the newspaper said Wednesday.

The petrochemical complex in Huizhou, in the southern province of Guangdong, is to include a refinery with a capacity of five million tonnes per year and an ethylene plant that should produce 450,000 tonnes of chemical products annually.

The refinery will process South China Sea heavy crude, which requires advanced technology.

China, which ships much of its crude oil abroad for refining, is seeking to increase its domestic refinining capacity through the use of Western technology.

BONN (NOV 29) - Chancellor Helmut Kohl on Wednesday made a new appeal to Germans to come to the aid of the Soviet population, faced with a dramatic food crisis as winter takes hold.

In a televised speech, Mr. Kohl reminded Germans that without Soviet cooperation German unity would not have been possible.

It was now time for Germans to help ease the food crisis in the Soviet Union, an act that was above all one of "neighborliness."

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, in attempting to set his country on the path towards a market economy, was faced with a "difficult test," the chancellor said.

"Winter is at the door," Mr. Kohl said. "The threat of famine exists in many cities and towns in the Soviet Union."

Meanwhile, the German Red Cross said late Wednesday that a first convoy would leave for the Soviet Union by road on Friday, bearing packages of food for the needy. The German Red Cross has pledged food aid in the form of 5,000 such packages.

MEXICO CITY, Nov 28 (AFP) - Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari said Wednesday any free-trade accord with the United States would not include Mexico's state-run oil industry.

Mr. Salinas, who discussed the free trade pact with U.S. President George Bush

Monday and Tuesday, said the government did not want to give up state control of the oil industry, which was nationalized in 1938.

"We will not modify the constitutional provision that establishes our nation's ownership and control over oil," said Mr. Salinas.

Although oil was not on the agenda in his talks with Mr. Bush in Monterrey, Mexico, "I did touch on the topic, given its importance," Mr. Salinas said.

During Mr. Bush's visit to Monterrey, U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady announced that the Export-Import Bank had agreed in principle to extend a line of credit of up to 1.5 billion dollars to the state-run Petroleos Mexicanos (PEMEX) to buy U.S. goods and services.

Mexico and the United States announced in June their intention to negotiate a free trade accord, but the crisis in the Gulf has sharpened U.S. interest in Mexican oil.

To help offset shortages prompted by Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait and the U.N.-mandated economic embargo against Baghdad, Mexico increased production by 100,000 barrels a day.

In the first quarter of this year, Pemex exported some 1.3 million barrels of oil a day -- 60 percent of which went to the United States.

ROME (NOV. 29) - A party of 68 Italian nationals allowed to leave Iraq by President Saddam Hussein arrived here late on Wednesday on a special Alitalia flight from Amman.

Meanwhile, the authorities in Baghdad told a delegation of visiting Canadian members of parliament that six out of the 47 of their compatriots being held would be allowed to leave the country.

The former Italian hostages were accompanied back to Rome by Monsignor Hilarion Capucci, the Catholic archbishop of Jerusalem.

They included Italy's ambassador to Kuwait, Mario Colombo, who remained at his post for 42 days after Iraqi troops invaded the Gulf emirate on August 2.

Mgr. Capucci, who had visited Baghdad with an Italian peace delegation, said he planned to return to the city on Sunday in a bid to obtain freedom for the 160 remaining Italian hostages in Iraq and Kuwait, as well as that of hostages of other nationalities.

Officials here said a 69th Italian hostage was released on Wednesday, but because he was ill he had been taken out of the country earlier on a special flight. Another hostage who had been told he could leave the country had opted to stay.

The announcement that six Canadian hostages would be released was made in Baghdad by MP's Robert Corbett, Lloyd Axworthy and Svend Robinson, who are visiting Iraq.

The three MP's stressed that they had not made any concessions to Iraq to obtain the freedom of the six.

ABIDJAN, (NOV 29) - Violence broke out Wednesday between security forces and striking cab and truck drivers in the west African state of Togo, leaving at least 30 people injured, according to witnesses contacted by phone from the Ivory Coast capital.

Taxi and truck drivers, on strike nationwide since Monday, smashed cars and government buildings Wednesday morning in the city of Sokode, 300 kilometers (185 miles) north of the capital Lome, witnesses said. Portraits of Togo President Gnassingbe Eyadema were also destroyed.

A witness said protestors hurled rocks at security forces who charged back with batons. Thirty people were taken to hospital, he said.

Goverment troops were reported to be occupying most strategic points in Sokode late on Wednesday,

The taxi and truck drivers' strike, the biggest movement of social unrest since President Eyadema took power in 1967, disrupted business activity in the Togo capital on Wednesday, an Agence France-Presse reporter there said.

The drivers are demanding an end to police harassment and protesting against a new regulation that requires them to renew their permits every six months.

Togo national radio, monitored here, made no mention of the incidents in Sokode.

AJACCIO, CORSICA (NOV. 29) - The facade of a courthouse was sprayed with gunfire on this French Mediterranean island on Wednesday, the second such incident in two days, police said.

Several attackers armed with what appeared to have been assault rifles took aim from a car at the French flag flying over the courthouse here, according to police.

No one was injured.

On Tuesday a group opened fire on a courthouse in the Corsican city of Bastia. The banned Corsican National Liberation Front claimed responsibility for the incident.

Earlier Wednesday some 2,000 students demonstrated in Corte for the preservation of the Corsican culture and language.

Several hours later bullets grazed four riot police stationed to protect a French government building in the town. There were no injuries, police said.

NEW YORK (NOV 29) - The United Nations Security Council voted here Wednesday to adopt a resolution calling on Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to take over the records of the Kuwait government and its population.

The resolution, passed by all 15 of the Security Council's members, also ''condems the attempts by Iraq to alter the demographic composition'' and the destruction of civil records of Kuwait.

Data on Kuwait's population of 1.75 million is stored on 25 computer discs which were smuggled out of the Iraqi-occupied emirate a few weeks ago, Kuwait's U.N. ambassador, Mohammad Abulhassan said.

Security Council members, who the previous day had been told by Kuwait exiles of Iraqi ''piracy'' in Kuwait, continued to voice fierce criticism of the Iraqi government.

Britain's U.N. ambassador, Sir David Hannay, accused Iraq of trying to wipe out Kuwait's identity. Iraq had made conditions for Kuwaitis so unbearable that half the population had left the country and been replaced by Iraqis, he said.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) - U.S. Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze announced Wednesday that they will meet in Houston, Texas next month for two days of talks devoted mainly to the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START).

The two men met in preparation for a Security Council meeting Thursday that is expected to approve a U.S.-sponsored resolution authorizing the use of force against Iraq if it fails to withdraw from Kuwait.

Mr. Baker said the Houston meeting is to take place December 10 and 11 after which Mr. Shevardnadze is to meet in Washington with President George Bush.

Besides the START negotiations, the two ministers would also discuss the Gulf crisis "in a very serious and substantive way," Mr. Shevardnadze said.

The Soviet foreign minister said they tended to achieve more working away from their respective capitals.

In Jackson Hole, Wyoming in September 1989 and in Irkutsk, on Lake Baikal in the Soviet Union at the end of July and beginning of August, they made considerable progress in negotiations for a START treaty to reduce Soviet and U.S. nuclear arsenals by 30 to 35 per cent.

A summit between Mr. Bush and President Mikhail Gorbachev depends on the conclusion of the treaty. Mr. Shevardnadze said he was not sure whether the summit would be held in January or a little later.

MANILA (NOV. 29) - The Philippines' power supply shortfall in the first nine months of the year shot up by 253 percent over the last comparable period and has contributed to an ongoing economic decline, an industry report published here Thursday.

State-run National Power Corp. (NPC) figures show that the unfulfilled energy demand from January to September 1990 totalled 391.90 gigawatt-hours, up from 110.95 gigawatt hours in the same period last year.

NPC plants account for 93.4 percent of the country's power supply, of which 38.25 percent is produced by oil-thermal plants, 3.97 percent by gas turbines and 4.66 percent by diesel plants. The rest are from hydrothermal, geothermal and coal plants.

Electricity demand began to rise shortly after President Corazon Aquino came to power in February 1986, as the economy began to recover from a crisis in the waning years of the Ferdinand Marcos dictatorship.

Rising demand soon put pressure on the NPC's aging plants. This, coupled with Mrs. Aquino's decision to mothball a 600-megawatt nuclear power plant, drought and destructive typhoons last year caused an acute power shortage in the first quarter.

Big manufacturing firms in and around Manila voluntarily shut down their machinery at certain hours during this period rather than risk damage, thus contributing to reduced production.

The Gulf crisis and rising oil prices have put added pressure on the cash-strapped Aquino administration, which has already forecast a recession next year.

MANILA (NOV. 29) - The Asian Development Bank (ADB) said Thursday it approved its first loan to China since the June 1989 massacre of pro-democracy demonstrators led to Beijing's isolation from the international community.

The 50 million dollar loan to the Agricultural Bank of China (ABC) will help modernize small and medium-sized agricultural enterprises in five eastern provinces, a statement by the Manila-based bank said.

The ABC will relend the loan proceeds at a two per cent spread to sub-borrowers for importing equipment, materials and services needed by enterprises in the provinces of Jilin, Shandong, Jiangsu, Fujian and Guangdong.

The loan is intended to raise the living standards of poor rural families, some of whom have an annual income of less than 200 yuan (38 dollars), the ADB statement said.

It would help create 21,000 jobs, contribute at least 45 million dollars a year to the economies of the five provinces and provide "critical support" to private enterprises, including joint ventures with foreigners, the bank said.

The ADB loan, payable in 15 years at a variable pool-based rate with three years' grace period, was the first granted to China since the People's Liberation Army crushed a pro-democracy movement in Beijing.

The deaths of perhaps hundreds of students caused worldwide condemnation of China and a freeze on loans from industrial countries and multilateral institutions like the ADB.

The isolation began to ease earlier this year when Japan announced it would resume assistance and the World Bank also agreed to relax the lending ban.

The new ADB loan was accompanied by a 480,000 dollar technical assistance grant to enhance the ADB's capability for project lending and investment analysis, the ADB said.

Sub-borrowers may also use the loan proceeds to undertake pre- and post-investment studies costing not more than 100,000 dollars, the ADB said.

China joined the ADB in 1986, despite the vehement opposition of founding member Taiwan, and has since borrowed slightly more than 500 million dollars from the bank, including the latest loan.

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA (NOV. 28) - Australia's ANZ Banking Group Ltd reported here Wednesday a 42.8 per cent drop in profit to 412.5 million Australian dollars (316.1 million U.S.) after tax and before abnormal items in the year to September 30.

Chief executive Will Bailey said the bank had suffered a blow-out on bad debts with charges for provisions for bad and doubtful debts rising 157.7 per cent on the previous year to 793.2 million dollars (607.8 million U.S.).

Mr. Bailey said the bank would cut staff numbers by 1,000 this year, reduce costs by five per cent over the next four years and conduct a "radical review" of its operations, including the sale of non-core businesses.

Chairman Milton Bridgeland said the profit result -- a reversal of the 42.8 per cent growth to 721.7 million dollars (553 million U.S.) for 1989 -- followed a "difficult and testing year covering probably the harshest economic environment for small and medium-sized businesses in Australia since World War Two."

Shares in the banking group fell to a low of 3.66 dollars after the result from an early high of 3.84 dollars from Tuesday's close of 3.77 dollars. ANZ was trading at 3.73 dollars at the mid-session break.

The bank announced a fall in annual dividend to 38 cents from 44 cents previously.

Net profit after abnormal items was down 36.8 per cent on the previous year at 221.5 million dollars (169.7 million U.S.).

ANZ's was the worst result for Australia's three main commercial banks.

Earlier this month Westpac Banking Corp reported a 39.3 per cent profit drop to 486 million dollars (372 million U.S.) in the year to September 30, while National Australia Bank Ltd was down 3.1 per cent to 767 million dollars (588 million million U.S.).

Mr. Bailey said the bank experienced a "rapid deterioration in conditions" in the final quarter and this, coupled with the "increasingly volatile and uncertain global economic environment", had influenced the dividend cut.

BANGKOK (NOV. 28) - Rolls-Royce has appointed its first dealership in Thailand with high hopes of selling its cars to wealthy, style-conscious Thais, a spokesman for the Bangkok-based dealer said Wednesday.

But the dealership, AAS Auto Service Co. Ltd., is aimed mainly at providing maintenance and repair services to the 100 Rolls-Royces already on the roads in this southeast Asian country, its services chief Piyasawat Suddan said.

Mr. Piyasawat said seven potential buyers of new models, each priced at 21-35 million baht (840,000-1.4 million dollars) including taxes, had contacted the dealership since its appointment last month but that no orders had been placed.

But the dealership still hopes to sell Rolls-Royces in Thailand where import tariffs on cars run around 500 per cent and the gross national product per person last year was 31,875 baht (1,275 U.S. dollars).

AAS Auto Service is also a dealer and servicer of new and rebuilt Porsches, selling three or four of the sports cars a month for two to three million baht (80,000-120,000 dollars) each, Mr. Piyasawat said.

Singapore-based Rolls-Royce mechanics are expected to arrive here next month to train the dealership's mechanics, and it is to move into a new showroom early next year, he said.

TOKYO (NOV. 28) - Sales by Japanese large-scale retailers rose 4.7 percent in October from a year earlier to 1.734 trillion yen (13.5 billion dollars), the International Trade and Industry Ministry (MITI) said Wednesday.

MITI officials said furniture, art objects, and sporting goods were selling well at department stores, reflecting brisk consumer spending.

Sales by 377 department stores increased 5.3 percent to 959 billion yen (7.5 billion dollars) while sales of 1,969 supermarkets increased 4.0 percent to 775 billion yen.

They attributed the steady sales figures for the supermarkets to higher prices of fresh vegetables thanks to mild weather.

MEXICO CITY (NOV. 28) - The Export-Import Bank of the United States has agreed in principle to a loan of 1.5 billion dollars to Mexico's Petroleos Mexicanos (Pemex), a government communique said Tuesday.

The agreement on the loan was announced by U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady at a news conference Tuesday in Monterrey, about 700 kilometers (430 miles) north of Mexico City, at the conclusion of a two-day visit by U.S. President George Bush with Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

Pemex will use the loan to pay for U.S. goods and services "destined for the program of investments" by the state-owned oil company in 1991, and forms part of the budget plan submitted to the Mexican Congress two weeks ago, the statement said.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) - Japan has made progress in abiding by a U.S. computer chip agreement but will not have reached full compliance by the time the pact expires next year, a trade group reported Tuesday.

The Semiconductor Industry Association, in its annual report to President George Bush on the progress of the 1986 chip agreement, addressed the pact's two key elements: preventing Japanese semiconductor makers from dumping, or selling their chips below production costs, in the U.S. market, and opening the Japanese market to foreign chips.

The report concludes that the pact "has succeeded in containing instances of dumping, and in moving toward a more open market for foreign semiconductors in Japan," said Wilf Corrigan, chairman of the trade group, in an accompanying statement.

"However, despite the recent progress that has been made, Japan will not have fully complied with the terms of the agreement when it expires next July," he said.

Mr. Corrigan, who is chairman and chief executive of chip maker LSI Logic Corp., called for a new pact "to ensure that the objectives of the 1986 agreement are achieved."

Andrew Procassini, president of the trade group, said in an accompanying letter to Mr. Bush that progress had been hampered because Japan "did not begin its initiatives in earnest until almost three years into the agreement."

According to the report, Japan has made progress in opening its market to foreign semiconductors. Foreign chips have gained 13.3 per cent of the market in this year's second quarter, up from 8.5 per cent when the agreement was signed.

"U.S. companies are aggressively pursuing opportunities in the Japanese market " the trade group noted.

The report said anti-dumping measures had sparked new investment in the categories of U.S. chips most threatened by the practice: dynamic random-access memory chips and erasable programmable read-only memory chips.

SEOUL (NOV. 28) - South Korea's economy has grown by almost 10 percent in the first three quarters of 1990, surpassing expectations due to a construction boom and to consumer spending, the government said Wednesday.

The Gross National Product (GNP) grew 9.6 percent during the third quarter of the calendar year of 1990, bringing the overall GNP growth rate for the first nine months to 9.7 percent, the government said.

The GNP is the total market value of services and goods produced by a nation over a set period.

If the trend continues, the total GNP growth rate for 1990 will be 9.2 percent this year, as fourth quarter growth is expected to be slow due to the economic problems brought on mainly by the crisis in the Gulf.

The expected growth would still however be much higher than the initially projected 6.5 percent, the officials of the Economic Planning Board (EPB) said.

The government already raised the projection from 6.5 percent to 8.5 percent at the end of June this year.

An EPB official said the higher-than-expected growth rate was mainly due to booming construction and expanding domestic consumption rather than growth in manufacturing industries and exports.

"This country cannot rely on domestic markets for a sustained growth," he said adding that consumer spending and construction already began declining in the second half of this year.

Construction grew 27.5 percent during the first nine months to September, more than double the growth rate of 11.8 percent of the same period of last year, as manufacturing grew 8.5 percent, up from 3.3 percent.

The service sector also expanded 9.2 percent, up from 7.9 percent.

Consumer spending grew 10.4 percent, up from 9.9 percent from the same period last year. Fixed investment including construction and production facilities soared 24.5 percent, up from 14.0 percent.

Exports increased 5.8 percent, up from minus 3.9 percent, during the same period last year, but imports jumped 15.4 percent, up from 14.3 percent during the same period in 1989, the official said.

The South Korean government, saying that the economy was undergoing a slowdown has loosened credit lines to business firms and revived export loans, as the economy was actually growing at a rapid pace.

The excess liquidity is now feared to fuel inflation as it coincides with rising oil prices.

EPB officials said this year's inflation rate would be 9.5 percent, up from 5.1 percent this year.

"Next year's inflation would be worse because of the Gulf crisis," another EPB official said, adding that the government had been delaying raising utility charges this year to keep the inflation rate below ten percent.

ISLAMABAD, Nov 28 (AFP) - A huge fire swept through Pakistan's biggest gas fields plant in Baluchistan province on Wednesday, killing at least two people and injuring up to 50, official sources said.

A purification plant at the Sui gas field was still ablaze, 12 hours after the fire broke out just after midnight.

A spokesman for Pakistan Petroleum Limited (PPL) said at least two people had died but unofficial reports said the casualties could be higher.

The cause was not immediately known but an official blamed a leak in the gas plant.

Sui is the country's biggest natural gas field. Experts say the reserves are sufficient to meet the country's fuel and industrial requirements until the next century.

CANBERRA (NOV. 28) - Australia received more bad news Wednesday in official figures showing a rise in both its current account deficit and foreign debt for the September quarter.

The Bureau of Statistics figures showed rising imports and falling prices for wool and cereals forced the current account deficit up 19 percent to 4.46 billion dollars (3.4 billion US) in seasonally adjusted terms.

The Bureau also reported that gross overseas debt was 11.4 billion dollars (8.74 billion U.S.) higher than the 154.17 billion dollars (118.14 U.S.) in the previous corresponding quarter.

Net foreign debt -- gross debt less foreign reserves -- rose to 124.5 billion dollars (95.4 billion U.S.) in the September quarter from 122.77 billion dollars (94.1 billion U.S.) in the preceding June quarter and 116 billion dollars (88.9 billion U.S.) a year earlier.

However, a more accurate guide will be provided Thursday in national account figures which could show the economy to be in recession, defined as two successive quarters of negative growth.

However, Prime Minister Bob Hawke said Wednesday that whether or not the national accounts indicate recession in technical terms, the economy was poised for "considerable recovery" in 1991.

He said he was "not running away from the word" recession.

"Obviously there has been a lowered level of activity and there has been pain in the community," Mr. Hawke told journalists in Perth.

"But what I'm saying, and I'll repeat here, is that the economy will go into, I think, considerable recovery in 1991."

June quarter national accounts showed negative growth of 0.9 percent and a second contraction in the September quarter would confirm a technical recession.

BAGHDAD (NOV. 28) - Iraq on Wednesday appealed for negotiations with U.S. President George Bush on the eve of a U.N. vote that could authorise the use of force against Baghdad.

"The American President Bush, who is leading the whole world towards a devastating war, has no other choice but to return to reason and enter into a dialogue to avoid the catastrophies of war in the region," First Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan told a press conference here.

Iraq has made several such appeals in the past but they have been systematically rejected by the United States, which heads an international coalition demanding an immediate and unconditional Iraqi troop withdrawal from Kuwait.

The U.N. Security Council is to meet Thursday to discuss a U.S.-sponsored resolution that would sanction the use of force against Iraq to end its nearly four-month-old occupation of Kuwait.

U.S. and Arab forces from Egypt, Syria and Morocco are among a 350,000-strong multinational troop deployment in Saudi Arabia and the Gulf region, where they face up to 700,000 Iraqi soldiers entrenched in Kuwait and southern Iraq.

BEIRUT (NOV. 28) - Prime Minister Salim al-Hoss on Wednesday accused Israel of planning a new wave of "aggression" against his country and denounced Israeli military activities in southern Lebanon as terrorism.

Mr. Hoss was reacting to a statement by Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens that the "the installation of a pro-Syrian government in Beirut encouraged terrorist actions."

Such remarks, Mr. Hoss charged, "are well-known pretexts to justify continued Israeli aggression against Lebanon."

The Israeli army, which patrols a "security zone" in southern Lebanon, has recently come under renewed attacks, including a raid by a Palestinian commando unit Tuesday that left five soldiers dead.

Israeli authorities have expressed concern over an accord this month under which eight secular and religious militias agreed to withdraw from Beirut and to hand over their positions to the regular Lebanese army.

There are fears in Israel that several of the militias will re-deploy in southern Lebanon to harass Israeli units in the region.

Israeli troops have staged frequent raids deep into Lebanon to attack Palestinian and other "terrorist" bases. In 1982 Israeli units pushed all the way to Beirut to drive out the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Mr. Hoss denied that anti-Israeli operations in southern Lebanon constituted terrorism.

"It is the continuing Israeli occupation of southern Lebanon, in defiance of United Nations resolutions, that is the real terrorism," Mr. Hoss said.

NOUMEA (NOV. 28) - France's Societe Le Nickel (SLN) will continue its investment policy despite an uncertain world nickel market, company president Yves Rambaud said here.

The weakening of the dollar and the increase in oil prices "could have made us decide to modify some of our investment plans," Mr. Rambaud said, but added the company "had no intention" of reducing its 200 million dollar investment plan launched last year.

SLN, the world's third largest producer of nickel and largest producer of ferronickel, also hopes to boost production at its mine here from 42,000 tons in 1990 to 47,000 tons in 1991, he said.

Mr. Rambaud, who has just ended a visit to this French South Pacific territory said the world market for nickel, New Caledonia's main economic resource, was currently depressed and uncertain.

The market was closely tied to the international economic situation, he said, adding the "we can expect a general slowdown in economic activity over the next few months.

New markets could open up for nickel producers in the mid-term if the reconstruction of Eastern European countries stimulated the economies of Western countries.

But this could be counter-balanced if the Soviet Union, which with exports of 80,000 tons per year was the main supplier of nickel to European foundries, "rocked the market by exporting 10,000 to 20,000 more tons," he warned.

The Federal Office of Statistics noted that the effect of the Gulf crisis on oil import prices began to make itself felt during the third quarter.

While German oil imports in the quarter rose 9.9 percent compared to the second quarter, the import bill was 17 percent higher, the office noted.

Also, while western German imports of other petroleum products during the third quarter fell by 2.1 percent, the costs for these rose 6.3 percent compared to the second quarter, the office said.

NAIROBI (NOV. 28) - African coffee farmers have lost more than 1.6 billion dollars since the collapse of the International Coffee Agreement 15 months ago according to Kenyan Vice-President George Saitoti.

"The lifting of quotas has led to increased export volumes which has caused considerable build-up of stocks in consumer countries leading to the 40 per cent drop in coffee prices, local newspapers quoted Mr. Saitoti as saying in a message to an Inter-Africa Coffee Organization meeting which opened here Tuesday.

The slump in world coffee prices after the breakdown of the agreement, which set export quotas, had led to a decline of 1.6 billion in African producers' earnings, said Mr. Saitoti who is also Kenya's Finance Minister.

Africa's share of the world coffee market has slipped from about 30 per cent in the early 1970s to 24 per cent, he added.

He called on delegates from African coffee-producing countries attending the five-day meeting to look at ways of cutting production costs without sacrificing quality.

In May, Kenyan coffee farmers, enraged at low prices, threatened to uproot their plantations. Coffee is Kenya's second biggest foreign exchange earner.

The free market had not benefitted any producers, Mr. Saitoti said.

JAKARTA (NOV. 28) - Indonesia is mediating in the dispute between the United States and the European Economic Community (EEC) in a bid to assure success for the Uruguay Round of trade talks, Indonesian Trade Minister Arifin Siregar said Wednesday.

"As leader of the Indonesian delegation, we try to mediate in the problem faced by the United States and the Cairns group on one side and the EEC on the other, so that they can do their best to turn the Uruguay negotiations into a success," Mr. Siregar said after meeting Indonesian President Suharto.

He said Indonesia had been trying to persuade member countries to take part in the next round of negotiations on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) in Brussels early in December.

Washington and the Cairns group, which also includes Indonesia, have threatened to boycott the Brussels ministerial meeting should no significant compromise be offered by the EEC on the issue of farm subsidies before that.

The United States has demanded that the EEC slash its farm subsidies by 75 percent while the Community has only been willing to reduce them by 30 percent.

But he said he believed it was unlikely the EEC would be able to make significant consessions because of current political events in Europe. He pointed to the upcoming German elections and said farmers there represented a large and influential vote.

MANILA (NOV. 28) - The Philippine government's budget deficit more than tripled as of October, the treasury bureau said here Wednesday.

The country suffered a budget deficit of 29.86 billion pesos (1.06 billion dollars) from the start of this year to October 22, 1990, an increase over the 7.2 billion pesos (257.1 million dollars) posted in the same period last year.

The government's failure to control its budget deficits led to the scrapping of a three-year 900 million dollar agreement with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) last month.

The IMF and Manila are presently trying to work out a new agreement but the Fund is reportedly skeptical about Manila's ability to raise enough revenue to check the public deficit.

Government revenues fell short of projections by 3.16 per cent or by 4.56 billion pesos (163 million dollars) as expenditures overshot their target by 4.03 per cent or 7.02 billion pesos (251 million dollars), the treasury bureau said.

Revenues as of October 22 amounted to only 144.11 billion pesos (5.15 billion dollars) while expenditures rose to 173.97 billion pesos (6.2 billion dollars.). The Philippines GNP averages officially 45 billion dollars.

TOKYO (NOV. 28) - Bank of Japan Governor Yasushi Mieno said Wednesday his central bank would maintain its tight grip on credit, despite recent cutbacks in prime rates charged by long-term credit banks.

He told a regular press conference the two rate cuts in two months by 0.8 point to 8.1 per cent "reflected the short-term movements of the market."

"It might have some psychological impact but our monetary policy should be viewed from a long-term perspective," he said.

In August, the Bank of Japan raised the official discount rate by 0.75 point to 6.0 per cent for the fifth hike in the key lending rate in 15 months.

A growing number of economists and market players forecast the economy to start slowing down at the outset of the next year as reflected by the cuts in the long-term prime rates.

But Mr. Mieno reiterated his view that the Japanese economy would continue expanding at least this year.

He also suggested the pace of Japanese economic growth should be reduced from an annual rate of five per cent to four per cent to take the heat off domestic prices by easing the supply-demand balance.

In a report Wednesday, the bank said sales and current profits by major manufacturing companies in fiscal 1989 rose to the highest level in 16 years as they strived to streamline their operations and expand their own capital.

Citing a survey of 379 major manufacturing firms, the report said their sales-profit ratio in fiscal 1989 rose 0.36 points to 6.01 per cent, the highest since fiscal 1972 when it stood at 6.23 per cent.

Fiscal 1989 ended on March 31 this year.

The ratio for the non-manufacturing sector, excluding trading firms, rose 0.19 points to 3.73 per cent, the report added.

Despite worsening external factors, like the yen's appreciation and higher crude oil prices, profitability of major corporations was expected to remain stable in fiscal 1990, it added.

BERLIN (NOV. 28) - The German railworkers' union reopened talks Wednesday with the Deutsche Reichsbahn, the former East Germany railway company, as traffic on the network returned to normal after a two-day strike, union officials said.

The talks centre on the union's demand for job guarantees and for east German railway employees to get pay rises giving them at least half of the western wage, they said.

The strike was called throughout the Reichsbahn late Sunday after its 260,000 employees voted massively in favour of an unlimited stoppage.

Passenger traffic throughout the former German Democratic Republic was brought to a standstill, except for suburban routes.

The union eased the strike late Tuesday, saying it had received indications that the government was prepared to ease its position on job cuts.

Transport Minister Friedrich Zimmermann has targeted 68,000 jobs that, he says must be cut if the network is to be saved. He also wants investment of 100 billion Deutsche marks (71 billion dollars) over the next 10 years.

SINGAPORE (NOV. 28) - Singapore Airlines (SIA), the U.S. carrier Delta Airlines and Swissair said Wednesday that higher oil prices triggered by the Gulf crisis would not affect their trilateral alliance.

They said a meeting of top executives here Wednesday had "set new guidelines and new directions" for the partnership formed last year to promote cooperation in operations and cross-purchases of common stock.

SIA's managing director Cheong Choong Kong told a news conference that the primary objective of the partnership was better service for customers including automation of operations, special fares, sharing of airport lounge facilities, joint passenger handling and promotions.

"When we got together we did not foresee the Gulf crisis and the higher fuel prices," Mr. Cheong said.

Both Mr. Cheong, Delta's chairman Ron Allen and Swissair president Otto Loepfe emphasised that the crisis would not affect the partnership among the three carriers, which together serve more than 300 cities in 80 countries.

"This alliance was formed for long-term relationships, not for short-term gains," said Mr. Allen.

SIA, which has consistently been voted among the top five airlines in the world in numerous surveys, signed a 10-year alliance with Delta in October last year and a long-term agreement with Swissair in December.

Mr. Cheong said the looming recession in the United States saw SIA's passenger and cargo load fall one to two percentage points from April to September compared with the same period in 1989.

The three partners also unveiled the new logo of their trilateral alliance which "symbolises the commitment of the three airlines to customer service par excellence worldwide."

"The meeting in Singapore has set new guidelines and new directions while the first in Atlanta in June laid the groundwork on directing and managing our activities," Mr. Cheong said.

He added there would be more joint activities, such as a door-to-door global express service for small parcels, and greater sharing of resources.

Mr. Allen said that the three airlines were competitors as well as cooperators and being grouped together in the alliance did not prevent each of them from expanding individually.

TOKYO (NOV. 28) - Japan and North Korea are holding talks on setting up a satellite link, a move that could boost discussions on establishing diplomatic ties.

Yasuo Koseki, a director of Japan's international telecommunications firm KDD, arrived in Pyongyang Tuesday to "sign an agreement on (a) direct communication circuit via satellite between Korea and Japan," the Korean Central News Agency said Wednesday in a report monitored here.

GOTHENBURG, SWEDEN (NOV. 28) - A man whose attempt to rob a bank was foiled by the bank's employees set fire to the building, injuring three people, police said Wednesday.

The man, who was about 25 according to witnesses, escaped and was still being sought by the police.

Police said the bank's employees were not intimidated by the would-be thief's threats and refused to hand over any money. The man then poured petrol on the floor before setting fire to it.

Firemen evacuated two employees and a client who were overcome by the thick smoke. They were hospitalized suffering from burns and intoxication.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) - A top-secret U.S. intelligence report estimated that Iraq would be capable of building a "crude" nuclear weapon within the next six months, The Washington Times reported Wednesday.

The report, which drastically reduced earlier estimates of a five-year lead time, was circulated among high-ranking U.S. officials earlier this month, the daily said.

The revised assessment spurred President George Bush's Thanksgiving Day speech last Thursday which sounded the alarm about Iraq's imminent nuclear capability the paper said.

Called a Special National Intelligence Estimate, the report was produced by the National Intelligence Council, a special analytical center under the direction of William Webster, head of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

It is based on the views of the CIA, the National Security Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency, military service intelligence units, and State and Energy department intelligence offices, the paper said.

The new assessment said that Israeli intelligence believes Iraq already has assembled a basic nuclear weapon, the paper said.

Iraq's first nuclear weapon reportedly would be of questionable reliability and could not be delivered by a ballistic missile or jet bomber.

"There's a lot of things he (Iraqi President Saddam Hussein) could do with such a device," a U.S. official with access to intelligence information was quoted as saying.

"The point is, if he has one weapon that is operational, it changes the dynamics of diplomacy in the Gulf," he said.

In Vienna on Tuesday, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) said a November 18-22 inspection of Iraqi nuclear facilities uncovered no evidence that Baghdad was diverting its enriched uranium to build a weapon.

The IAEA's findings were made public at Iraq's request.

According to U.S. officials familiar with the U.S. report, Iraq is estimated to possess 27 pounds (12 kilograms) of enriched uranium and may have acquired additional enriched uranium not monitored by the IAEA, which oversees compliance with the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons.

Iraq signed the treaty in 1969, and in 1972 agreed to two inspections per year of its nuclear reactors.

Geneva (NOV. 28) - The Japanese cities of Tokyo and Osaka are the world's most expensive to live in, according to statistics published here Wednesday.

They are followed by Libreville, Brazzaville, Oslo, Helsinki, Zurich, Geneva, Stockholm and Copenhagen in that order.

The list compiled by the business consultancy firm Corporate Resources Group was based on the overall cost-of-living index in September.

Tokyo was 70 percent more expensive than New York which was rated at 100 points, and Osaka at 153 points. The strength of the yen against the U.S. dollar chiefly accounted for the Japanese heading the list of 90 cities.

Libreville logged 147 points and Brazzaville 144 points, the same as Oslo.

Most western European cities were above the 100 point mark. The first Middle East city was Tel Aviv with 115 points, and further down Manama with 95 points.

At the bottom of the list was Quito with 52 points.

LONDON (NOV. 28) - British Prime Minister John Major took over from Margaret Thatcher on Wednesday promising new opportunities in Britain and pledging the country would play a "full and leading role" in Europe under his leadership.

"I want to see us build a country that's at ease with itself, a country that's confident, and a country that's able and willing to build a better quality of life for all its citizens," Mr. Major said.

Speaking to reporters in front of his new official residence at No. 10 Downing Street, he stated: "We have in front of us the building and development of an entirely new Europe, a building and development in which this country will play a full and leading role."

Mr. Major, at 47 Britain's youngest prime minister this century, paid tribute to the "enormous achievments" of his predecessor Margaret Thatcher who he said would be recognized by history as "a towering prime minister."

He made the remarks minutes after leaving Buckingham Palace where he was received by Queen Elizabeth II for the traditional "kissing of the hands on appointment" ceremony before being asked to form the next administration.

His first day in office began less than 18 hours after his dramatic victory in a three-way race for the leadership of the ruling Conservative Party and formally ended 11 and a half years of British government under Mrs. Thatcher.

Mrs. Thatcher leaves office after winning three general elections and as Britain's longest-serving prime minister this century.

Mr. Major, flanked by his wife Norma, thanked those who supported his campaign to replace Mrs. Thatcher and promised to work hard "to prove that trust was justified."

"I don't promise you that it will be easy and I don't promise that it will be quick." But he said the tasks he faced as prime minister were "immensely worthwhile" and added: "If you'll forgive me, I'll go into No. 10 Downing Street right now and make a start."

He then turned and walked into his new official residence, vacated by Mrs. Thatcher two hours earlier.

LONDON (NOV. 28) - John Major, Britain's new prime minister, will not be accorded the customary ''honeymoon'' to ease into his duties.

He will soon have to make important decisions on both domestic and European policy and show whether or not, as one critic put it, his government will merely be ''Thatcherism without Thatcher''.

The Conservative Party he now heads will cause him little difficulty at first. Major has already succeeded in rallying opposing party factions around him.

British commentators of every political stripe and many of Major's Tory colleagues agree that little will change at first. ''John represents the mainstream of conservative thought,'' said Kenneth Baker, Conservative Party chairman.

But in contrast to the autocratic style of Margaret Thatcher, Major is virtually certain to rely more on the advice of his Cabinet. Although an old school report card described him as ''cheeky'', Major, now 47, has gained the reputation of being a good listener.

That should help smooth his start at No. 10 Downing Street, especially if he makes some changes of emphasis when naming his Cabinet, such as giving Thatcher's challenger Michael Heseltine an important post despite criticism from right-wing Tories.

Another important task is a reform of the hated ''poll tax'' introduced by Thatcher.

Prague (NOV. 28) - The race for the partnership with Skoda is wide open again.

First, it looked as the Volkswagen was on the verge of clinching the deal with the Czechoslovak state-owned carmaker in mid-November. But suddenly, the French company Renault and its Swedish partner Volvo are back in the running.

The trump card in the French offer is that none of Skoda's 21,000 workers will be laid off. On the contrary, new jobs are to be created. This is an important offer in a country where the ''man on the street'', after 40 years of a socialist economic system, equates a free market economy with unemployment and social injustice.

French Minister of Industry Roger Fauroux even went as far as to promise that jobs will be safe at Skoda's components supplier companies.

Both Volkswagen and Renault are promising billions of dollars worth of investments, with Vw's offer being the higher one. While Renault is offering 2.6 billion dollars over five years, and says that Skoda can maintain a majority share, the German company is offering some 5.4 billion dollars.

Vw meanwhile is believed to have increased its bid, which however is coupled with the condition that it wants to gain the majority share of Skoda.

But Renault, trying to stay in the running, is sweetening its offer with other promises.

The French state-own concern is offering a transfer of technological know-how and inviting Skoda's active participation in other industrial projects, including modern nuclear power plants, components for the nuclear industry, an oil pipeline in Algeria, and ''equal partnership'' in the Czechoslovak truck manufacturer, Tatra.

BONN (NOV. 28) - The German government Wednesday intensified its sanctions against Iraq and Iraqi-occupied Kuwait and forbade almost all services carried out by Germans in the two nations.

German Economics Minister Helmut Haussmann said financial, postal, telecommunications and medical services would be exempt from the restrictions.

The Bonn cabinet had already forbidden any military and armaments cooperation with Iraq and Iraqi-occupied Kuwait, in line with the United Nations-imposed embargo on these countries and the October 10 European Community decision to back the embargo.

German offenders would face sentences leading to a maximum of ten years in jail.

KARLSRUHE, GERMANY (NOV. 28) - East Germany's Stasi secret police had a "mole" in the Bundeskriminalamt, the West German equivalent of the FBI, for at least 17 years, the federal prosecutor's office disclosed Wednesday.

In the latest case of infiltration of western agencies by the Stasi, police on Monday arrested the suspected informant, Ute Margot B., 42, and her husband, Johann Franz B., aged 50, it said in a statement.

Mr. B. joined the Stasi in 1968 and was sent to Bonn in the hope of recruiting an agent in a ministry, it said.

When that attempt failed, he met the woman a year later, seduced her and persuaded her to take part in his spying activities.

In 1971, she joined the Bundeskriminalamt and, after their marriage in 1972, smuggled documents out of the office which were secretly photographed by her husband, the statement said.

The photographs were handed on to Stasi agents in meetings, scheduled every two or three months, in which they were paid between 500 and 2,000 Deutsche marks (355 to 1,420 dollars).

Among the documents were reports on meetings by the agency's criminal investigation department and counter-espionage unit.

Mr. B. is in preventative detention, but Mrs. B. has been provisionally released, the statement said.

The federal prosecutor's spokesman, Hans-Juergen Foerster, declined to say whether the new instance of Stasi espionage resulted from tip-offs or confessions by former agents, after the Stasi was disbanded this year.

But he disclosed that in this year the west German authorities have issued 70 arrest orders against persons suspected of espionage.

A sticker attached to the handle of the knife read: "This is a warning against anti-Iraqi intervention in the Gulf."

Hospital staff declared a three-day strike to protest the assault, according to Palestinian sources.

CAIRO (NOV. 28) - Egyptian voters on Thursday will elect a new parliament, but the election will be boycotted by nearly all opposition parties who said the government failed to guarantee the ballot would be free and fair.

The election was called after voters in an October 12 referendum approved the dissolution of the previous parliament. The referendum followed a high court ruling that the assembly was elected under an unconstitutional electoral law.

With the exception of the leftist Progressive Unionist Party and a number of smaller groups, Egypt's principal opposition parties -- the New Wafd and the Islamic Coalition -- have vowed not to take part in the vote.

The Islamic Coalition groups the Labor Party, the Liberal Party and members of the Fundamentalist Moslem Brotherhood.

The boycotting groups, who held 95 of the 454 seats in the outgoing parliament maintain that under current circumstances, an honest election cannot be guaranteed.

But analysts are skeptical of the motives behind the boycott, as several of the opposition parties are dominated by a single individual and do not practice the democracy they preach.

The opposition parties point specifically to the continuing state of emergency that has been in effect since the assassination of President Anwar Sadat in 1981 and which permits arrests for preventative detention.

In addition, they object to electoral regulations and voter constituencies that have been drawn up by President Hosni Mubarak's ruling National Democratic Party.

The protest means that the already powerful National Democratic Party will have only the progressive unionists -- whose constituency is already limited -- to contend with.

The move is a further blow to political pluralism that President Mubarak has been carefully trying to cultivate.

BAGHDAD (NOV. 28) - The Iraqi Foreign Ministry on Wednesday insisted that Soviet workers would only be able to leave Iraq at the end of their contracts with firms in the country.

A foreign ministry spokesman, cited by the official INA news agency, also accused Moscow of staging a "tendentious campaign" on their fate and charged Soviet officials with making "negative" statements on the issue.

"Every Soviet national will be able to leave Iraq at the end of his contract of work," the spokesman said.

According to the spokesman, the Iraqi position was made clear by Foreign Minister Tareq Aziz, who visited Moscow on Monday for talks with Soviet officials on the Gulf crisis.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Vitali Tshourkine on Monday accused Iraq of failing to respect a timetable that he said had been set up last month to ensure the repatriation of Soviets detained in Iraq since August 2.

Last month, a Soviet presidential envoy visited Iraq and secured the release of 1,000 nationals.

However, only 350 of them left, according to Mr. Tshourkine, who said some 3,300 Soviets were still in Iraq, including 140 military experts.

Most of the Soviets are believed to be working for the Iraqi petrochemical industry.

BEIJING (NOV. 28) - China has been unable to repay 150 million dollars in loans due at the end of 1989, while its external debt rose from 41.3 billion dollars to 45.4 billion dollars in the six months to June, the China Daily said Wednesday.

China has repaid 17 billion dollars to creditors this year, mostly short-term loans, the official English-language daily said, quoting a State Administration of Foreign Exchange Controls official.

But it has failed to pay back 150 million dollars in project loans guaranteed for the end of 1989, mainly for joint-venture hotels, the official was quoted as saying.

Beijing has already agreed to new repayment terms with its foreign creditors, the official said, adding that long-term loans accounted for more than 80 per cent of China's external debt.

China also has internal debts amounting to 80 billion dollars.

HONG KONG (NOV. 28) - The local Roman Catholic church said Wednesday it planned to invite Pope John Paul II to visit the British colony in October to commemorate the diocese's 150th anniversary.

Church spokesman Father Louis Ha said the invitation had been extended

"It would seem uneconomical for the Pope to travel a long way to just visit Hong Kong. We're hoping some other church events would take place in the region around that time," Father Ha said.

BRAZZAVlLLE (NOV. 28) - More than 3,000 teachers in Congo decided Wednesday to go on strike in a bid to win civil service status, reliable sources said.

The teachers said they would refuse to work if the government reopened schools which it closed earlier this month following unrest, unless the authorities issued a decree granting them civil service status.

Representing more than 80 percent of the teaching establishment, the striking teachers were specially recruited by the government between 1986 and 1989 to make up for staff shortages.

Meanwhile, striking university students were split over whether or not to continue their walkout, which they began late last month in a bid for improved study conditions and a doubling of their scholarships.

JERUSALEM (NOV. 28) - Israeli Premier Itzhak Shamir will meet President George Bush in Washington on December 11, local reports said Wednesday.

Shamir originally planned to visit the U.S. in early December to accept a prize from right-wing Jewish organisations in New York.

An official invitation for talks between the two leaders was received in Jerusalem this week, said the reports, and officials said that Shamir would use the opportunity to explain Israel's position on the Gulf crisis and the occupied territories.

The invitation came after Bush's meeting last week with Syrian President Hafez Assad caused disappointment in Jerusalem on the background of sketchy communications betwen the Israeli and American leaders since they last met in December 1989.

According to the Israeli press relations between the two men are so bad that they do not even speak on the telephone.

SHENZHEN, CHINA (NOV. 28) - Officials in this southern Chinese city say they hope neighboring Hong Kong will scrap its mammoth airport project as a new airport here nears completion.

Some 5,000 workers from all over the country are working round the clock to finish the airport in China's largest Special Economic Zone, which is aimed at attracting foreign investment and technology.

"Only 246 days to trial operation," read a poster at the airport project site office here Wednesday.

Local government and airport construction officials said Hong Kong should abandon plans to build an airport of its own, whose estimated cost is 16.3 billion U.S. dollars and whose financing would extend far beyond 1997, when the territory reverts to Chinese sovereignty.

"There is no need for Hong Kong to build such an expensive airport," one official said. "Shenzhen's new airport is capable of helping Hong Kong if it becomes saturated."

The Hong Kong government has said the British colony stands to lose 13 billion U.S. dollars between mid-1990 and 2010 without a replacement for 65-year-old Kai Tak International Airport.

Shenzhen's single-runway airport in Baoan county is located on the western coast of the Pearl River estuary. It is planned to accommodate 44 to 48 airliners per hour and eight million to 10 million passengers annually.

A four-berth port next to the airport is partly completed, said Li Shihua, senior engineer and deputy department chief of the Shenzhen Airport Construction Planning Department.

The port is to serve air passengers to and from Hong Kong and the Portuguese enclave of Macau, Mr. Li said, and "immigration formalities will be simplified."

The airport will be fully operational by the end of 1991, Mr. Li said, adding that a second, adjacent runway is also planned.

Bangkok (NOV. 28) EFE - Cambodia's Khmer Rouge guerrillas will attend the upcoming round of talks on a United Nations-drafted peace formula for their war-ravaged country, the rebels said in a radio broadcast monitored Wednesday in Bangkok.

The rebels, who killed over a million people during their four-year stint in power in the 1970s, will send their top international negotiator, Khieu Samphan, to the conference in Paris to which all the warring factions have been invited.

Samphan is to discuss the proportional make-up of a proposed Supreme National Council (SNC) that would run the country with U.N. help after a cease-fire is declared and until general elections can be held.

The Paris meeting was called after the five permament Security Council members earlier this week revealed details of a plan calling for a U.N. peace-keeping force to be sent to Cambodia to monitor the demobilization of all warring factions.

Under the plan, foreign countries involved in the conflict would be required to cut off their support.

China is backing the Khmer Rouge and Vietnam is supporting Cambodia's current ruler, Hun Sen, whom they installed in power in 1979.

Immediately after the formula was announced, the factions began disputing the power-sharing arrangements proposed for the SNC, which the U.N. recommended should be chaired by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who heads a loose alliance of the three rebel factions.

The Khmer Rouge and right-wing nationalists have come out strongly against Hun Sen's bid to become SNC vice-chairman, while Hun Sen wants the number of seats increased so that Sihanouk's position would not tip the balance of power in the rebels' favor.

In Paris, meanwhile, the leader of the right-wing nationalist rebels, former prime minister Son Sann and Prince Norodom Ranaridh, who heads a tiny rebel force loyal to Sihanouk, said they would also be attending the Paris talks.

The Hun Sen government has yet to give its official response but said late Tuesday in Pnomh Penh it was studying the invitation to the talks, for which no date has yet been announced.

Moscow (NOV. 28) EFE - The Soviet Union, Cuba's main source of supplies and financial and political support for nearly 30 years, is ready to help Havana normalize its relations with Washington, the official daily Pravda reported Wednesday.

Pravda said with the loss of its trading partners in eastern Europe and +bearing in mind that the possibilities of the Soviet Union are not unlimited, clearly Havana is faced with the necessity of normalizing relations with Washington+.

Georgi Mamedov, head of the U.S. and Canadian department at the Soviet Union's Foreign Ministry, arrived in Havana late Tuesday to discuss the Gulf crisis.

But a foreign ministry official said it was likely that he would also discuss U.S.-Cuban relations.

The issue of these relations has been the subject of numerous Soviet press articles in recent weeks which frequently refer to the deteriorating economic exchanges between the Soviet Union and Cuba.

The Marxist government of Fidel Castro has relied heavily on direct aid from the Soviet Union and a trading system involving barter and subsidies with eastern Europe to keep its economy afloat.

The collapse of communist governments in eastern Europe and the Soviet Union's economic crisis have brought heavy cuts in the flow of oil, food and machinery sent to Cuba in return for sugar, nickel and fruit.

Havana's increasing isolation is aggravated by a U.S. trade embargo imposed in the early 1960s when Washington severed relations with Cuba, situated just off the southern tip of Florida in the Caribbean.

BUENOS AIRES (NOV. 28) EFE - President Carlos Menem, reacting to reports that even Argentina's loftiest institutions were riddled with corruption, has promised a crackdown on graft.

Several newspapers Wednesday carried a statement from Menem saying: "All the heads that are necessary will roll to end this scourge".

His pledge came after deputy Justice Minister Cesar Arias said recently that corruption had penetrated the executive, legislative, and judicial branches of government.

Arias said investigations at all level of government had started to root out officials involved in taking bribes and distorting documents.

Last week the government announced the creation of a special commission to investigate hundreds of private suits brought against the government which were suspected of being inadequately defended.

Legal officials said there were allegations that judges, state lawyers and plaintiffs had got together to fix sentences and make the government pay excessivie indemnities.

Rodolfo Barra, a new member of the Surpeme Court, said such irregularities could not have occurred without the compliance of magistrates.

About 80 percent of Argentines believe that corruption is rife at all levels of the administration, according to results of a private opinion poll released Tuesday.

BUENOS AIRES (NOV. 28) EFE - Argentine Foreign Minister Domingo Cavallo Wednesday slammed a campaign to obstruct negotiations with Britain over a fishing agreement in waters around the disputed Falkland Islands.

Speaking on radio, Cavallo said rumours had been circulated last weekend in Buenos Aires "aimed at creating an atmosphere of confrontation" between the two nations as British and Argentine delegations met in Madrid to draw up a preliminary agreement.

Despite the rumor campaign, Cavallo said, "a constructive scheme of cooperation" could be established as a result of the talks. The foreign minister refused to give further details on the negotiations as the two countries have agreed to release further information simultaneously Wednesday at 5 p.m. (1900 GMT).

The Buenos Aires business daily Ambito Financiero newspaper last week published a report that Britain had decided to increase the 150-mile fishing exclusion zone around the Falklands to 200 miles. The British ambassador in Argentina, Humphrey Maud, denied the report and Cavallo said he did not think Britain would be so "stupid."

Britain created the 150-mile exclusion zone to protect fishing stocks after winning a ten-week war with Argentina in 1982 over control of the Falkland Islands located in the South Atlantic.

Argentina has said the ban has caused it an estimated $300 million in lost revenues, and late last year the two sides met in Paris to discuss the ban, as a prelude to reestablishing diplomatic relations earlier this year.

Argentina has claimed sovereignty over the British-controlled archipelago, 300 km east of the Argentine mainland, since the early 19th century.

MADRID (NOV. 28) EFE - Spain's ruling Socialists dropped a political hot potato Wednesday when they suspended for at least a year a scheme for raising assessed property values by an average of almost 300 percent after it looked set to trigger a ratepayers revolt.

Saying his reform measures needed further "rectification," Economy Minister Carlos Solchaga admitted he misjudged public reaction to his review of declared property values that in many cases had not been updated for more than half a century.

But following a meeting with Premier Felipe Gonzalez, Solchaga insisted he "was not ashamed" of the plan, which he said homeowners had overreacted to out of "fears" and "unease" that were totally unfounded.

Gonzalez himself also appeared on the defensive, saying the government's aim was not to raise more revenue but ensure that the burden of taxation was distributed equitably, and added that even his loudest critics would admit the move is long overdue.

Although the hikes supposedly stopped 30 percent short of what the government believes to be current market value, some 13 million Spaniards were incensed to receive notices that the rateable value of their homes had soared by up to 2,000 percent. The average was expected to be around 270 percent.

They were not mollified by Solchaga's pledges that the scheme was intended to give local governments greater financial autonomy by boosting their revenue base and that the hikes in value would be offset by sharp cuts in the tax rates.

The mayors of Madrid, Valencia, Seville, and other cities urged people to file appeals against the new assessments, and thousands did so, soon giving rise to a horrendous tangle of paperwork.

Opposition politicians were quick to seize upon the issue, criticizing the scheme as unconstitutional and its proponents as bloodsuckers, and compared it to the "poll tax" which cost former British prime minister Margaret Thatcher much of her popularity.

Responding to Solchaga's concession, the secretary general of the conservative opposition Popular Party, Francisco Alvarez Cascos, said the Socialists "were carrying political cheekiness to new lengths - it just beggars all description."

If the government were sincere, Alvarez Cascos said, it would scrap the property tax scheme altogether rather than just putting it on hold in the name of political opportunism ahead of municipal and regional elections scheduled for next year.

"They are telling John Citizen, now just be calm, don't get worked up, stop filing those appeals, be sure to vote Socialist, and we'll be getting back to you the day after elections," he said. "This is a fiscal ambush," Alvarez Cascos added.

Even in Solchaga's own party, Deputy Premier Alfonso Guerra, who has long been at loggerheads with the economy minister, slammed the move as bad political timing since it would cost the Socialists votes in next May's polling.

Analysts said there were legal and constitutional flaws in the plan, since the the revaluations come just at the peak of a boom fueled by skyrocketing demand and widespread speculation that has forced up real estate prices to unrealistic and unsustainable levels.

BARCELONA (NOV. 28) EFE - Two bombs exploded Wednesday in a national tax office and a regional government building in the northeastern coastal city of Barcelona, causing considerable damage but no injuries, Spanish police said.

Hundreds of people evacuated the buildings before the bombs exploded at about 2 p.m. (1300 GMT) following telephone calls in the name of the armed leftist October First Anti-Fascist Resistance Group (GRAPO) warning that the bombs had been planted.

Police continued searching for a possible third bomb in the tax office.

GRAPO, which has killed some 50 people since it surfaced in 1975, recently claimed responsibility for a string of bombings in Madrid and northeast Spain in September.

The group has stepped up its attacks since one of its members died in May after a hunger-strike to protest the dispersal of imprisoned members to jails around the country.

FOZ DE IGUAZU, BRAZIL (NOV 28) EFE - Brazilian President Fernando de Collor Mello and his Argentine counterpart Carlos Menem Wednesday signed a nuclear pact banning either of the neighboring nations from building an atomic bomb.

The accord, signed in the Brazilian town of Foz de Iguazu, bans nuclear testing and allows for inspection of each other's nuclear plants.

The leading Jornal do Brasil daily described the nuclear pact as historic and said Menem would also ratify the Tlatelolco Treaty drawn up 20 years ago to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons in Latin America.

Both countries signed the treaty but it has only been ratified by Brazil.

But Brazil has failed to observe all safeguards included in the treaty arguing that neither Cuba or France, a nuclear power which is involved in many development projects in South America, were signatories.

Brazil and Argentina have launched extensive nuclear energy programs and international experts believe that both countries are capable of constructing nuclear weapons.

There have also been mutual suspicions between the two neighbors about the possibility of the other secretly developing an atom bomb.

NEW DELHI (NOV 28) EFE - Twenty-nine people were killed Wednesday in the latest violence in the troubled northern Indian state of Punjab, where Sikh rebels are fighting for independence, the Indian news agency PTI reported.

PTI said Sikh extremists killed six people and wounded another six in indiscriminate shooting attacks in two districts in the city of Amritsar, a center of the eight-year-old Sikh separatist movement.

A journalist and a leading Sikh rebel were among 23 other people killed throughout the state.

More than 2,500 people have been killed in separatist violence in Punjab so far this year.

Although Sikhs only comprise two percent of India's 880 million people, they form a majority over Hindus in Punjab.

Hindus represent 82 percent of the nation's population.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) EFE - U.S. Secretary of State James Baker and his Soviet counterpart, Eduard Shevardnadze, were to meet Wednesday for talks on Thursday's crucial United Nations Security Council vote to authorize the use of force to end the Gulf crisis.

U.S. officials said the meeting to study the resolution would take place in the Soviet delegation's offices at the U.N.

Moscow has said it will support the U.S.-backed resolution which is to give Iraq an deadline to adhere to previous U.N. rulings ordering Baghdad's withdrawal from Kuwait, which it invaded August 2.

Diplomatic sources from the United States, the Soviet Union and France have said the deadline will be set for January 15 and after that date the resolution will authorize the use of all necessary means to make Iraq pull out.

The proposed resolution is believed to have the support of at least 11 of the Security Council's 15 members.

Nine votes in favor and no vetoes by any of the five permanent members are required to pass the resolution.

Cuba and Yemen are expected to vote against, while China, one of the five permament members, has indicated it will abstain.

The stance of Malaysia, which has condemned Iraq but opposes the authorization of force, is still uncertain.

TOKYO (NOV. 28) KYODO - A SENIOR SOVIET ECONOMIST SAID WEDNESDAY HIS COUNTRY NEEDS JAPANESE MONEY AND TECHNOLOGY TO BOOST OIL PRODUCTION, STATING THAT ONLY

FOREIGN INVESTMENT CAN REVITALIZE THE SOVIET OIL INDUSTRY.

SPEAKING AT A SYMPOSIUM HERE, YOURI ERSHOV, DEPUTY DIRECTOR OF THE INSTITUTE OF FOREIGN ECONOMIC RELATIONS, SAID SOVIET OIL OUTPUT HAS BEEN ON THE WANE DUE TO LACK OF INVESTMENTS AND THE DOWNTREND WILL LEAD TO A 12 PERCENT FALL IN SOVIET OIL EXPORTS THIS YEAR.

SOVIET CRUDE OIL OUTPUT, THE LARGEST IN THE WORLD, FELL 5 PERCENT IN THE FIRST NINE MONTHS OF THIS YEAR IN A DECLINE ACCELERATED BY OLD-FASHIONED FACILITIES AND POOR INVESTMENT IN NEW OIL WELLS, HE SAID.

THE SOVIET ECONOMIST ALSO SINGLED OUT POOR SUPPLIES OF RELATED MATERIALS SUCH AS CEMENT, STEEL PIPES, AND PUMPS AS SHORT-TERM PROBLEMS FACING THE SOVIET OIL INDUSTRY.

ERSHOV SAID FOREIGN INVESTMENT IS THE ONLY WAY TO IMPROVE THE SITUATION AND THE NEW UNION TREATY NOW BEFORE THE SOVIET PARLIAMENT IS EXPECTED TO FEATURE MEASURES TO PROMOTE FOREIGN INVESTMENT.

THE TREATY, PRESENTED BY PRESIDENT MIKHAIL GORBACHEV, WOULD REDEFINE THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT'S RELATIONSHIP WITH THE 15 SOVIET REPUBLICS TO GIVE THEM CONTROL OVER VIRTUALLY ALL AFFAIRS EXCEPT DEFENSE.

TOKYO (NOV. 28) KYODO - THE GOVERNMENT HAS DECIDED TO CONDITIONALLY LIBERALIZE TWO ITEMS AFTER AN AGREEMENT IS REACHED ON FARM TRADE UNDER THE URUGUAY ROUND OF MULTILATERAL TRADE NEGOTIATIONS, GOVERNMENT SOURCES SAID WEDNESDAY.

THEY SAID THE ITEMS TO BE LIBERALIZED WILL BE STARCH AND MILK PRODUCTS, INCLUDING SKIMMED POWDERED MILK.

HIGHER TARIFFS WILL BE IMPOSED ON IMPORTS OF THESE PRODUCTS AFTER LIBERALIZATION, THE SOURCES SAID.

THEY SAID THE GOVERNMENT HAS JUDGED IT WOULD BE DIFFICULT FOR JAPAN TO RETAIN IMPORT RESTRICTIONS ON THE TWO ITEMS IN BILATERAL NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES.

LIBERALIZATION OF THE ITEMS WILL BE PUT OFF IF NEGOTIATIONS ON FARM TRADE ISSUES BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITY RUPTURE, THE SOURCES SAID.

THE GENERAL AGREEMENT ON TARIFFS AND TRADE (GATT) RULED IN FAVOR OF THE U.S. COMPLAINT AGAINST JAPAN'S IMPORT RESTRICTIONS ON THE TWO ITEMS IN 1987.

JAPAN, HOWEVER, REJECTED THE RULING, CLAIMING IT WOULD SEVERELY DAMAGE THE DOMESTIC DAIRY INDUSTRY AND INSTEAD PAID COMPENSATION TO THE UNITED STATES.

JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES HAVE AGREED TO DISCUSS THE ISSUE BY NEXT SPRING.

JAPAN HAD INTENDED TO RETAIN IMPORT CONTROLS ON THE TWO ITEMS UNDER THE GATT'S ESCAPE CLAUSE, BUT CHANGED ITS POSITION IN VIEW OF STRONG U.S. PRESSURE, THE SOURCES SAID.

TOKYO (NOV. 28) KYODO - SEVEN OF JAPAN'S NINE ELECTRIC POWER COMPANIES SUFFERED DECLINES IN UNCONSOLIDATED PRETAX PROFITS IN THE FISCAL FIRST HALF ENDED ON SEPTEMBER 30 AS HIGHER FUEL COSTS AND INTEREST RATES CUT INTO THEIR EARNINGS.

BUT EARNINGS REPORTS RELEASED BY WEDNESDAY SHOW ALL THE COMPANIES BOOSTING SALES IN THE SIX-MONTH PERIOD ON BRISK POWER CONSUMPTION STEMMING FROM AN UNUSUALLY HOT, DRY SUMMER AND STRONG INDUSTRIAL DEMAND.

IN A COUNTRY WHERE THE ECONOMY HAS BEEN GROWING STEADILY ON VIGOROUS DOMESTIC DEMAND, POWER DEMAND WAS PARTICULARY BRISK FROM THE ELECTRIC, AUTO AND STEEL INDUSTRIES, PUSHING TOTAL POWER SUPPLY BY THE NINE FIRMS UP TO A RECORD LEVEL DURING THE PERIOD.

COMPANY OFFICIALS NOTED THE DRY SUMMER FORCED THEM TO RELY LESS ON HYDROPOWER AND DEPEND MORE ON THERMAL POWER GENERATION, THUS CAUSING THEM TO PAY MORE FOR FUEL SUCH AS COAL AND OIL AND SLASHING PROFITS.

FOLLOWING ARE COMPANY-BY-COMPANY RESULTS FOR THE FISCAL FIRST HALF IN BILLIONS OF YEN WITH YEAR-TO-YEAR PERCENTAGE COMPARISONS IN PARENTHESIS:

FROM THE BULLS:

"Evidence continues to build that a bull market is being born here," says RAY HINES at the "Wall Street Generalist," who believes stocks have already seen the bottom. He sees "surprising rally potential 2700-2800 area by late December. Hines also looks for secondary issues to be strong performers in 1991. He thinks the economy is in a period of weakness but not a full blown recession. (CNBC "World Business", 11/28)

"I feel more strongly now than I did before that we've seen the lows," says RALPH BLOCK, market strategist at RAYMOND JAMES ASSOCIATES in St. Petersburg, Fla. "The market's response to some legitimate saber-rattling is getting better and better. If we go to war, as horrible as that would be, you would want to buy that shock wave that pushes stocks down. At least war enables us to see some resolution to the crisis." (WSJ, 11/28)

"The market's given a very good account of itself," says GLENN CUTLER of SCHEILD PROGRESSIVE ENVIRONMENTAL FUND. The market is "breaking out, and I think you're going to get an upside resolution to this market," according to Cutler, who also predicts the market could breach the 2800 mark. ("Investor's Daily", 11/28)

In a "perverse way," the stock market is already looking beyond the slowdown to a recovery, according to BOB HEISTERBERG of ALLIANCE CAPITAL MANAGEMENT. GOLDMAN SACHS INTERNATIONAL's PAUL FELDMAN agrees, saying, "The cuts in rates have helped investor confidence." ("Investor's Daily", 11/28)

FROM THE BEARS:

"The bulk of the fourth-quarter rally is behind us," says the pessimistic RICHARD McCABE, manager of market analysis at MERRILL LYNCH. He expects share prices to fall back near their October lows. (WSJ, 11/28)

Both large and small investors flush with cash participated in yesterday's rally, says ROBERT KING, head of OTC trading in Atlanta for ROBINSON HUMPHREY CO. Mr. King cautions, however, that yesterday's gains could be a "bear trap" or a short-lived rally in a bear market. (WSJ, 11/28)

STOCK MARKET:

The markets are not as jittery about the prospects of war because "we have something we didn't have a week ago: We have a deadline," says TIM SCALA of SEQUOR GROUP. "Most feel that nothing will happen before January 1." He says you "certainly won't see any bad news" before that date. (FNN "Marketwrap", 11/27)

"People don't want to be caught short here in case the market starts to run," says KENNETH DUCEY, senior vice president of institutional trading at S.G. WARBURG. (WSJ, 11/28)

Many analysts are predicting a rebound in stock prices after the first of the year, and LASKER, STONE & STERN's ROBERT SEIJAS says, "The most obvious causes behind an improvement in January is the fact that many institutions get an influx of new money." Factors such as retirement plans and insurance companies add to the amount of money in play in the market, according to Seijas. ("Nightly Business Report", 11/27)

"I think pretty much everyone is already well-positioned - where they want to be, that is - for the end of the year," says BRAD WEEKES at DONALDSON LUFKIN & JENRETTE. ("The Washington Post", 11/28)

RICKY HARRINGTON, director of investment policy at MARION BASS SECURITIES, says the market may have reached an equilibrium in its struggle to anticipate the most striking market-moving news. Investors, he says, have had plenty of time to absorb the impact that a recession and falling interest rates will have on the market for the next few weeks. And while the threat of war remains the market's great imponderable, that threat appears to have receded beyond the end of the year. Many investors seem happy enough that the crisis in the Mideast has not undergone any dramatic changes. "There's quite a bit of cash on the sidelines and no change in the Iraqi situation," 2 so investors put some cash to work, he said. "We have the status quo, so I think we're just going to keep floating in the (Dow industrials) 2450-2600 range with a slight upside bias." He adds, "The main problem is that there's no upside leadership. On the other hand, the market isn't responding to negatives." (UPI, 11.27 and WSJ, 11/28)

"There seemed to be more buyers around [yesterday] as well as some broader support in an array of stocks," says ED LAUX of KIDDER PEABODY. "It's encouraging that at the first sign of trouble, stocks didn't fall over and die. We'll have to see if this lasts." ("USA Today", 11/28)

"In light of all the fundamental problems that still exist, a few days of good activity in the Nasdaq and the broader market do not necessarily represent a major change in trend," says WILLIAM ROTHE of ALEX. BROWN & SONS. "It's probably too early to interpret this strength as a meaningful trend." (NYT, 11/28)

"If the market falls 5% to 10%, I intend to be a major buyer," says VICTOR SPERANDEO, president of RAND MANAGEMENT CORP. "If it's down less than 5%, I'd be a small buyer." Mr. Sperandeo says if war breaks out the market is likely to drop about 200 to 250 points and "I would be a buyer." (WSJ, 11/28)

Noting the slide in SQUARE D stock after takeover rumors were squelched, PAUL KRONLOKKEN at PIPER JAFFRAY & HOPWOOD says, "The only real message of the market today seems to be that it's going to be a long time before the 'takeover game' is hot again." ("The Washington Post", 11/28)

"What we're hearing from [takeover] buyers is that they are reluctant to do anything heroic until they have a clearer picture of the economy," says STEVE RATTNER at LAZARD FRERES. "Sellers are reluctant, wanting to receive what they feel is a fair price. I think we'll see a pickup [in mergers] but I can't predict when." ("USA Today", 11/28)

World markets "should be getting into a bull market phase, based on interest rates," says JOHN WRIGHT of BABSON-STEWART IVORY INTERNATIONAL in Edinborough. But those "cyclical influences" could be counteracted by any outbreak of hostilities, according to Wright. ("Investor's Daily", 11/28)

STOCK TIPS:

OPPENHEIMER & CO. recommends stock in COOPER INDUSTRIES INC., a Texas maker of electrical equipment, hardware, auto products and oil production equipment. It says the company's earnings should grow an average of 12% a year for the next two years. Oppenheimer calls the company's oil and gas equipment unit a "sleeping giant." ("USA Today", 11/28)

This week, PAINEWEBBER INC.'s chief investment strategist EDWARD KERSCHNER is distributing a paper called "If The Shooting Starts." He predicts a quick, sharp fall in stocks with the outbreak of war, but his paper includes a list of stocks to buy. Pinpointing several stocks that could benefit from reconstruction efforts in Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, he writes, "FLUOR CORP. has been selected as one of the contractors to boost Saudi oil production. ... FOSTER WHEELER CORP. has already been approached by the exiled Kuwaiti government to assist it in fixing equipment in the event of damage by the Iraqis. CBI INDUSTRIES INC., the maker of storage tanks could benefit too." In addition to these engineering stocks, Mr. Kerschner recommends some oil service stocks: BAKER HUGHES INC, HALLIBURTON CO. and NABORS INDUSTRIES INC. PaineWebber's energy analyst JIM CARROLL singles these companies out as having "excess production capacity and 3 the ability to ship over equipment quickly" to replace equipment damaged in any armed conflict. PaineWebber also recommend

CATERPILLAR, COOPER INDUSTRIES INC., DRESSER INDUSTRIES INC. and INGERSOLL-RAND in the event of war. (WSJ, 11/28)

LONDON (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Hambros PLC, the leading London merchant bank with interests in a wide range of financial services, announced its half year results to Sept. 30, 1990, today.

Charles Hambro, the chairman, said: "The Group's profit before tax advanced by 19 percent to 42.5 million pounds sterling. With the tax charge remaining low at 27 percent (1989: 23 percent), attributable profit and fully diluted earnings per share were broadly maintained.

"The board is declaring an increased interim dividend of 4 pence on the 20p ordinary shares and a dividend of 2.1p on the 1 pound non-voting shares. A dividend on the 7.5 percent cumulative convertible redeemable preference shares was paid on Oct. 1, 1990, at a cost of 4.8 million pounds.

"Banking profits rose by 20 percent to 32.8 million pounds, partly reflecting new capital introduced in June 1989. Many of our banking activities contributed to this advance, both at home and overseas.

"Hambro Countrywide (our real estate and financial services company and one of the UK's largest estate agency groups) returned to modest profitability in a subdued market.

"Profits from direct investments arose mainly from a number of significant investment gains realized during the period. Our banking ratios and liquidity remain very satisfactory. In current market conditions it is improbable that the Group's investment results can continue at the recent high levels, although we remain confident of further sustained contributions from them in the medium term. Hambro Countrywide is in a strong position to benefit from any upturn in the housing market, and we therefore continue to view its future with optimism."

LA JOLLA, CALIF. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Marrow-Tech Inc. (NASDAQ: MAROA, MAROZ) announced today that, as expected, it has begun commercial sales of its first products: skin2(TM) ("skin-squared") toxicity screening kits. The kits feature living, three-dimensional, human skin tissues that are grown from individual skin cells in vitro (in the laboratory), using the company's patented core technology. Commercialization of the kits in 1990 had been anticipated in previous company announcements.

Marrow-Tech has collaborated with major companies in the cosmetic, pharmaceutical, petrochemical and household product industries, in order to optimally develop and validate its screening kits prior to commercialization. Scientists from three of these companies, the Procter & Gamble Co., the Colgate-Palmolive Co. and Microbiological Associates, a leading testing laboratory, presented data from their studies of skin2 kits at a company-sponsored symposium yesterday in Baltimore. These scientists reported that skin2 can screen numerous classes of chemical compounds for their tendency to irritate or damage living tissues. Data obtained from testing on skin2 kits correlated with data from both animal studies (Draize ocular) and human skin patch studies. The scientists will also present their data this week at a major scientific symposium in Baltimore, sponsored by The Johns Hopkins Center for Alternatives to Animal Testing (C.A.A.T.).

Arthur J. Benvenuto, Marrow-Tech's chairman, president and CEO, commented, "skin2 is the first of Marrow-Tech's products to be commercialized since our initial public funding in June 1988. The launch of our first product is an especially significant milestone in Marrow- Tech's transition from a Research and Development to an Operating Company. We expect revenues from this product to be modest initially, and to increase as the marketplace incorporates this technology into its overall effort to accelerate the discovery and product development process."

Marrow-Tech plans to add efficacy screening products to the skin2 line in 1991. These additional skin2 products will allow scientists rapidly to test the efficacy of various products intended to benefit the skin, such as wound healing agents and growth factors.

AUSTIN, TX (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - LifeScience Corporation of Austin has obtained an exclusive license to a new time-release dietary formulation developed by Dr. Thomas J. Slaga, director of the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center's Science Park-Research Division near Smithville.

The formulation contains about 45 ingredients shown in animal studies to inhibit cancer development and produce other beneficial health effects.

While many of the ingredients are similar to those found in multi- vitamin and mineral supplements, Dr. Slaga said his formulation is the first to include helpful antioxidants and related compounds. It also is the first such formulation designed on a time-release basis.

Dr. Slaga is an authority on the environmental causes of cancer and cancer prevention. He has investigated many of the ingredients included in the new supplement for almost 25 years.

All ingredients in the formulation have been approved or recognized as safe by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration or scientific experts, he said.

Laboratory animal studies have demonstrated that individual compounds and combinations of ingredients in the formulation can inhibit cancer development in many animal tissues exposed to various cancer- causing agents, Dr. Slaga said.

Additionally, he said selected ingredients in the formulation have been shown to increase the animals' longevity while still other animal studies have indicated protection against cardiovascular and immunological disorders.

The next logical step should involve assessing the formulation's effect on pre-cancerous lesions in humans.

LOS GATOS, CA (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Caere(R) Corp. (NASDAQ: CAER) today announced that fourth quarter 1990 results, which will be fully reported in the third week of January for the period ending Dec. 31, 1990, are expected to fall short of current estimates by Wall Street analysts due to product delays. The Typist(TM) for MS-DOS(TM) and other IBM PC and compatible computers, will begin shipping in the first quarter of 1991, rather than the November date previously announced. Since September, the company has shipped several thousand Typist(TM) for Apple Macintosh(TM) computers, including reorders in October and November.

Two additional new products developed to run under Windows(TM) 3.0 are expected to be shipped by year end instead of the November ship date previously announced. OmniPage 3.0, the first 32-bit page recognition software product for the Windows 3.0(TM) environment, was shown at the recent Comdex show in Las Vegas, Nev. OmniPage Professional(TM), a page recognition software program that includes new capabilities for the desktop optical character recognition world, was also introduced earlier this month at Comdex.

IRVINE, CALIF. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Continuing to provide the OEM market with advanced digital audio tape (DAT) technology, WangDAT today introduced the Model 3600 DAT drive which provides 5GB capacity in a small, 3.5-inch form factor. "We believe the Model 3600 is the first available operational 5GB compression DAT drive in a 3.5-inch form factor," said Amyl Ahola, president.

The Model 3600 offers not only high capacity, but offers an MTBF of 60,000 hours -- a new level of high reliability in DAT drives. Key to this high reliability is the use of proven components from WangDAT's current 5.25-inch DATAClass(tm) mechanics in the new slim 3.5-inch drive mechanism. A low chip count, single-board electronics and 30 percent fewer parts than the 5.25-inch product further contribute to the Model 3600's high reliability.

The Model 3600 also offers high performance. The drive features a sustained transfer rate of 520KB per second, with the highest SCSI burst transfer rates yet available in the DAT industry -- 4.0MB/second (asynchronous) and 5.3MB/second (synchronous).

"This new class of DAT drives meets the latest 8mm technology head-on in the market," said Ahola. "It features a superior capacity/price performance ratio in a small form factor that accommodates a range of system platforms -- from engineering workstations to large file servers and mainframes."

The Model 3600 achieves a high 5GB storage capacity through a combination of hardware-based data compression and long-length tapes. WangDAT's data-compression drive incorporates the industry-proven Stac 9703 coprocessor and uses a Stac variant of the LZ1 (Lempel-Ziv) compression algorithm -- of which there are nearly 1 million users. WangDAT has implemented the compression function in a "look-aside" mode that provides compressed data size wherever feasible. This approach, unlike other methods, prevents data expansion; if compression does not decrease data size, the compressed data is discarded and the original, uncompressed data is written.

WangDAT, the leading supplier of DAT drives to the OEM and VAR markets, has an installed base of more than 5,000 drives. WangDAT designs and manufactures its products in the United States. Pogir, 44, will be responsible for marketing positioning and product strategy for the company's rehab product lines. Rehab prooducts are those designed for individuals requiring long-term usage. Specifically, Pogir will oversee the high-performance manual and prescription superlight wheelchairs manufactured by Action Technology, a new division of Invacare, as well as Invacare's various power wheelchairs and motorized three-wheeled scooters.

In addition, Pogir is responsible for monitoring consumer needs and providing product education to the sales force, therapists, and rehabilitation centers utilizing those products. He will continue reporting to Louis F.J. Slangen, Invacare's vice president of sales and marketing. "During the last ten years, Pogir's marketing and product knowledge have contributed greatly to Invacare's leadership position in rehab products," said Slangen.

Pogir joined Invacare in Jan. 1980 as a territory manager, responsible for dealer sales in central California. In 1981, Pogir moved to the the firms's corporate headquarters in Elyria, when he was promoted to product marketing manager for its oxygen concentrator line. Since that time, he has held a variety of progressively more responsible positions including product marketing manager - wheelchairs and homecare beds, and director of marketing - rehab products.

Before joining Invacare, Pogir served for one year as national sales manager for Stainless Medical Products, a small wheelchair manufacturer in San Diego, Calif. For five years prior to that, he was operations manager for Supersonic Radio, a manufacturer of consumer electronics and a division of ITT in Johannesburg, South Africa.

A native of Zimbabwe, Pogir served in the Royal Rhodesian Air Force and holds an executive MBA from Damelin College in Johannesburg. He, his wife and daughter are residents of Lyndhurst, Ohio.

Invacare is the leading U.S. manufacturer and distributor of prescription and standard wheelchairs, three-wheel scooters, respiratory equipment, hospital-type beds, patient aids, continuous passive motion devices and cardiovascular fitness equipment. The company prides itself on its premiere track record of innovation and new technologies. With 1990 annual sales estimated to reach $225 million, Invacare has operations throughout the U.S. and in Europe, Canada and Mexico. The firm serves more than 3,000 dealerships in North America and exports to other parts of the world.

PITTSBURGH (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Chambers Development Company Inc. (AMEX: CDVB) today announced that it has completed its acquisition of W.B. Industries Inc. in Cambria County, Pa.

As previously announced in May, the acquisition had been conditional upon reissuance by the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources (DER) to Chambers of W.B. Industries' permit to operate a landfill near Vintondale, Pa.

Since then, the DER has issued a permit modification making Chambers the permittee of the 27-acre Laurel Highlands Landfill in Cambria County, Pa.

"This acquisition enables us to better serve the western Pennsylvania market," said Alexander Rangos, Chambers executive vice president. "W.B. Industries has been providing safe and reliable disposal services to area residents for years. And now we welcome the opportunity to provide these services to the community in an environmentally sound and economically efficient manner."

Work on Chambers' Laurel Highlands Landfill is in progress. The 27-acre landfill footprint, located within a previously undeveloped 211-acre site, is being constructed using Chambers' state-of-the-art technology.

"This new Laurel Highlands Landfill fits well into our plans for multisite regional disposal systems that will provide long-term, environmentally safe solid waste disposal," Rangos said, adding that the site is more than 50 miles closer to Chambers' Altoona, Pa., transfer station than its Southern Alleghenies Landfill in Somerset County, Pa.

Chambers Development Company, headquartered in Pittsburgh, is one of the fastest growing U.S. companies with rankings on the Forbes list of the 200 Best Small Companies in America and on the Business Week Top 1000 U.S. Companies. Chambers is a leading environmental firm offering services in recycling, collection, hauling, disposal and landfill development.

The company also provides security through its wholly owned subsidiary, Security Bureau Inc., the 12th largest U.S. security firm.

YPSILANTI, MI (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Hydra-matic Division today presented Rima Manufacturing Company of Hudson, Mich., with General Motors' "Mark of Excellence" award, according to William J. Boskey, general director of Materials Management. The award recognizes Rima's outstanding performance in the areas of quality, cost, delivery, technology and management.

In presenting the award to Rima employees, Boskey said, "Quality and continuous improvement are keys to success in this very competitive marketplace. Rima's truly exemplary efforts contribute to world-class Hydra-matic transmissions, and we're glad to have you on the team."

Rima Manufacturing Company produces diecast aluminum components and screw machine components used in all Hydra-matic transmissions.

"The entire Rima team has been committed to the objective of continuous improvement in all parts of our business. Together we have succeeded. The conflict was hard, the triumph glorious, the achievement highly cherished," said Rima President Edward J. Engle Jr.

The prestigious award is part of the GM "Targets for Excellence" supplier development process, which is widely respected both internal and external to the supplier community. Since its inception in 1987, 184 suppliers or 10 percent of GM's supplier base undergoing full assessment, have received the "Mark of Excellence" award, which applies to suppliers of productive materials and service parts. The assessments are conducted by GM teams from purchasing, product engineering, manufacturing, and quality control activities. The teams assess suppliers in five key areas: quality, cost, delivery, management and technology. The "Mark of Excellence" is the top award available in the process.

Hydra-matic Division has 11 operations in seven locations in the U.S., Canada and France. The world's largest producer of automatic transmissions, Hydra-matic employs more than 27,000 people.

BAKERSFIELD, CALIF. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Nahama & Weagant Energy Co., (NASDAQ: NAWE) and its partner, John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., have agreed, subject to certain contingencies, to purchase 25 percent of Texaco's (NYSE: TX) leases in the Round Mountain Oil Field located northeast of Bakersfield, Rodney Nahama, president and chief executive officer, announced today.

Plans call for the development of an enhanced oil recovery program. Independent estimates of the recoverable oil in place range from 11 million to 17 million barrels. The property, which includes mineral rights to 1,760 acres, consists of 61 active and 36 other wells producing approximately 300 barrels of oil per day of primary production. This oil (gravity 17 degrees) typically sells at a price approximating 75 percent of West Texas Intermediate.

Nahama said: "Through this transaction, we are acquiring an interest in a field with substantial potential on a low cost basis. Based on the low-end estimate of 11 million barrels, the company's cost will be approximately $1.50 per barrel. We expect the company's ownership interest in the property to be between 11 percent to 12.5 percent. MacPherson Oil will purchase a majority of the remaining interest in the Texaco properties and will serve as operator. The transaction is expected to close before the end of December 1990.

"Our company is actively working to increase its proven oil and gas reserves both through selective acquisitions such as the present one as well as our exploration and development program. The company plans to drill some 45 to 50 exploration and development wells during the next 15 months."

Based in Bakersfield, Nahama & Weagant Energy Co. is an independent engaging in oil and gas exploration, development and production, primarily in California and Oregon.

LAGUNA NIGUEL, CALIF. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Furon Co. (NASDAQ: FCBN) announced today that for the quarter ended Nov. 3, 1990, net income was up 3 percent over a year ago to $2,256,000. Sales for the same quarter were down 5 percent to $79,068,000. For the year-to-date, sales are flat compared to last year and net income was up approximately 20 percent to $7,764,000.

Chairman Peter Churm commented that "the downturn in sales reflects a general softening in the economic climate particularly the general industrial markets served by the company."

Net income for the third quarter includes an extraordinary gain of $398,000 recognized on the settlement of certain terminated pension plans. Income before the extraordinary gain was $1,858,000 or about 15 percent below reported results in last year's third quarter. Year-to-date income before the extraordinary gain is 14 percent ahead of last year's results.

Fully diluted earnings per share for the quarter declined to $0.26 from $0.29 in the same quarter last year even though net income increased due to the conversion of the company's convertible subordinated debentures. The debentures were converted to common stock during the second quarter of the current fiscal year, and as a result, the company did not incur interest expense on those debentures during the third quarter. The fully diluted earnings per share calculation assumes that the debentures were converted at the beginning of the period and therefore requires the add back of interest expense incurred in last year's third quarter.

Furon is a producer of quality products for the industrial market. The company serves a wide variety of industries including petrochemical, aerospace medical, transportation, pollution control and fluid power.

SAN JOSE, CA (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Zenith Data Systems, a Groupe Bull company, today announced that it is developing a desktop personal computer (PC) built around the forthcoming multimedia extensions to Microsoft Corp.'s "Windows" operating environment.

At a press conference held here in conjunction with a multimedia developers conference, Andrew Czernek, ZDS vice president of product strategy and development, said the '386-based PC, planned for introduction in the first half of 1991, will have the Windows multimedia environment and an updated version of the MS-DOS operating system factory-installed on its hard-drive.

"Multimedia's marriage of computer, video, sound, CD-ROM and other technologies ultimately will have broad and exciting uses," Czernek said. "Initially, we will focus on training and other simulation-oriented applications that serve our primary markets: large businesses, government, and education."

Czernek said a multimedia Windows environment on a ZDS PC also could serve as the front end to "IMAGEWorks," an open systems, server-based document management system that provides archival retrieval of text, graphics and pictures. "IMAGEWorks" is offered by ZDS' sister company Bull HN Worldwide Information Systems Inc. of Billerica, Mass. "Our support for a multimedia Windows environment is the logical next step to our deep commitment to Windows-based graphical user interfaces," Czernek said.

Zenith Data Systems factory-installs Windows 3.0 and MS-DOS 4.01 on the hard disk drives of all its '286-, '386- and '486-based desktop systems, and includes a Microsoft Mouse with these PCs.

ZDS also installs Asymetrix Corp.'s ToolBook 1.0, a software construction set that can be used as a multimedia programming tool, on the hard drives of all its '386- and '486-based desktop systems. ZDS has shipped more copies of Windows than any other PC manufacturer by bundling it with all hard-drive desktop systems since 1985.

ZDS, a Groupe Bull company, is a leading manufacturer and marketer of portable and desktop microcomputers and monitors for single- and multi-user applications. With headquarters in Mount Prospect, Ill., and primary engineering and final assembly operations in St. Joseph, Mich., ZDS has manufacturing and sales facilities in more than 30 countries.

INDIANAPOLIS (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Ralph R. Whitney Jr., chairman of the board of RELM Communications, Inc., (NASDAQ-NMS: RGCY) announced today that RELM, O.F. Mossberg & Sons, Inc. and Maverick Arms, Inc. have signed a letter of intent to combine all of their operations into one new company. The new company's common stock would be owned 22 percent by the former shareholders of RELM and 78 percent by the former shareholders of Mossberg and Maverick and is expected to trade in the NASDAQ National Market System. Alan Mossberg would become chairman of the board and chief executive officer and Mr. Mossberg and his family would own the majority of the outstanding shares of the new company's common stock.

The transaction is subject to, among other things, further due diligence by each party, receipt of appropriate fairness opinions from the parties' investment banking firms, regulatory approvals, negotiation and execution of a mutually acceptable definitive agreement, and approval of such definitive agreement by the respective boards of directors and shareholders.

Mossberg is a privately held company headquartered in North Haven, Conn., which is engaged in the design, manufacture and sale of shotguns. Mossberg was founded in 1919 and believes it is the largest manufacturer of pump shotguns in the United States. Maverick is engaged in the same business as Mossberg.

Mossberg and Maverick's combined audited results for the fiscal year ended

Sept. 30, 1990, included sales of approximately $59 million and net income after taxes of approximately $4.5 million. For the fiscal years ended Sept. 30, 1988 and 1989, combined audited results included sales of approximately $38.7 million and $42.4 million, respectively, and net income (loss) after taxes of approximately $844,764 and ($1.6 million), respectively.

RELM designs, manufactures and sells land mobile communications equipment, cellular telephones, utility demand side management systems, electronic components and engages in contract manufacturing.

RELM's approximately 11 million common shares are traded in the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol RGCY.

"The transaction would combine the attractive Mossberg income statement with RELM's strong balance sheet," stated Mr. Mossberg. "We feel this is a 'win-win' transaction for all shareholders."

MIAMI BEACH, FL (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Digital Equipment Corp. (NYSE: DEC) and Systems & Computer Technology Corp. (NASDAQ: SCTC), a leading supplier of administrative applications for higher education, announced an agreement today to jointly market SCT's BANNER(A) Series for higher education running on Digital computer systems.

The agreement, announced at the annual meeting of the CAUSE educational technology association, is part of Digital's Cooperative Marketing Program (CMP).

The agreement enables the two companies to work more closely together to meet a broad range of customer needs in administrative computing, including student administration, alumni development and Finance.

"We are very proud to be Digital's newest partner in higher education," said Michael D. Chamberlain, SCT senior vice president of software and technology services. "We expect that the greater synergy between our sales forces will enable us to develop and implement the right administrative solutions for our mutual clients."

SCT introduced the BANNER Series in 1988. The first implementation ran on a Digital platform, and more than half of SCT's BANNER licenses are on Digital systems today. More than 200 BANNER systems have been licensed by institutions nationwide -- from small, private universities to large, statewide higher education systems.

"We are pleased to work with a leading vendor of administrative software for colleges and universities through our Cooperative Marketing Program," said Roger Strickland, Digital's education marketing manager.

"The combination of BANNER's rule-based architecture and Digital's distributed processing capabilities creates a computing environment that enables decision-makers at all levels to access strategic information. This access is vital to higher education's need to increase productivity and cost-effectiveness," Strickland said.

SCT provides administrative software and computing management services for higher education institutions and local government jurisdictions nationwide. The company's headquarters are in Malvern, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia.

Digital Equipment Corp., with headquarters in Maynard, Mass., is the leading worldwide supplier of networked computer systems and services. Digital offers a full range of computing solutions and systems integration for the entire enterprise -- from desktop to the data center.

CALGARY, ALBERTA (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - North Canadian Oils Ltd. (AMEX: NCD; Toronto, Montreal: NCO) has filed with the Toronto and Montreal Stock Exchanges, a Notice of Intention to extend its current Normal Course Issuer Bid to Dec. 14, 1991. Subject to regulatory approval, the company will be authorized to buy back up to 1,830,000 of its common shares representing slightly less than five percent of the issued and outstanding common shares.

Under the terms of its current Normal Course Issuer Bid, which expires on Dec. 14, 1990, the company is authorized to buy back up to 1,767,000 of its common shares. The company has recently commenced buying back its common shares and has, since Nov. 14, 1990, acquired for cancellation 50,700 shares at an average per share price of (Cdn.) $13.96.

Norm Gish, president and chief executive officer of NCO, commented that NCO believes the buy back of its common shares represents an appropriate use of its funds in that the current market price of the common shares fails to reflect the full value of NCO's assets together with its future business prospects.

MORRISTOWN, NJ (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Barringer Resources Inc. (NASDAQ: BARR) today reported that for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1990, the company reported sales of $2,698,000 compared to sales of $2,396,000 for the comparable quarter in 1989, an increase of 13 percent. Sales for the nine-month period were $7,338,000 versus $6,564,000 for the comparable period in 1989, an increase of 12 percent.

Barringer's net loss for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, was $705,000 or $.12 per share, versus net income of $70,000 or $.02 per share for the 1989 comparable quarter. The loss for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, was $1,366,000 or $.24 per share, versus a loss of $600,000 or $.20 per share in 1989.

Stanley Binder, president, commented, "Sales from our 49 percent owned Barringer Laboratories subsidiary (whose results are consolidated herein), continued to reach new record levels, driven by the outstanding performance of the Ontario-based environmental laboratory.

"During the third quarter, sales and marketing, as well as pre- production engineering activity for our Ionscan drug and explosives product line, continued at an intense pace. Ionscan was demonstrated for various federal and state governmental agencies with outstanding results, leading us to believe that purchase orders from these agencies will be received in the not-too-distant future. Orders have already been received to build a system for use in sawmills and for delivery to the Middle East. We expect to continue our efforts and resultant expense levels for the balance of the year in anticipation of forthcoming sales."

Headquartered in Morristown, Barringer Resources Inc. is a holding company with two operating entities. Barringer Laboratories, Inc. (NASDAQ: BALB), 49 percent owned, provides analytical testing services for the environmental and minerals industries. Barringer Instruments Inc. develops, manufactures and markets specialty analytical instruments for security, law enforcement, exploration and environmental monitoring applications.

MINNEAPOLIS (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - CEO Roger L. Hale today announced that Tennant (NASDAQ: TANT) will be making operational changes in the contracting portion of its floor coatings business in order to improve profitability and provide better customer service. The primary change will involve greater use of authorized independent contractors to apply Tennant floor coatings, and a reduction in company-owned application crews. This will result in a one-time charge to net earnings in the fourth quarter of $625,000, or 13 cents per share, to cover employee severance and other expenses related to the changes.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, Tennant's sales of contract floor coatings were $9.5 million, down 12 percent from the same period last year. Gross profit from this product line declined 44 percent due mainly to excess contracting capacity resulting from declining and geographically uneven sales.

Regarding the outlook for floor coatings, Hale stated, "Tennant has been in the business for many years and we continue to believe that it offers an opportunity for profitable growth. We are making steady progress in the refinement and expansion of our solvent-free coating system, which includes patented mechanical preparation processes and an Eco-Coatings(TM) product line. While we may experience a further order slowdown in the near-term due to general economic conditions and a shift in selling focus, we feel that the planned operational changes and continued product refinements will develop into a distinct competitive advantage."

Hale also commented on the outlook for full year 1990 earnings, "In our third quarter report we indicated that we thought we could surpass 1989's earnings per share, before unusual items in both years, provided that economic conditions did not deteriorate. So far during the fourth quarter, business conditions remain soft. Nevertheless, we believe it is still possible to achieve an earnings increase."

For 1989, Tennant reported earnings per share of $2.87 which included a 24 cents per share gain on the sale of land. For 1990, the company expects to report unusual and extraordinary earnings of about 67 cents per share, net of the 13 cents per share charge related to operational changes in the floor coatings business.

Tennant is the world's leading manufacturer of floor maintenance equipment.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Rowland Worldwide, Inc., the public relations subsidiary of Saatchi & Saatchi Plc (NYSE: SAA) and one of the world's five largest PR firms, has announced the full acquisition of its associate company in France, L'Agence Groupe 7. The firm will now operate as The Rowland Company, Groupe 7 in Paris.

Pierre-Jean Gre, founder of the company, continues as chief executive officer. The firm has long-standing associations with prominent clients in both the public and commercial sectors in France, including The Louvre, Paris International Conference Center, Sandoz Corp., EuroDisneyland and the Ile de France Agency for Corporate Development.

Rowland Worldwide, with 34 offices on five continents, is an independent operating unit of Saatchi Holdings. Headquartered in New York, the firm employs more than 750 people with annualized fee billings of $50 million.

In announcing the French acquisition, Herbert L. Rowland, chairman and CEO of the worldwide company, said the move was important in solidifying the company's place in the Continental European marketplace. "We're pleased that this relationship of several years has led to Groupe 7 now becoming The Rowland Company of France," he said.

European Chairman Alan Capper said the Paris operation would be an important component in the company's future operations. "The growth of Paris as a financial center and as a choice for headquarters offices of many multinational corporations underlines the importance of this market," he said.

NORTH BRUNSWICK, NJ (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Guest Supply, Inc. (NASDAQ: GEST) announced today that net sales for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1990 increased to $75,265,000 from the $69,879,000 reported last year. The net loss for the fiscal year was reduced to $333,000 or nine cents per share compared with last year's net loss of $1,861,000 or 49 cents per share.

Net sales for the fourth quarter were $21,266,000 compared to $19,182,000 in the prior year. Net income for the fourth quarter was $404,000 or ten cents per share versus a loss of $937,000 or 25 cents per share in the fourth quarter last year.

Commenting on the results, Clifford W. Stanley, president and CEO of Guest Supply said, "We are pleased with the progress we made in fiscal 1990 toward returning the company to profitability. The net loss was reduced to $333,000 from a $1,861,000 loss last year, and sales increased 14 percent if discontinued operations are eliminated for both periods.

"We are particularly pleased with the fourth quarter results. Sales in that period also increased 14 percent excluding discontinued operations, and the net income of $404,000 is a marked improvement from last year's loss of $937,000.

"Over the past two years we have made a substantial investment in building a national sales and distribution network. We are now seeing a return from this investment as sales volume exceeds the level necessary to cover the fixed costs associated with this expansion.

"In addition, improved efficiency and higher volume at our manufacturing facility resulted in that operation making a positive contribution to profitability in the fourth quarter."

Guest Supply is the leading manufacturer and marketer of toiletries, personal care products, and other amenities, as well as housekeeping and accessory products, to the lodging industry in the United States.

KING OF PRUSSIA, PA (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has cited Pennsylvania Power and Light Company (PP&L) for alleged violations associated with deficiencies in evaluating and qualifying equipment in its Susquehanna Steam Electric Station at Berwick, Pa., and failing to promptly correct those deficiencies once they had been identified. The NRC staff proposes to fine PP&L $25,000 for one of the violations.

The phrase "environmental qualification" refers to establishing that electrical equipment located in the reactor containment building has been demonstrated to be capable of working and withstanding the high temperature, pressure, radiation, and humidity conditions that would accompany an accident that releases a lot of steam and water into the building.

An NRC inspection was held on Aug. 13 through Sept. 7, 1990, at Susquehanna Units 1 & 2 to review the implementation of certain aspects of the licensee's environmental qualification program. The inspection was initiated after PP&L informed the NRC of problems with certain polyurethane damper actuator seals.

During the inspection, the NRC found that in addition to the seals, concerns also existed regarding the environmental qualification of certain "Limitorque" valve actuators.

The NRC was particularly concerned that although PP&L's staff identified the concerns with the valve actuators in March and July, 1988, the company had not at the time of the NRC inspection in 1990, adequately established the qualification of the actuators.

Although PP&L subsequently informed the NRC staff on Nov. 15, 1990, that it had completed an analysis and found the valve actuators to be environmentally qualified, Thomas T. Martin, regional administrator of NRC, Region I, expressed concern over the length of time that had already passed without resolution of these issues.

In the letter informing PP&L of this enforcement action, Thomas T. Martin, regional administrator, also said, "This violation represents a significant regulatory concern because it resulted in operation of the facility with a large number of safety-related motor operated valves of indeterminate quality for an extended period of time."

The base penalty for such a violation is $50,000. However, after taking into consideration the licensee's corrective actions and overall good past performance, the fine was reduced by 50 percent to $25,000.

PP&L has been given 30 days to either pay the proposed fine or to request in writing that all or part of it be withdrawn, giving the reasons for such a request. The company also has been given 30 days to admit or deny the alleged violation, to give reasons for it if admitted, then to describe the actions taken to prevent a recurrence in the future, and to give the date by which it expects to be in full compliance with NRC regulations.

WOODBURY, NY (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Comverse Technology, Inc. (NASDAQ: CMVT) today announced the appointment of Dan Bodner as director of its Government Systems Division with responsibility for the supervision of all activities in North America relating to the company's government systems products, including its multiple channel digital recording systems marketed under the name of AudioDisk(R).

Kobi Alexander, president and chairman of the board of Comverse, stated that, "The rapid escalation in the demand for these systems in the North American markets, combined with large new orders for AudioDisk emanating from our established customer base plus our current and prospective sales in Western Europe, create a very real possibility that worldwide revenues from our Government Systems Division will approach the level of our commercial product sales within the foreseeable future."

Bodner added that, "We are just beginning to scratch the surface of the market here and its looks like the potential business is very large. We are in the process of installing AudioDisk systems with two major North American government agencies and have active discussions under way with many of the largest potential users here. We are also in advanced negotiations for a joint venture to market a version of the AudioDisk system for a variety of local government and commercial applications. The potential demand for digital recording and processing in these areas is perceived as extremely large and Comverse believes that it has a meaningful competitive advantage in a number of these markets."

TORONTO (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Standard Trustco Limited today announced a net loss of $8,642,000 or $1.25 per common share, for the three months ended

Sept. 30, 1990, compared with net income of $4,154,000 or $0.55 per common share, for the corresponding 1989 period.

The third quarter results brought the loss for the first nine months of 1990 to $58,823,000, or $8.40 per common share, compared with net income of $12,006,000, or $1.60 per common share, for the first months of 1989.

The company said that the results incorporate the findings of an audit of the June 30, 1990 financial statements and are due primarily to the declining real estate markets and high interest rates that have dominated the economy for much of 1990.

Total assets of the company grew by 6.5 percent to $1,754,424,000 as of Sept. 30, 1990 from $1,646,947,000 a year earlier. The level of non-performing loans rose to $230,076,000 at Sept. 30, 1990 from $27,514,000 a year earlier and triggered a respective increase in the company's provision for losses on mortgages to $59,635,000 from $495,000.

The company said that it continues to work closely with its bankers and regulators to finalize a plan for the restructuring of its operations. The company said the adjusted book value of Standard Trustco's assets remains in excess of the deposits they secure and, in addition, more than 95 percent of all deposits are covered by the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation.

BEDFORD, MASS. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Atex Publishing Systems and Neasi-Weber International of Northridge, Calif., today jointly announced certification of an interface between Neasi-Weber's ADMARC display advertising order entry and management system and ATEX Architect ad dummying software.

Atex and Neasi-Weber have been working together at The Memphis Commercial Appeal to ensure completion of the project that interfaces all components of ADMARC to the Atex Architect system.

"With the ADMARC system interface in our portfolio of products, Atex rounds out its industry leading set of advertising products with the premier billing, accounts receivable, and MIS package available today," said Harland K. LaVigne Atex president, Worldwide Distribution. "Furthermore, the joint development of this interface demonstrates our continued commitment to integrating other systems into the Atex system."

ADMARC is a user-defined and fully integrated business management information system that links each step in the ad-publishing cycle, from order entry to accounts receivable. ADMARC handles all aspects of of ad processing, from reserving advertising space, pricing, and billing the ads to reporting on the information for business and marketing analysis. Unlike ATEX Integrated Advertising System Software, ADMARC does not actually create the composed ad, but with the Architect-ADMARC interface information can be passed between the two systems, giving newspaper publishers the opportunity to better manage their daily operations.

The Architect-ADMARC interface will allow display ad information taken on the ADMARC front-end system to be accessed by Architect software for ad dummying. At the conclusion of ad dummying, placement information can be returned from Architect to ADMARC.

In addition, newspapers can report and bill ads located on the ADMARC front-end system according to placement information supplied by Architect. Customers will also be able to print out page dummies of ad stacks for review by supporting departments in the newspaper.

MIAMI (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Florida Power & Light Company is assisting the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services in distributing applications for families seeking federal funds to help meet energy bills this winter.

According to Kathy McDonald, FPL manager of consumer affairs, applications for the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program are currently available at all FPL business offices. McDonald said applications must be filed with HRS between Dec. 3, 1990 and Jan. 18, 1991, and that eligibility for assistance is determined by HRS.

"This year the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program will provide an estimated $18.9 million in financial assistance to Floridians," said McDonald. She said almost $15 million was disbursed for electric service last winter.

"We're very pleased with that rate of success," McDonald said. "It shows that applications are reaching those customers who need help paying their energy bills."

She said families or individuals currently receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children, food stamps, supplemental security income or certain veteran's benefits generally qualify for the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program.

According to HRS guidelines, applicants must have a verified income that does not exceed the state's poverty level: $576 per month for a single person, $772 per month for two people, $968 per month for three people, plus $196 for each additional person. "A household with income exceeding the limit still may be eligible," McDonald said, "because some types of incomes are not considered by HRS."

Applications for Low-Income Home Energy Assistance are available at HRS offices, some city and county welfare offices and other community organizations, in addition to FPL business offices.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - FMC Corp. (NYSE: FMC) said today that it has developed a process which can efficiently deacidify and strengthen millions of books and other historic hand-written documents to keep them from eventually disintegrating into dust.

Dr. Robert S. Wedinger, manager of preservation systems at FMC's Lithium Division, said FMC has designed its process so that books can be taken directly off the shelf, put in sealed containers, treated in large quantities and returned to the library all without being touched by human hands. Wedinger spoke at a media briefing here.

According to Wedinger, another major advantage of the FMC process is that the treated pages are virtually indistinguishable from untreated ones. The entire process is non-toxic and environmentally safe.

"For years, there have been methods to save individual books by hand, but they are expensive and extremely time-consuming. These methods are used on only select books," Wedinger said. "Our process is geared for mass preservation of books to achieve economy of scale." Wedinger added that the FMC process is the only system which both strengthens paper as well as deacidifies for an extended useful life.

According to archivists at the Library of Congress, more than 300 million books in North American research libraries and 400 million in Europe are in need of some sort of preservation.

The Library of Congress alone has 21 million books and is seeking competitive bids from chemical processing companies for a program aimed at saving 16 million endangered volumes.

"We have been researching and developing this mass preservation technology over the past three years to solve the worldwide problem of book deterioration in libraries," Wedinger said.

Wedinger, a co-developer of the FMC process, said that FMC has opened a $1 million demonstration plant in Bessemer City, N.C., which is capable of treating 300,000 books per year. "Once we have contracts, we intend to build commercial plants near our customers to minimize transportation of the books," Wedinger said.

FMC Corp., headquartered in Chicago, is one of the world's leading producers of machinery and chemicals for industry, government and agriculture. The company operates 88 manufacturing and mining facilities in 24 states and 21 foreign countries.

The company divides its businesses into five major segments: industrial chemicals, precious metals, defense systems, performance chemicals, and machinery and equipment.

MOUNT CLEMENS, MI (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - First National Bank Corp. (NASDAQ: MTCL) announced today that its board of directors has adopted a Shareholders Rights Plan in which common stock purchase rights will be distributed as a dividend at the rate of one Right for each common share held as of the close of business on Dec. 18, 1990.

The Rights Plan is designed to deter coercive or unfair takeover tactics and to prevent an acquirer from gaining control of the company without offering a fair price to all of the company's shareholders. The Rights will expire on Dec. 18, 1998.

The Plan was not adopted in response to any effort to acquire control of the company, and the board of directors has no knowledge of any such effort now being contemplated.

In a letter being sent to shareholders, Harold W. Allmacher, president and chief executive officer, said the Plan is intended to protect the interests of First National Bank Corp.'s shareholders in the event the company is confronted with coercive or unfair takeover tactics. He noted that such tactics include "offers that do not treat all shareholders equally, the acquisition in the open market of shares constituting control without offering fair value to all shareholders, and other coercive or unfair takeover tactics that could impair the board of directors' ability to represent shareholders' interests fully."

Allmacher stressed that the Plan "is not intended to prevent an acquisition of the company on terms that are favorable and fair to all shareholders. The Plan is designed to deal with the very serious problem of unilateral actions by hostile acquirers which are calculated to deprive a company's board and its shareholders of their ability to determine the destiny of the company."

Each Right will entitle holders of First National Bank Corp.'s common stock to buy one share of common stock of the company at an exercise price of $60. The Rights will be exercisable only if a person or group acquires beneficial ownership of 25 percent or more of the company's common shares, commences a tender or exchange offer upon consummation of which such person or group would beneficially own 25 percent or more of the common shares, or if any person, alone or together with affiliates and associates, has become the beneficial owner of at least 10 percent of the shares of common stock outstanding and the board of directors has determined that such person is an "adverse person" as defined under the Rights Plan.

If any person becomes the beneficial owner of 25 percent or more of the company's common shares other than pursuant to an offer for all shares which is fair to and otherwise in the best interests of the company and its shareholders or if the board declares a person to be an adverse person, each Right not owned by such person or related parties will enable its holder to purchase, at the Right's then-current exercise price, common shares of First National Bank Corp. having a value of twice the Right's exercise price. In addition, if First National Bank Corp. is involved in a merger or other business combination transaction with another person in which its shares are changed or converted, or sells more than 50 percent of its assets to another person or persons, each Right that has not previously been exercised will entitle its holder to purchase, at the Right's then-current exercise price, common shares of such other person having a value of twice the Right's exercise price.

The company will generally be entitled to redeem the Rights at $0.01 per Right at any time until the 10th business day following public announcement that a 25-percent position has been acquired. The company may not redeem the Rights if the board of directors has previously declared a person to be an adverse person.

Details of the Shareholder Rights Plan are outlined in a letter, which is being mailed to all shareholders.

First National Bank Corp. is the parent of First National Bank in Macomb County and Bankers Fund Life Insurance Co. All are headquartered in Mount Clemens. The bank provides retail and commercial banking services to residents, businesses and institutions in Macomb County through its 15 offices. Bankers Fund, an Arizona reinsurance corporation, offers a variety of credit life and credit disability reinsurance to bank loan customers.

At Sept. 30, 1990, the corporation had 1,208,786 shares of common stock issued; 1,198,786 outstanding.

LOS ANGELES (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Caesars World Inc. (NYSE: CAW) announced that the U.S. District Court for the District of New Jersey today approved the previously announced settlement of lawsuits related to Caesars World's $22-per-share tender offer for any and all of the 2,175,945 shares of Caesars New Jersey Inc. (AMEX: CJN) it does not already own.

The offer, which had previously been extended, is scheduled to expire at 12 midnight (New York time) on Nov. 30, 1990. Caesars World does not currently anticipate further extensions of the offer.

Under the terms of the settlement, Caesars amended the offer to provide for the payment of interest on the offer price. For those shares tendered, interest began accruing on Sept. 22, 1990, and is being computed at the 26-week Treasury Bill rate of 7.45 percent (approximately $0.0045 per day) in effect on Aug. 20, 1990.

Also under the terms of the settlement, the company agreed to make an additional cash payment of 25 cents per share to shareholders of Caesars New Jersey whose shares are purchased in the tender offer, subject to final court approval of the settlement. Today's court decision is subject to appeal for 30 days.

As part of the settlement, Caesars World has agreed that in the event it purchases at least 549,792 shares of Caesars New Jersey stock in the tender offer -- giving the company ownership of at least 90 percent of the outstanding shares -- it will effect a merger of Caesars New Jersey with Caesars World or a Caesars World subsidiary. In such a merger, shareholders would be entitled to receive $22.25 per share in cash, without interest. Caesars World also has agreed to provide for appraisal rights in connection with the merger.

The offer continues to be subject to all terms and conditions in the offering materials previously distributed to shareholders.

Caesars World currently holds approximately 86.6 percent of Caesars New Jersey's 16,261,531 outstanding shares. As of the close of business on Nov. 27, 1990, approximately 1,748,384 shares had been tendered pursuant to the offer.

LONDON (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Maxwell Communications Corporation plc today released the following statement by its chairman, Robert Maxwell:

I am pleased to report that during the six months to Sept. 30, 1990, the group's profit before tax increased to 90.1 million pounds sterling, a rise of 5.9 percent (1989: 85.1 million pounds).

The directors have declared an increased interim dividend of 7 pence per share (1989: 6.5p) a rise of 7.7 percent.

These results were achieved in spite of the more difficult economic conditions prevailing in both the United States and United Kingdom as well as in the rest of the world.

Our operating profit from publishing at 108 million pounds was 50 percent ahead of the profits in the corresponding period last year. These results include full contribution from Macmillan and Official Airline Guides (OAG) whereas in the same period last year we only had the benefit of Macmillan's contribution for 10 weeks and OAG's for two weeks.

On a strictly comparable basis the operating profits of our publishing and information services businesses in the U.S. have increased by 12.5 percent compared with the same period last year.

The operating profits for the six months to Sept. 30, 1990, compared with the same period in 1989 show, because of deterioration in the U.K. and U.S. property markets, a sharp reduction in profits earned by the property division to only 15.1 million pounds (1989: 32 million pounds).

An increase of 30 million pounds in net interest costs arises from the consolidation of the acquisition of Macmillan and OAG. The increase in the net interest costs coupled with a sharp reduction in non- publishing profits were substantially offset by treasury management activities which achieved a foreign exchange profit of 45.7 million pounds (1989: 4.9 million pounds). The foreign exchange profit arose mainly from the process of managing the repayment of our short-term syndicated bank debt. In the second half of the year approximately 7 million pounds of foreign exchange profits have already been achieved.

As shareholders are aware, a very substantial part of the group's operations and assets are in the U.S.A. The 14 percent depreciation of the dollar against sterling during the period has therefore meant that for the time being our net assets in sterling terms have been reduced by an exchange translation loss amounting to 95 million pounds. As in prior years, this has been taken to reserves. Your board remains convinced that we have adopted the right policy of committing much of our long-term investment in the U.S. It is widely anticipated that there will be a strong recovery in 1991 in the value of the U.S. dollar, a view which your board shares. The effect of such a recovery would be to produce an unrealized profit which would in turn be credited to the group's reserves.

The increase in minority interests reflects a successful public offering in 1989 of Berlitz International Inc. and the preferred share placing by OAG.

Because of your board's refusal to dispose of assets at other than full prices no significant asset disposals were completed during the period under review. Consequently the net debt at Sept. 30, 1990, was 1.9 billion pounds and the interest costs were substantially higher than anticipated.

Since Sept. 30, 1990, the company has been able to complete at satisfactory prices disposals to the value of 258 million pounds.

We look forward to a satisfactory outcome for the year. Interim Results for the Six Months to Sept. 30, 1990 -- Pretax profit: 90.1 million pounds (1989: 85.1 million pounds) +5.9 percent

-- Earnings per share 10p (1989: 10.3p) -2.9 percent -- Interim dividend increased to 7p per share (1989: 6.5p) +7.7 percent -- Profit from publishing and professional data base information services 108 million pounds (1989: 71.8 million pounds) +50.4 percent

HARTFORD, CT (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Connecticut Natural Gas Corporation (NYSE: CTG) today announced that it will adopt a fiscal year ending Sept. 30 for financial reporting purposes, commencing in 1991. Currently, the company's fiscal year coincides with the calendar year.

Victor H. Frauenhofer, president and chief executive officer said, "The Connecticut Department of Public Utility Control, at the request of Connecticut's gas utilities, has authorized the companies to change their fiscal years. The principal purpose of the shift is to include a single and continuous heating season in each fiscal year and to reflect the industry's planning and gas procurement cycles. Fiscal years ending in September are common in the natural gas industry."

The company will continue to report on a calendar year basis through Dec. 31, 1990. In succeeding years, the company will report year-end results for the periods ending Sept. 30.

In an unrelated development, the company also announced that it will be repurchasing shares of its outstanding common stock in order to make those same shares available for issuance under its dividend reinvestment plan.

CNG has maintained a dividend reinvestment plan for many years. In recent periods, newly issued shares have been used exclusively to satisfy the plan's requirements.

In making this change to use repurchased shares, the company stated its expectation that the repurchase of shares will continue for the next several months.

The number of shares to be acquired is intended to reflect the requirements of the dividend reinvestment plant over this period.

MT. KISCO, NY (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Universal Voltronics Corp. (AMEX: UVL) announced today that the company has entered into an agreement with a large medical equipment manufacturer to provide 25 power supplies for use with a versatile medical system.

The power supplies will be designed for a portable X-ray diagnostic system that can be used in emergency rooms, operating rooms, and related mobile applications. Unlike other portable X-ray units, this system is highly flexible and can be used for multiple diagnostics including interventional neuroradiology, subtraction angiography, and neurovascular applications.

Universal Voltronics has been selected to provide the power supplies based on the company's experience in the medical diagnostic field and a proven ability to design and manufacture high-voltage systems in compact packages. For mobile applications, a compact power supply is critical to the end product's transportability.

"The potential market for this type of portable X-ray system is quite large," said Barry Ressler, president of Universal Voltronics. "We are pursuing new markets such as these to continue expanding our commercial customer base."

Universal Voltronics designs and manufactures high-voltage power conversion systems for scientific and energy research, industrial, medical, and defense applications. Universal Voltronics is a subsidiary of Thermedics Inc. (AMEX: TMD) and Thermo Electron Corporation (NYSE: TMO).

BERKELEY HEIGHTS, N.J. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Customedix Corporation (AMEX: CUS), a dental and medical products company, announced today that it had reached an agreement in principle with New Jersey National Bank (the "bank") on Nov. 26, 1990, to extend the term of its loan (originally due Dec. 15, 1991) to Dec. 15, 1993.

This extension is, however, subject to successful negotiation and execution by the parties of a modification of the current loan agreement providing, among others, for new financial covenants and a new interest rate. It is anticipated that the new interest rate will be somewhat higher than that currently in effect.

Dr. Gordon S. Cohen, chairman and chief executive officer of the company, stated, "It is my belief that this extension of the term reflects the bank's renewed confidence in our ability to repay debt in a timely and consistent manner."

Cohen also stated that in light of the relatively short additional term of the loan and the desire to obtain additional working capital financing, the company is, nonetheless, continuing its discussions with other lenders with respect to a refinancing of its indebtedness.

Customedix Corporation, through its subsidiaries, supplies materials, devices and disposables for dental and medical health care.

FREMONT, CALIF. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Lam Research Corp. (NASDAQ: LRCX) announced today that it is shipping one of its new Integrity Chemical Vapor Deposition (CVD) systems to the research consortium, MCNC (formerly the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina). In addition, MCNC officially instated Lam as its 11th affiliate member. As part of this alliance, the company's R&D team will work in concert with MCNC researchers to develop advanced CVD processes for the global semiconductor industry.

Chemical Vapor Deposition is one of the most demanding and essential steps in the manufacture of semiconductor devices. Without this vital process, advanced integrated circuit development would not be possible since the CVD reaction creates the film layers that become the building blocks of an integrated circuit (IC). These IC's or chips are used in a host of electronic and consumer products such as computers, telecommunications devices and automobiles.

According to Dr. Arnold Reisman, vice president of semiconductor research and technology at MCNC, "Lam's Integrity system is critical to our advanced CVD development work since it is capable of performing multiple process steps within a single chamber." This intra chamber approach is made possible by Integrity's controlled reaction environment which delivers tight control of flux, temperature, gas concentration and pressure, all crucial parameters in the successful deposition of advanced CVD films. "As a batch system, Integrity also offers important advantages in terms of cost-per-wafer processed," Reisman added.

MCNC, founded in 1980, is a private, non-profit industry and university consortium. Of its three divisions, the Center for Microelectronics concentrates on design, fabrication, packaging and test technologies to spur advances in sub-micron silicon integrated circuits. Comprised of 11 microelectronics affiliate members and seven associate members, MCNC's support extends to universities, research institutes and industry, and includes programs in advanced communications and supercomputing. About Lam Research:

Lam is a leading supplier of wafer processing equipment for the worldwide semiconductor industry and the leading supplier of single- wafer etchers. The company's broad product offerings are focused on etch and deposition, two of the most vital areas in the fabrication of current and future integrated circuits. Serving as the foundation for this focus, Lam has developed core technologies encompassing etch and CVD disciplines. Headquartered in Fremont,

Lam maintains customer support centers throughout the United States, Europe and the Pacific Rim to support its global customer base. Founded in 1980, Lam Research is publicly held and listed on the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol LRCX.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - A new audio conferencing service that uniquely features personal 800 numbers and an immediate conferencing capability is now available from MCI Communications Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: MCIC).

MCI Forum, the new service, carries a guarantee that calls will begin precisely on time and that no caller will have to wait more than 10 minutes for the conference call to begin.

"MCI Forum is ideal for businesses that are fast-paced, have wide geographic range, and for whom time is critical," explained C. Thomas Faulders, senior vice president of MCI Enterprise Group.

"The market for conference calling is expected to expand during times of uncertain economic conditions, especially as companies face cutbacks in travel costs. For the executive who manages a staff which travels frequently or is widely dispersed, MCI Forum is the ideal communications tool.

"MCI Forum can be used in almost any situation where a meeting could facilitate a business decision," continued Faulders. "Some examples include sales meetings, crisis management situations, contract negotiations, market research, and project management."

Two unique features of MCI Forum are Personal 800 Meet Me and ASAP Calling, which are designed to make conference calling more convenient. Personal 800 Meet Me allows the customer to use the same 800 number for all conference calls and is ideal for mobile executives who regularly schedule conference calls. At the scheduled time, travelling employees need only dial their company's dedicated 800 number to be bridged into the conference call.

ASAP Calling is designed for the business person who needs to set up a conference call immediately. As soon as the call request is received by phone or fax, MCI Forum conference operators call all participants and bring them into the conference call as quickly as possible.

Customers wanting to use MCI Forum simply call a special 800 number and a conference operator will assist in scheduling the conference call under a variety of options. In addition to Personal 800 Meet Me and ASAP Calling, MCI Forum also features Dial-Out Calling in which the operator calls each conference participant at a pre-reserved time and connects him or her to the conference. Canadian and international locations, as well as domestic sites, can be included in Dial-Out calls.

The charge for Dial-Out calls is 35 cents per minute and $6 per participant location for domestic calls. Cost for Personal 800 Meet Me is 45 cents per minute and $6 per participant location for domestic calls, plus a one-time setup charge of $35. Cost for ASAP depends on the call-type chosen, either Dial-Out or Personal 800 Meet ME, and is priced accordingly.

MCI Forum is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

BOSTON (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Gregory L. Moore has been named deputy managing editor/news at The Boston Globe, effective Jan. 1, it was announced today by Globe Editor John S. Driscoll.

In his new position, Moore will oversee daily news coverage in all areas. He will replace Kirk Scharfenberg, who was recently named editor of the editorial page.

A Boston resident, Moore is currently assistant managing editor/local news, a post he has held since Jan. 1, 1989. Prior to that, he was city editor for two years.

He joined the Globe in April 1986 as a senior assistant metro editor from The Plain Dealer in Cleveland, where he spent six years in various positions, as general assignment reporter, city hall reporter, state editor, and day city editor.

A 1976 graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University with a bachelor's degree in journalism and political science, Moore began his career in June 1976 at the Dayton (Ohio) Journal Herald as a general assignment reporter. In February 1980, he joined The Plain Dealer and in 1984 became part of that paper's management team as state editor.

KA'UPULEHU, HAWAII (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Families who thought a Hawaiian holiday getaway was impossible this winter can start packing their suitcases and suntan oil. Kona Village Resort's 1990 Holiday Package may be sold out, but The Big Island luxury family resort is offering a pre- or post-holiday package, available Dec. 14-25, 1990, and Jan. 2-15, 1991.

Guests can enjoy a four-or seven-night pre-or post-holiday package, designed for families to escape the winter doldrums and create holiday memories to last a lifetime. The plan includes accommodations in one of 125 individual Polynesian style, thatched-roof luxury "hales" (cottages), three meals daily, fresh flower lei and rum punch greeting upon arrival, two splits of White Star Moet Chandon champagne, two Hapi robes and airport transfers.

Pre- or post-holiday rates start at $690 per adult, based on double occupancy, excluding tax and gratuities. Additional nights can be booked starting at $172.50 per adult, double occupancy. Rates for children sharing the room with their parents are $135 per day for kids over 12; 6-12 years, $100 per day; and 2-5 years, $53 per day with a daily charge of $25 for infants.

Kona Village Resort's elegantly appointed hales are secluded from the outside world by the ocean, surrounding lagoons, gardens and ancient lava flows. With the absence of in-room telephones, television, radios and cars, the property provides a refreshing alternative to the commercial megaresort.

Days are filled with a diverse offering of activities under the resort's all-inclusive Full American Plan. There is a weekly luau feast and manager's cocktail party, plus unlimited use of outrigger canoes, Sunfish sailboats, tennis, snorkeling gear and glass-bottom boats.

The highlight of the trip for youngsters is Keikis in Paradise, a children's program featuring a variety of holiday activities and supervised fun, tailored to tots and teens. Little ones will make snowflakes and holiday decorations while learning about ancient Hawaiian holiday customs, participate in fishing contests, finger painting, hula lessons, net throwing, poi pounding and coconut husking. Children 6-12 learn how to play the ukulele, are taught about local marine life, hunt for seashells, compete in a tennis tournament, go fishing and fly kites. Teenagers engage in some of the same activities -- plus snorkeling, sailing lessons and volleyball games. Keikis of all ages explore the ancient rock carvings in the resort's 15-acre petroglyph field.

DALLAS (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - The number of jet transport accidents could be reduced if existing technology and basic procedures were better used by the commercial aviation industry, according to the retired chairman of The Boeing Co. (NYSE: BA), T. Wilson.

In a speech to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers here last night, Wilson said that "while the rate of commercial jetliner accidents is declining there will be more and more flights, due to growth; therefore, the number of accidents could actually increase."

Emphasizing his belief that commercial aviation remains the safest way to travel, Wilson cited studies suggesting the risk of death on a commercial flight in the United States is about one in eleven million.

But he said that the risk could be even lower if existing technology were used more effectively and more widely. He specifically cited ground proximity warning systems, instrument landing systems and wind shear detection systems.

"Roughly three-quarters of 1988-89 hull loss accidents could have been prevented had these tools been installed and properly used, preventing nearly 1,000 fatalities," Wilson said.

Wilson, who headed The Boeing Co. from 1972 to 1988, said that Boeing's position on improving flight safety stemmed from the company's study of more than 850 large jet transport accidents over three decades.

Manufacturers must improve their products, incorporating new concepts to enhance the abilities of flight deck crews and protect against human errors.

Airlines must not only emphasize safety, but focus major attention on basic procedures and good communications on the flight deck, Wilson said.

And, he added, governments around the world must provide precision approach guidance systems at the end of every runway at every airport handling commercial flights.

Wilson also cited flight simulators, flight data recorders and map displays as other examples of existing technology that could make flying safer if used more effectively.

WILMINGTON, Del. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Du Pont (NYSE: DD) will receive a 1990 Stratospheric Ozone Protection corporate award from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) "for industry leadership in CFC and Halon phaseout."

An individual award will be presented to William G. Kenyon, Du Pont senior scientist, "for scientific excellence in qualifying CFC alternatives for military specifications and worldwide electronics use," the EPA said.

The EPA awards, in recognition of "exceptional contributions to global environmental protection," will be presented tonight at a dinner held in conjunction with the 1990 International Conference on CFC & Halon Alternatives in Baltimore.

"A select group of individuals and organizations were chosen for the strong support they have provided for protecting the earth from the hazards of ozone layer depletion," said Eileen Claussen, director, EPA Office of Atmospheric and Indoor Air Programs. "Their technical achievements and leadership have played an important role in eliminating ozone-depleting substances."

According to the EPA, award winners include companies that advocated a complete elimination of ozone-depleting substances, associations that organized their members to find environmentally safe alternatives, and individuals who exhibited managerial and technical leadership in developing and deploying new ozone-safe technology.

Du Pont will have invested more than $240 million through 1990 in alternatives research and development and capital. The company could spend more than $1 billion over the next 10 years to commercialize its line of CFC alternatives.

In June, Du Pont announced authorization of funds to design four non-ozone-depleting facilities for alternatives, including a world-scale plant at Corpus Christi, Texas. The plants could satisfy most world needs for hydrofluorocarbon (HFC) refrigeration applications through the end of the decade.

This month, Du Pont expects to begin commercial production of HFC- 134a for refrigeration uses such as automobile air conditioning and home refrigerators.

The company has pledged to phase out production of CFCs as soon as possible but no later than the turn of the century.

LOS ANGELES (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Occidental Petroleum Corporation (NYSE: OXY) announced today that exploratory well Jivino-1 in Ecuador was successfully tested at a combined flowing rate of 3,819 barrels per day from three zones in the Cretaceous Napo and Hollin formations. The discovery well is located on Occidental's 494,000 acre Block 15, immediately south of the giant Shushufindi field in Ecuador's eastern jungle region, and is the fourth discovery out of five wildcat wells drilled.

The Hollin sand flowed at 950 barrels per day of 26.4 degree API gravity oil from perforations between 9,752 and 9,770 feet. The "T" sand flowed 1,872 barrels per day of 27.8 degree API gravity oil from perforations between 9,508 feet and 9,532 feet. The lower "U" sand flowed at 997 barrels per day of 18.4 degree API gravity oil and no water from perforations between 9,304 feet and 9,336 feet.

In announcing the new discovery, Dr. Armand Hammer, chairman and chief executive officer, said that the results of this well, together with Occidental's three previous discoveries in the area, give encouragement that other similar prospects in the vicinity of Jivino-1 could be equally successful, leading to the production of some 30,000 barrels of oil per day.

"Block 15 will be a significant producing area for Occidental and we will be able to achieve early production because our block is only a few miles from existing pipeline infrastructure," Dr. Hammer stated.

Block 15 was acquired in 1985. Occidental is the operator and holds a 100 percent interest. The other three discoveries, Limonchoca, Indillana-Itaya, and Indillana, are all located within a five mile radius from the new discovery.

TOKYO (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Mitsubishi Corporation today announced that it has established an Investor Relations Office at its headquarters in Tokyo.

The office's task is to develop understanding of the company among investment communities in Japan and overseas by providing information on its financial and corporate developments.

As a first step, it is distributing the company's consolidated interim financial results for the six months ended Sept. 30, 1990, which were announced in Tokyo today.

Assisted by a generally favorable economic environment, total trading transactions for this interim period were up 13.0 percent, an increase of Y1,138 billion ($8,252 million) over the corresponding period of the previous year, and amounted to Y9,917 billion ($71,863) million.

By type of transaction, import transactions rose 14.0 percent, an increase of Y220 billion ($1,592 million), due mainly to an increase in fuels. Being led by machinery, offshore transactions were up 8.5 percent an increase of Y196 billion ($1,422 million). Export transactions rose 10.6 percent an increase of Y128 billion ($932 million), due especially to an increase in machinery sales. Non- domestic transactions, as a result, were up 10.7 percent, an increase of Y544 billion ($3,946 million) over the same period a year ago. Domestic transactions rose 16.2 percent, an increase of Y594 ($4,306 million), which was attributable mainly to increases in transactions for metals and machinery, reflecting steady domestic demand.

Gross trading profit increased 10.6 percent to Y279 billion ($2,025 million), due to the increase in trading volume. Profits on securities also showed a gain of Y19 billion ($142 million), due mainly to a listing of an affiliated company. Income from consolidated operations rose 14.0 percent to Y24 billion ($177 million), despite increases in selling, general, and administrative expenses and net interest expenses.

Net income, as a result, increased 14.9 percent to Y34 billion ($251 million), exceeding the previous year's record high for an interim period.

The numbers of subsidiaries consolidated and affiliated companies accounted for by the equity method of accounting were 331 and 206, respectively.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD, NJ (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Enzon, Inc. (NASDAQ: ENZN) today reported a first quarter loss of $2.3 million, or 19 cents per share, compared with a net profit of $1.3 million, or 11 cents per share, for the same period a year ago.

No operating revenues were received this quarter versus $2.1 million for the first quarter of 1989. The operating loss for the current quarter was $2.8 million compared to $827,000 for the first quarter of 1989. The operating loss was primarily due to a 100 percent increase in research and development expenses, which resulted from a substantial increase in research personnel. "We have greatly expanded our research capability to further improve our proprietary protein-based drug delivery technology, PEGNOLOGY (SM)," said Gail Wasilewski, Enzon's vice president of finance. "This will allow us to expand the application of PEGNOLOGY to other therapeutic categories."

Enzon is a leading biopharmaceutical company developing improved therapies for life threatening diseases through the application of PEGNOLOGY to enhance the delivery of protein based drugs.

In March 1990, Enzon received its first marketing approval from the Food and Drug Administration for ADAGEN (TM), a treatment for a form of Severe Combined Immunodeficiency Disease (SCID).

LAS VEGAS (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - National Heritage Industries (NASDAQ: NHER) general partner of Heritage Hotel Limited Partnership I, announced today that they have resumed construction on the 310-room Chaparral Hotel.

Construction had been halted on the project as a result of non- performance by United Gaming Inc.'s (NASDAQ: UGAM) wholly owned subsidiary, United Coin, on the casino tenant-improvements. As previously reported, United Coin, the lessee for the gaming, food and beverage operations of the Chaparral, notified the partnership on Sept. 26, 1990, that their financial condition has created a situation which does not at this time allow them to continue with their segments of the project. No replacement for United has as yet been found, though discussions are continuing with several interest parties.

"In addition to announcing the resumption of construction, we want to take this opportunity to say that we are particularly gratified by the efforts and spirit of cooperation we received from Valley Bank of Nevada," said Fred Keiserman, vice president of National Heritage. "They are our primary lender for the construction of the hotel and have made it possible for us to resume the project, even under these most trying of circumstances."

The new opening date for the Chaparral Hotel, located at 901 E. Desert Inn Rd. 1/4 block from the Las Vegas Convention Center, is Feb. 1, 1991.

MINNEAPOLIS (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Minnesota U S WEST Communications (USWC) customers will receive "Billing Verification Requests" to determine possible credit-eligibility on their telephone bills. The bill inserts will be sent to the company's Minnesota customers in late November and December.

USWC customers will be asked to check their bills to ensure they are not receiving any services that they did not order or for which they are being mistakenly billed. In such cases, customers could be eligible for a credit. The USWC bill will now detail all optional services so that verification of services by the customer will be easy.

The verification process was recently approved by the Minnesota Public Utilities Commission. The action was a result of an agreement reached between the Minnesota Office of Attorney General (OAG) and USWC after the OAG initiated an investigation of company sales practices.

If customers believe they are entitled to a credit, they may call the toll-free number provided on their bill. Customers must call by Feb. 28, 1991, if they disagree with the bill summary or no longer require certain services. Customers may also call with any questions about their telephone bill.

WOODRIDGE, IL (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Vincent A. Naccarato, president and chief executive officer of Wilton Enterprises, today announced that Wilton Industries, Inc. will become the new name for the Woodridge, Ill.-based company, which went private in a management-led buyout in December 1988. Three divisions will make up the newly named company: Wilton Enterprises, Copco and Weston Gallery. Wilton's gross sales for the year ended July 31, 1990 were $72 million, up 20 percent from $60 million in the prior year.

The Wilton Enterprises division is a leader in developing and marketing consumer products worldwide for baking and cake decorating. Wilton offers specially designed Wilton baking pans, tools, supplies, wedding accessories, cake decorating publications and courses. It also has developed a line of insulated bakeware products called Even-Bake which further extends the company's line of bakeware products. Even-Bake bakeware recently was selected by Jeff Smith, the author of "The Frugal Gourmet," as his bakeware of choice. Among the reasons cited were the top quality construction, a superior insulation layer to prevent burning, an easy-to-clean finish and the extra benefit of being dishwasher-safe and rust-proof.

The Copco division is the largest supplier of enamel-on-steel tea kettles in the U.S. Copco also markets other fashion-oriented quality kitchenware products, such as plastic kitchenware, stainless steel and non-stick cookware, and water treatment/filtering products, the latter being a new field of entry. Copco has developed the Quad-Action Filtration System which provides cleaner, fresher, better-tasting water for drinking, cooking and baking. Copco distributes to department and specialty stores as well as to mail-order catalogs.

The Weston Gallery division offers high-quality fashion picture frames. The frames are offered in brass, silver, ceramic and fine wood. The collections of The Weston Gallery are designed to complement every style of home fashion. Five collections ranging from classic to contemporary are available and feature innovative packaging. The sturdy, open-front packages protect products and customers see and feel the frames. The self-standing packages also allow for easy merchandising set-up on any shelving system which creates an organized, upscale look and invites consumers to purchase with ease.

In October 1989, Wilton Enterprises acquired 50 percent of the common stock of Let Them Eat Cake, Inc. (LTEC), a Chicago-based commercial and retail baker of high quality premier pastries and cakes. The combination of Wilton's party stores and trend-setting decorated cake designs with LTEC's full service bakery facilities and downtown stores has enabled LTEC to offer its customers an all-new party cake and bakery concept. Vincent A. Naccarato also serves as chairman of Let Them Eat Cake and Wilton holds an option to further increase its ownership of LTEC. Currently, LTEC has eight locations in the Chicagoland area and a commissary in Cicero, Ill.

Wilton Industries, Inc. is a worldwide consumer products company focused on three distinct markets. The Wilton Enterprises Division is a leader in developing and marketing products for baking and cake decoration while the Copco Division is a market leader in offering quality kitchenware products. Wilton's newest division, The Weston Gallery, offers high-quality fashion picture frames in an innovative packaging format.

LOS ANGELES (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of The Bank of California has elected Adriana M. Boeka senior vice president and regional manager of its Beverly Hills office.

Prior to joining The Bank of California in January 1987 as vice president and regional manager of that office, Boeka was vice president and manager of Crocker National Bank's Business Banking Center from December 1984 until Crocker merged with Wells Fargo Bank in June 1986. She remained with the newly merged company until she joined The Bank of California.

From October 1970 to December 1984, Boeka served in various positions of increasing responsibility with Bank of America in Hawthorne, Calif., including a tenure as senior credit officer, head of corporate banking, and head of commercial real estate.

"We are extremely fortunate to have a talent like Adriana Boeka managing the private banking, business banking and entertainment lending segments of our business," said John Jenkins, executive vice president of The Bank of California.

"Her skilled leadership has translated into sustained growth for the bank in the very difficult and highly competitve Beverly Hills marketplace."

Boeka lives with her husband, Dennis, and their two children, Nicholas and Matthew, in Cheviot Hills, Calif.

STURBRIDGE, MA. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - SpecTran Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: SPTR) announced today that it is taking steps to increase portions of its manufacturing capability by 40 percent with operation expected to begin by June 1, 1991. The capacity increase reflects continued strong market demand for the company's multimode fiber products as well as potential near term growth beyond its patent license limitations.

This latest announcement of another increase in production capability is the third such addition. SpecTran entered 1990 with twice the capacity of a year earlier and recently announced an additional 22 percent increase expected to be operational by about the beginning of 1991. These increases were accomplished primarily through the upgrading and recommissioning of idle equipment. Although the company still retains additional idle equipment available for future use, the 40 percent increase announced today will result from converting portions of current operations from a five-day, three-shift work week to a continuous seven-day-per-week schedule. Efforts to recruit the approximate 37 percent additional staff will begin immediately.

Commenting on the changes, Raymond E. Jaeger, president and chief executive officer, said: "Although excited by this recent development, we continue to respond to improving market conditions with a mixture of confidence and caution. The decision to implement this latest capacity increase was based in part on a recently announced long-term agreement to supply product not restricted by any of our patent licenses. The current capacity increase, which is being effected with minimal capital expenditures, is required to meet shipments for forecasted sales as well as existing backlog which presently stands at approximately $5 million."

SpecTran Corporation develops, manufactures and markets glass optical fibers.

SAN DIEGO (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - First Capital Life Insurance Co. announced today a new educational program about retirement planning for women. Called "The Power To Retire In Style: A Seminar For Women About Money," the seminars will help participants develop a personalized financial profile that will show them how much money they will need at retirement, how much they can expect from Social Security, pensions, interest on savings and investments, and how large the gap between what they'll have and how much they'll need will be. First Capital Life coined a term to describe this deficit -- The Retirement Income Gap.

"Our program is unique in design," said James R. McDonough, senior vice president of marketing, First Capital Life. "Not only does it help women achieve mastery over the basics of retirement planning, but it also creates a personal financial profile and roadmap to plan for a comfortable retirement."

With women receiving an average income of just $6,300 a year at retirement, learning how to plan for the years after they stop working is critical. "This isn't something that can be put off until later or deferred to a spouse's management," McDonough pointed out. "Eighty-five percent of baby boom women will find themselves financially on their own for at least 15 years," he explained. "That means women must begin planning now."

The 90-minute program discusses several investment strategies and introduces First Capital Life's new financial program designed especially for women. The program uses life insurance to offer a flexible, tax-advantaged and cost-effective method for closing the retirement income gap.

"Because of the overall perspective on retirement planning our seminar provides, we expect 'The Power To Retire In Style' to become one of the most talked about programs in the industry," McDonough said.

CHICAGO (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Members of the United Transportation Union (UTU) on the eastern half of Santa Fe Railway have ratified an agreement that will reduce the size of crews on freight trains, Santa Fe announced today. The 88 percent approval on the eastern region follows approval of other crew-reduction agreements on the railway's Texas and Coast Lines in August, 1989.

The new agreement covers approximately 2,250 employees, or 53 percent of the railway's conductors, trainmen and yardmen. Under the agreement all trains on the eastern region will operate with a maximum of one conductor and one brakeman, plus one engineer. (Engineers were not involved in these negotiations.) Approximately 20 percent of the trains will operate with only a conductor in addition to the engineer. These "conductor only" trains will operate with no train length or train composition restrictions.

No employee will be severed arbitrarily under the new agreement. It is anticipated that approximately 700 of the eastern region UTU members either will take a severance allowance voluntarily, or be assigned to newly-established reserve boards.

"Coupled with the earlier UTU agreements on the rest of the railway, this gives us the potential to run trains with a two-person crew, a conductor and an engineer, all the way between Chicago and Los Angeles. This means improved service for our customers," said M.R. Haverty, Santa Fe president.

Santa Fe had also reached an agreement with engineers regarding wages and work rules effective Jan. 1, 1990. "All of these agreements were reached voluntarily with our unions, and are designed to enhance the railway's ability to compete while protecting the employees involved. They are truly 'win/win' agreements, and I commend the leadership and members of our operating unions who clearly understand the necessity to improve productivity so that we can be a stronger competitor against trucks. I am proud of the leadership role we have taken in this important area of labor relations," Haverty said.

MINNEAPOLIS (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Atrix International, Inc. announced today the results of its first quarter of operations. The company was formed through a merger of Atrix Tool, Inc. of Burnsville, Minn., and Tiempo Equities Inc., a Minneapolis-based blind pool. The merger was finalized in October 1990.

Sales for the first quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990 for the two companies that merged to create Atrix International were $1,158,560. This compares with combined sales for the same period the previous year of $1,017,385, a 13.9 percent increase. Atrix International reported a loss of $229,878, or $.06 per share, compared to combined net earnings of $33,881, or $.01 per share, for the two companies during the same period last year.

President and CEO of Atrix International, Clifford B. Meacham, said that the losses for the quarter were primarily caused by one-time, merger-related expenses and the expenses of opening a European sales office in the Netherlands. "The merger between Atrix and Tiempo gives us the capital to expand our distribution network and enhance our product line to better serve our growing customer base," Meacham said. "The Netherlands office will allow us to successfully expand and efficiently service the entire European continent."

Atrix International is a world leading supplier to field service technicians in the computer and electronics industries. The company manufactures and markets printed circuit board transport cases, vacuums for copier and laser printer maintenance, and static protection products. The company is a distributor of electronic hand tools as well as a full line of instrumentation and diagnostic products and custom assembles tool kits. With 3,632,544 shares outstanding, Atrix International common stock is traded on the local over-the-counter market in the Twin Cities and the company has applied for listing on the NASDAQ system.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company (NYSE: MHC) today announced that it has signed a contract to acquire the approximately $1.6 billion in deposits at 13 Goldome (NYSE: GDM) branches in the New York area. Ten of these offices will be converted into Manufacturers Hanover branches. The remaining three (in the Wall Street district and in midtown Manhattan) have been or will soon be closed by Goldome with their deposits transferred to nearby Manufacturers Hanover locations.

Of the 10 branches MHT is acquiring, two are in Manhattan, one in the Bronx, two in Westchester County, two in Orange County and three in Rockland County. In addition, MHT will be purchasing some of Goldome's non-branch affiliated deposits.

In 1989, Manufacturers Hanover purchased 11 other Goldome branches in the New York City area, with approximately $1.2 billion in deposits.

The purchase, which is subject to approval by New York state and federal regulators, is expected to be completed in the first quarter of 1991.

The transaction calls for the assumption by Manufacturers Hanover Trust of approximately $1.6 billion in deposit liabilities from Goldome. MHT said the new deposits would replace more costly wholesale borrowings. Other than a small amount of loans related to or secured by the deposit accounts, MHT will not acquire loans from Goldome.

Edward D. Miller, vice chairman of Manufacturers Hanover Corporation said,

"This acquisition is a solid strategic fit for our profitable regional bank in the tri-state area. These new branches strengthen our retail network and broaden our funding base of core consumer deposits."

With this acquisition, Manufacturers Hanover's retail deposits will increase to approximately $18.6 billion. After the conversion, MHT will have a network of 229 bank branches throughout New York state.

"We look forward to the conversion going even more smoothly than the last Goldome acquisition," said Michael Hegarty, Manufacturers Hanover group executive in charge of regional banking. "We're confident our new customers will be pleased with the high level of service and wide range of products that we have to offer." Goldome customers with consumer and mortgage loans will continue those relationships with Goldome.

BASKING RIDGE, NJ (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - AT&T (NYSE: T) announced today it has filed plans with the FCC to expand its MEGACOM(R) 800 Service. Now, companies in the United States that use MEGACOM 800 Service domestically and/or from Canada can be called by prospective clients in 52 overseas countries and Mexico.

The new service is called MEGACOM 800 Service-Overseas and MEGACOM 800 Service-Mexico. Domestic users of MEGACOM 800 Service can use the same access lines they already have to the AT&T node for the additional countries.

MEGACOM 800 Service is a discounted, toll-free calling service for companies with a high volume of incoming calls. MEGACOM 800 Service terminates at an AT&T access point or central office, so costs are lower, and each company can set up its own access arrangement to suit its needs. Access to the node is usually over a high speed 1.544 mbps (megabits per second) circuit, but it can also be by way of voice-grade circuits analog.

In the United States, large users of toll-free service have been using MEGACOM 800 Service for some time. Calling from Canada was added in December 1989. Individuals in Mexico and 52 other overseas countries can now call U.S. businesses on the same access facilities currently in use.

To encourage businesses to subscribe to the expanded service, AT&T will waive the $1,090 installation charge and the $20.50 per country installation charge for companies that order service before March 31, 1991, for installation before May 31, 1991. The savings on the country installation charge could amount to more than a thousand dollars if all 52 countries are ordered. Total savings could be more than $2,000.

MEGACOM 800 Service-Overseas provides additional savings for large customers. When service from the overseas countries and Mexico use the same access facilities as for domestic service, the $50 monthly Routing Arrangement service charge applies only once for both domestic and overseas.

Other MEGACOM 800 Service-Overseas savings come from discounts ranging up to 15 percent when usage goes above $30,000 per month, and additional discounts are added for volumes that rise above $250,000 for total MEGACOM 800 Service.

The new AT&T MEGACOM 800 Service-Overseas and AT&T MEGACOM 800 Service Mexico are scheduled to begin Jan. 5, 1991, though orders may be made now.

DALLAS (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Oryx Energy Co. (NYSE: ORX) today announced that it has agreed to sell its Midway-Sunset interests to Arco for a total consideration of $642 million.

"Our $750 million divestment program will now be essentially complete," said Robert P. Hauptfuhrer, chairman and chief executive officer of Oryx Energy. "Net proceeds from this transaction and previously announced sales amount to nearly $700 million. These funds, coupled with our substantial cash flow from operations, will allow us to reach our billion-dollar debt reduction target much sooner than planned.

"Strategically, this positions Oryx Energy as a company with greater balance between natural gas and oil in the U.S., which has been one of our major goals. This sale is part of an overall plan to reposition Oryx Energy. Divestment funds have been generated through the sale of assets, which are non-strategic to Oryx Energy's growth plans. In this case, we felt that the Midway-Sunset field would be of greater interest to a company with operations in California than to us," continued Hauptfuhrer.

Arco will pay $588 million in cash and assume $54 million of debt for the oil properties and related facilities, including an interest in the cogeneration plant. This will result in a reduction of $545 million in Oryx Energy's debt. Oryx Energy expects to record a net gain of $71 million from the sale, which is effective Nov. 1, 1990.

The Midway-Sunset field in Kern County, Calif. has recently produced 23,000

net barrels per day of heavy oil with steam flooding. Oryx Energy estimates total proved reserves associated with the field are 140 million net barrels.

Oryx Energy is the largest independent oil and gas company in the world, with assets of about $5 billion and proved reserves of a billion equivalent barrels. Oryx Energy conducts its domestic operations through Sun Energy Partners, L.P., of which it is the managing general partner and 98 percent owner. Oryx Energy trades on the New York Stock Exchange with the symbol ORX and the partnership with the symbol SLP.

CALGARY, ALBERTA (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Bow Valley Industries Ltd. announced today that the United Kingdom Department of Energy has approved the Plan of Development for the East Brae Field. The East Brae Field is located in Blocks 16/3a and 16/3b, approximately 165 miles northeast of Aberdeen. This is the fourth field to be developed in the Brae complex, joining South, Central and North Brae which are already on production. Total cost of developing the East Brae Field is estimated at CDN $2 billion. ($265 million Bow Valley share).

East Brae is a gas condensate field and will be produced by gas cycling in order to optimize liquids recovery. Gas cycling was first introduced to the North Sea at the North Brae Field. Bow Valley's 13.28 percent share of the reserves in the East Brae Field are estimated at over 37 million barrels of liquid hydrocarbons and over 200 Bcf of natural gas. First production is expected in December 1993 with peak rates of more than 100,000 barrels of condensate per day (13,300 BPD Bow Valley share) within two years.

Gas sales from the Brae area are expected to begin in late 1993 or early 1994. Gas will be exported through the SAGE pipeline currently under construction to St. Fergus, Scotland. The Brae group has a 50 percent equity in this pipeline which is designed to transport in excess of one billion cubic feet of gas per day.

The safety recommendations of the Cullen Report have been incorporated into the East Brae project from the conceptual planning stage. Extensive studies into the safety features of East Brae were a major aspect of the engineering design.

Participants in the East Brae development are:

Marathon Oil U.K. Ltd. (Operator)	35.84 pct.
BP Exploration	25.58 pct.
Bow Valley Petroleum (U.K.) Limited	13.28 pct.

TROY, MICH. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - American Banker, a trade journal serving the financial services industry, has reported that Standard Federal Bank (NYSE: SFB) was the nation's 18th-largest thrift institution in order of deposits as of June 30, 1990. According to the list, "Top 300 U.S. Thrift Institutions" appearing in the Friday, Nov. 16, edition of the publication, Standard Federal moved from 23rd a year earlier to 18th place, with $5,806,381,962 in deposits as of June 30, 1990. The new ranking also establishes Standard Federal as the largest thrift, by deposits, headquartered outside the states of California, Texas or New York.

"Standard Federal Bank is by far the Midwest's largest thrift depository," said Chairman of the Board and President Thomas R. Ricketts. "This is an indication of the tremendous value of our retail franchise, the stability of the Midwest market, and of the goodwill Standard Federal has garnered through the years in the communities we serve."

Other Michigan-based thrifts listed in the report were First Federal of Michigan, which moved to 30th from 27th place with deposits of $4,225,704,000, and Great Lakes Bancorp, which moved to 97th from 113th place with deposits of $2,045,520,000. The second-largest Midwest-based thrift in order of deposits, according to American Banker, is Talman Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of Chicago, listed at 29th with $4,278,559,000 in deposits.

Standard Federal Bank, headquartered in Troy, operates 117 branch offices throughout Michigan and Indiana, and has current assets of approximately $9.4 billion.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - A new audio conferencing service that uniquely features personal 800 numbers and an immediate conferencing capability is now available from MCI Communications Corp.

MCI Forum, the new service, carries a guarantee that calls will begin precisely on time and that no caller will have to wait more than 10 minutes for the conference call to begin.

"MCI Forum is ideal for businesses that are fast-paced, have wide geographic range, and for whom time is critical," explained C. Thomas Faulders, senior vice president of MCI Enterprise Group.

"The market for conference calling is expected to expand during times of uncertain economic conditions, especially as companies face cutbacks in travel costs. For the executive who manages a staff which travels frequently or is widely dispersed, MCI Forum is the ideal communications tool.

"MCI Forum can be used in almost any situation where a meeting could facilitate a business decision," continued Faulders. "Some examples include sales meetings, crisis management situations, contract negotiations, market research, and project management."

Two unique features of MCI Forum are Personal 800 Meet Me and ASAP Calling, which are designed to make conference calling more convenient. Personal 800 Meet Me allows the customer to use the same 800 number for all conference calls and is ideal for the mobile executives who regularly schedule conference calls. At the scheduled time, travelling employees need only dial their company's dedicated 800 number to be bridged into the conference call.

ASAP Calling is designed for the business person who needs to set up a conference call immediately. As soon as the call request is received by phone or fax, MCI Forum conference operators call all participants and bring them into the conference call as quickly as possible.

Customers wanting to use MCI Forum simply call a special 800 number and a conference operator will assist in scheduling the conference call under a variety of options. In addition to Personal 800 Meet Me and ASAP Calling, MCI Forum also features Dial-Out Calling in which the operator calls each conference participant at a pre-reserved time and connects him or her to the conference. Canadian and international locations, as well as domestic sites, can be included in Dial-Out calls. The charge for Dial-Out calls is $.35 per minute and $6 per participant location for domestic calls. Cost for Personal 800 Meet Me is $.45 per minute and $6 per participant location for domestic calls, plus a one-time setup charge of $35. Cost for ASAP depends on the call-type chosen, either Dial-Out or Personal 800 Meet Me, and is priced accordingly.

MCI Forum is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

ST. PAUL, MN (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - ZEOS International, Ltd. (NASDAQ: ZEOS) today introduced an '80386SX-based version of its popular notebook-style computer system. Weighing less than seven pounds and based on Intel Corporation's 80386SX processor, the new ZEOS notebook computer sells for $2,295. The price includes a hard disk drive, a built-in floppy disk drive, one megabyte of memory and a black and white VGA compatible display.

According to Greg Herrick, president of ZEOS International, "This new 80386SX-based notebook is a natural addition to our growing notebook product line. Our recently introduced ZEOS Notebook '286, based on Intel's 80286 processor, has proven to be extremely popular and has been receiving rave reviews in industry publications. The new ZEOS Notebook '386 offers customers the opportunity to purchase the increased processing power afforded by the '386SX. Both ZEOS notebooks are priced well below the competition and feature-for-feature offer our customers outstanding values.

"Both the '286-based and '386SX-based ZEOS Notebooks offer a combination of features not commonly found in notebook systems now on the market. There are very few notebooks systems that include a hard disk drive, plus a built-in 1.44 megabyte floppy drive and VGA display. The addition of the floppy drive enables ZEOS Notebook owners to easily load and transfer programs and files using industry standard 3.5-inch diskettes. In addition, the fluorescent backlit VGA display offers easy-to-read high resolution graphics capability while conserving battery life."

According to ZEOS, the new notebook includes a snap-in, snap-out battery which will "quick charge" in one hour and "trickle charge" while the system is being used. Under typical use, the battery will provide two or more hours of operation between charges, longer if programmable power-saving features are used. Other features include an 82-key keyboard with full 101-key emulation and industry standard I/O port connectors for the operation of external devices such as printers and color VGA monitors.

Optional items include a 2400 Baud MNP Class 5 modem, memory up to five megabytes, extra batteries, a battery charging station and a carrying case.

"The unique features combined with the $1,995 price for the '286- based product and the $2,295 price for the '386SX notebook offers ZEOS customers two of the very best values in the notebook product category," Herrick said.

The ZEOS notebooks are available directly from the company by calling the ZEOS 24-hour-a-day order line. The Toll Free number is 800-423-5891. The company also provides purchasers of its notebook system with a 24-hour-a-day Toll Free help line should they have any questions once they have received their system. In addition, purchasers receive a 30-day money back guarantee and a one-full-year limited warranty.

Commentaries on the ZEOS Notebook system may be found in the Nov. 27, and Dec. 25, 1990 issues of PC Magazine, the November issue of Portable Office, the December issue of PC Sources, the Nov. 12 issue of InfoWorld and the Oct. 29 issue of PC Week. Other reviews of the ZEOS Notebook will be forthcoming in various trade publications.

ZEOS International, Ltd., manufactures and markets, direct to end users, ISA and EISA (Industry and Extended Industry Standard Architecture) personal computer systems and workstations based on the Intel 80286, 80386 and 80486 microprocessor world-wide under the ZEOS name. The company also provides contract manufacturing services under the name NPC Electronics and distributes passive electronic components through its Parts1 distribution division.

ARLINGTON, VA. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - American Management Systems, Inc. (AMS) (NASDAQ-NMS: AMSY) and Bell Atlantic International, Inc. (BAII) today announced that the two companies have agreed to jointly market telecommunications billing and customer contact systems to international clients.

Under the terms of the agreement, AMS will provide its TieLine software and professional software consulting services to Bell Atlantic International for marketing in select countries.

Charles Rossotti, chairman and CEO at AMS, said: "Recent deregulation and privatization, together with increasing competition in the marketplace, have created new systems needs for telecommunications firms and PTTs outside the United States. These needs parallel those facing local and interexchange carriers in the North American market, where TieLine software has been extremely well-received. We look forward to working with BAII to make this technology available to international clients."

Bell Atlantic International, a subsidiary of the Philadelphia-based Bell Atlantic Corporation (NYSE: BEL), offers network services and consulting to telephone authorities throughout the world and, in partnership with Ameritech, owns Telecom Corporation of New Zealand.

Bell Atlantic Corporation is the parent company of New Jersey Bell, Bell of Pennsylvania, Diamond State Telephone (Delaware), and the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Companies of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Washington, D.C. In addition, Bell Atlantic Corporation is the parent of companies that provide mobile communications in the mid- Atlantic region, and business systems solutions for customer-based information technology, including software, systems integration, hardware and software service and support and financial services throughout the U.S. and internationally.

In July, 1989, Bell Atlantic and American Management Systems established a joint venture, Bell Atlantic Systems Integration Corp., which provides assistance and life-cycle support in the areas of network integration, strategic systems development and MIS productivity services.

RIVERDALE, IL (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Reductions in its order book for most product lines, apparently caused by a slowing domestic economy and international uncertainty, have led the Acme Steel Co. (NASDAQ-NMS: ACME) to revise its estimates of fourth quarter performance.

"In October, when we reported third quarter profits of $2,145,000 or 40 cents per common share, we indicated that we expected to continue this earnings level in the fourth quarter," explained Brian W. H. Marsden, Acme president and chief executive officer.

"Since then, however, we have seen the long-predicted economic slowdown quickly translate into reductions in our order book for most of Acme's product lines. Although the company continues to benefit from the cost reductions that our 1990 capital investment program generated, and from the stabilizing effect of our downstream integration program, it is unlikely that we will achieve our third quarter earnings level for this quarter," Marsden added.

Marsden indicated that he could not provide an estimate of fourth quarter earnings due to uncertain economic conditions and the ongoing cost/selling price squeeze.

Acme Steel Co. is a fully integrated producer of steel, steel strapping, steel tubing and pipe, and automobile and light truck jacks.

STATE COLLEGE, PA (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Uni-Marts, Inc. (NASDAQ: UNMA A)

today announced that while the company anticipates higher earnings than in the prior fiscal year and is financially and operationally healthy, it has retained the investment banking firm of PaineWebber Inc. for the purpose of exploring various financial restructuring alternatives and other methods of enhancing stockholder value.

In light of the conditions in equity markets and unavailability of equity funds for expansion through acquisitions, management has determined to explore some extraordinary measures. These measures include the creation of an Employee Stock Ownership Plan, the sale of certain assets of the company and the sale of a portion or the entire company. Management has determined that it is in the best interests of the stockholders to explore these methods of enhancing stockholder value at this time.

Uni-Marts, headquartered in State College, Pa., is a leading independent operator of 341 convenience stores located in Pennsylvania, western New York, southern New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

KANATA, ONTARIO, (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Newbridge Networks gave the first demonstration of Fast Frame Relay technology at the TMA trade show today in Brighton, U.K., by transferring data between two remote LANs (local area networks).

Frame Relay is the new data communications protocol which adopts a similar approach to X.25 packet switching but at higher speeds. It is ideal for traffic consisting of data bursts. Its major difference to X.25 is its faster speeds (up to 2Mbits) and the reduction of protocol overhead, providing greater speed and lower delay during transmission.

Frame Relay is being developed to meet the needs of a growing data communications marketplace. The growth of networking combined with lower computing costs has meant that for some companies, data communication is growing at a rate of 60 per cent per annum compared to voice communication which at best is growing at 10 per cent per annum. Originating from the ISDN Blue Book, Frame Relay is a LAP D frame structure conforming to I.441, operating at the OS Layer 2 level.

Newbridge Networks is an international company which specializes in the design manufacture and marketing of voice and data communications equipment for global networks. Offices and manufacturing facilities are located in Canada, the United States, Europe and Asia.

Newbridge Networks Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: NNCX) is a public company whose common shares are listed for trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange (NNC) in Canada and quoted for trading on the NASDAQ National Market System (NNCXF) in the United States.

KANATA, ONTARIO, (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Newbridge Networks (NASDAQ-NMS: NNCXF) and Mercury Communications announced today that Mercury has become the main authorized distributor for Newbridge products in the United Kingdom. The Newbridge range of MainStreet digital communications networking products joins Mercury DataComs' product and services offerings.

This new business partnership with Newbridge helps to strengthen Mercury DataCom's position in the U.K. data communications market. Don Parry, general manager of Mercury DataComs explained, "We believe that our greatest strength lies in the value-added services we offer. Because we are Mercury, we can offer customers the one-stop shopping they need, with complete end-to-end solutions, including the public network and private circuits." He added that since the formation of Mercury DataComs in April, "our turnover has easily placed us within the top ten U.K. data communications companies - our aim is to be within the top three by the mid-90s.

Andy Grant, business development manager for Mercury DataComs, explained the importance of the relationship, "Newbridge is one of the world's most technically advanced networking manufacturers and we believe that this partnership will endure that MainStreet becomes one of the most successful product ranges of its type in the U.K. Our aim is that Mercury DataComs should become synonymous with the world's best products. MainStreet fits this ideal perfectly."

"This agreement will place greater emphasis on the U.K., which in terms of size, represents more than 50 percent of the total European market," commented Bert Whyte, vice-president of European marketing at Newbridge. "Mercury DataComs' knowledge and experience of the U.K. data communications market make it an ideal partner to distribute the full range of Newbridge integrated networking products," added Whyte. "This strengthens our positioning with the corporate networks in the U.K."

Mercury DataComs was formed earlier this year to consolidate private voice and data networking resources within Mercury to offer a total approach to system integration. The prime target of this new organization is seen as the Times' Top 1,000 companies.

The MainStreet product line has been designed to exploit the potential of private and public digital networks. It comprises a wide range of multiplexers, LAN/WAN integration products and advanced voice compression technology all of which may be controlled by the Newbridge range of Network Management systems.

Newbridge Networks is an international company which specializes in the design manufacture and marketing of voice and data communications equipment for global networks. Offices and manufacturing facilities are located in Canada, the United States, Europe and Asia.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Oppenheimer Capital, L.P. (the "Partnership") (NYSE: OCC) today reported net income of $3,215,000 or $.39 per unit for the fiscal quarter ended Oct. 31, 1990, on a greater number of units outstanding, compared to net income of $3,200,000 or $.40 per unit for the fiscal quarter ended Oct. 31, 1989. For the six months ended Oct. 31, 1990 net income amounted to $6,628,000 or $.82 per unit on a greater number of units outstanding, compared to net income of $6,425,000 or $.80 per unit for the six months ended Oct. 31, 1989, an increase of 3.2 percent. The Partnership owns a 32.85 percent general partnership interest in Oppenheimer Capital (the "Operating Partnership"), one of the largest independent investment management firms in the United States.

As previously announced, the Partnership has declared distributions of $.85 per unit for the six months ended Oct. 31, 1990 as compared to $.8375 per unit for the six months ended Oct. 31, 1989.

Results Of The Operating Partnership Joseph M. La Motta, Oppenheimer Capital's president and chief executive officer, reported the financial results of the operating partnership.

Total assets under management were $19.1 billion at Oct. 31, 1990 up 5.2 percent from $18.1 billion at Oct. 31, 1989.

Investment management fee revenue increased 1.8 percent to $16.5 million for the quarter ended Oct. 31, 1990, from $16.2 million for the quarter ended Oct. 31, 1989. For the six months ended Oct. 31, 1990 investment management fee revenue increased 11.4 percent to $35.0 million from $31.4 million for the six months ended Oct. 31, 1989.

Operating income for the quarter ended Oct. 31, 1990, decreased 15.4 percent to $6,802,000 from $8,045,000 for the quarter ended Oct. 31, 1989. For the six months ended Oct. 31, 1990 operating income decreased .4 percent to $15,589,000 from $15,657,000 for the six months ended Oct. 31, 1989.

Total assets under management, investment management fee revenue and operating income for the quarter and six months were adversely affected by the 13.8 percent decline in the securities markets as measured by the Standard & Poor's 500 index for the quarter ended Oct. 31, 1990. "In addition operating income for these periods was impacted by costs associated with the continued expansion of our mutual fund business," La Motta said.

WORCESTER, MA AND PROVIDENCE, RI (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - BankWorcester Corporation (NASDAQ: BNKW) and Citizens Financial Group, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of The Royal Bank of Scotland Group, plc, jointly announced today that they have mutually agreed to terminate their proposed merger. The merger was originally announced on Feb. 16, 1990, and provided for Citizens to acquire BankWorcester at a price of $22.50 per share.

"Fundamentally, our mutual decision to terminate reflects the significant changes that have occured in the economy in general and the banking industry in particular since the time our agreement was negotiated and signed," George Graboys, president and chief executive officer of Citizens, and Harold Cabot, president and chief executive officer of BankWorcester, said in a joint statement.

"Notwithstanding our decision to terminate the merger, each of us continues to have high regard for the other's company and for the contributions our companies make to the communities we serve," Graboys and Cabot continued. "Both our companies continue to enjoy capital ratios that are well in excess of all current and proposed regulatory requirements and are strong performers both in their respective markets and in comparison to other institutions."

Under the terms of the merger agreement, Citizens' obligations to consumate the merger were subject to a number of significant conditions, including a condition that the amount of non-performing and certain other assets (the "specified amount") not exceed $50 million after receipt of regulatory and stockholder approvals. As of Sept. 30, 1990, the specified amount was $68 million.

"Over the first nine months of this year, BankWorcester experienced significant increases in non-performing assets and charge-offs and reported a net loss of approximately $6.2 million," Graboys said. "These increases and results made it highly unlikely, in Citizens' view, that all conditions to the merger could be satisfied."

"BankWorcester proposed to Citizens a variety of possible ways to restructure the transaction, including the possibility of reducing the specified amount below $50 million by placing certain non-performing assets into a liquidating trust to be funded with merger proceeds, but no agreement could be reached," Cabot said.

Citizens is a $3.1 billion regional bank holding company based in Providence, R.I.

HOUSTON (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Doctors at Hermann Hospital were notified today of Food and Drug Administration approval for a new study which will investigate how special fat-free solutions administered either by vein or orally can reduce plasma cholesterol and arrest, reverse or eliminate coronary atherosclerosis. The study will also include clinical trials at the University of Florida in Gainesville and the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

Led by Dr. Stanley J. Dudrick, surgeon-in-chief at Hermann Hospital, a team of physicians is scheduled to begin clinical trials as early as Dec. 15. The research will compare two new therapeutic modalities to the current standard of care:

-- a specially formulated, fat-free intravenous feeding solution, called Total Parenteral Nutrition (TPN), in which the protein component is a unique mixture of amino acids, called Atheromine;
-- a "no-fat" enteral formula which contains absolutely minimal quantities of fat (less than one percent of total calories) and provides the bulk of calories and protein as "no-fat" oral diet plan.

The physicians expect to show that plasma cholesterol levels can be controlled resulting in regression or elimination of atherosclerosis, therefore reducing significantly or potentially eliminating the need for today's most common surgical remedies, coronary by-pass surgery and angioplasty.

In the pilot study of 30 patients with severe atherosclerosis treated for at least 90 days with the atheromine regimen, all patients experienced reductions of plasma cholesterol between 40 and 74 percent. Many patients demonstrated reversal of atherosclerosis on their coronary angiograms, most patients required significantly less cardiac medication, and all patients experienced improved heart function and quality of life.

GLEN ROCK, NJ (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of Citizens First Bancorp, Inc. (AMEX: CFB), has announced the naming of a new temporary chairman, Samuel M. Lyon Jr., a long-time board member and a prominent Ridgewood, N.J. attorney.

The board also announced it is retaining a new accounting firm, Deloitte &

Touche, which will replace Coopers & Lybrand as Citizens outside auditors.

The actions announced today were taken at a board meeting Nov. 20. Lyon will replace George E. Alford, who died on Nov. 13, as chairman of the board of both Citizens First Bancorp and Citizens First National Bank of New Jersey. Alford had succeeded Richard G. Kelley as chairman last August. Kelley's role as chief executive officer was assumed by Rodney T. Verblaauw, who is also president and chief administrative officer. A committee of the board is conducting a continuing search for a permanent chairman and chief executive officer.

Lyon, who was elected to the board in 1976, said "we're very hopeful, though extremely cognizant of the prevailing economic conditions, that we'll continue to augment our financial and capital position over the next several months, and to stabilize our longer term growth and profitability picture. In terms of the future, we have had a very favorable response to our new branch in Fort Lee, which has taken in over $1.8 million in deposits in the first week of operations. It's very encouraging to see that our new customers have placed their confidence in our bank."

Verblaauw said the change in outside auditors "is an indication of our determination to start anew and continue the process of renewal with a clean slate -- a fresh start."

Citizens First National Bank of New Jersey, which has more than 50 offices serving five counties in New Jersey, is a wholly owned subsidiary of Citizens First Bancorp, Inc. As of Sept. 30, Citizens had total assets of $2.9 billion total deposits of $2.7 billion, and equity capital in excess of $147 million.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - The Certified Automotive Parts Association (CAPA) today congratulated the Ford Motor Company for slashing prices 14 percent on crash replacement parts in order to meet the lower prices from competitive crash parts manufacturers.

"This shows the system works," said CAPA Executive Director Jack Gillis. "The best way to get rid of monopoly pricing is to introduce the element of competition. It's the American way and the consumer always wins."

CAPA is a non-profit organization formed to direct and oversee a testing and inspection program that certifies the quality of parts used for auto body repairs.

Gillis was referring to the Oct. 25 announcement by Ford detailing a wide-ranging round of major price reductions on sheet metal crash replacement parts designed to meet the competition.

Prior to the early 1980's, Ford and other domestic and foreign auto makers monopolized the manufacture and distribution of these parts, and they charged exorbitant prices.

Later in the decade, when competition from non-original equipment manufacturers began, the competition's prices were about half those charged by the Detroit and Osaka auto manufacturers. As a result of the introduction of competition, consumers now have the option of buying quality parts for much lower prices.

For example, from the time of their introduction in 1983 until 1989, prices for fenders for the Ford Escort and the Honda Accord, which were subject to competition, dropped 20 and 38 percent, respectively, once competition was introduced. During the same period, front-door prices, not subject to competition, for the same two models rose 36 and 45 percent, respectively (see chart below).

CAPA's mission has been to establish, enforce and maintain standards of quality for reputable manufacturers of competitive crash replacement parts. "CAPA has made considerable strides in this area," said Gillis.

"Although we still have a ways to go, we have brought in an outside, independent testing laboratory to define and monitor manufacturing standards. In this way consumers of parts with the CAPA seal know those parts are up to top quality standards regarding fit, finish and resistance to corrosion."

NEWTOWN SQUARE, PA. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - One of the largest joint ventures between Korean and American companies, YUKONG ARCO Chemical Ltd., is beginning commercial production of propylene oxide (PO) and styrene monomer (SM) at its plant in Ulsan, South Korea.

The plant will also produce polyols and glycols which are downstream derivatives of propylene oxide.

The PO/SM plant is the first project undertaken by YUKONG ARCO, a 50/50 joint venture established in 1987 by Yukong Limited and ARCO Chemical Korea, Inc. Yukong, Korea's leading energy company, is a Sunkyong Group company. ARCO Chemical Korea, Inc. is a subsidiary of ARCO Chemical Co. (NYSE: RCM). YUKONG ARCO is managed jointly by executives who are also executives of its parent companies.

The plant, with a design capacity of 100,000 MT of PO and 225,000 MT of SM, will be sufficient to satisfy current and projected domestic Korean demand for PO. Until now, Korean companies had been completely dependent on import for PO and a major derivative, propylene glycol, which is also manufactured by YUKONG ARCO. A portion of the initial production will be exported to other Asian nations as well.

PO and SM are versatile materials that are the basic building blocks for a variety of other chemicals. PO is used to make such products as polyols for urethane foams, detergents, synthetic lubricants, synthetic elastomers, solvents and propylene glycols. SM is used primarily in the manufacture of polystyrenics.

The plant is located in Ulsan, the heart of Korea's petroleum and petrochemical industrial area. Yukong and Sunkyong Group already have substantial operations in Ulsan, which is approximately 180 miles from Seoul on Korea's southeast coast.

Design of the facility was started in mid-1987, and the plant was under construction by early 1988.

For ARCO Chemical, the joint venture represents an enhanced commitment to the Korean market and to Asia as a whole. Alan D. Kornfeld, YUKONG ARCO executive vice president and senior vice president of ARCO Chemical's Asia/Pacific operations, said, "A venture with Yukong was a natural way to strengthen ARCO Chemical's presence in the Asia/Pacific region. YUKONG ARCO combines ARCO Chemical's technology and specific product knowledge with Yukong's experience in petroleum refining and petrochemicals as well as their overall knowledge of the Korean market. The plant incorporates state-of-the-art technology."

TROY, MI. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Inacomp Computer Centers, Inc. (NASDAQ: INAC) reported record financial results for the first quarter of fiscal 1991, which ended Oct. 27, 1990. Inacomp closed the quarter with revenues of $122,173,000, up 14 percent from $107,049,000 for the first quarter of fiscal 1990. Net income rose 6 percent from $1,472,000 in the first quarter of fiscal 1990 to $1,556,000 for first quarter fiscal 1991. Earnings per share showed a 10-percent increase at $.22 per share for the first quarter of fiscal 1991, as compared to $.20 for the first quarter of fiscal 1990.

First quarter 1991 marked the company's 19th consecutive quarter of year-to-year improvements in both revenues and profitability. "The current economic environment provides serious challenges to businesses. Our first-quarter performance reconfirms Inacomp's unique ability to adjust to changing conditions and to deliver superior results," said Rick Inatome, president, chairman and chief executive officer. "Consistent profit performance has been Inacomp's trademark since our inception in 1976."

Al Montross, executive vice president and chief operating officer, stated, "No other computer reseller has Inacomp's 15-year record of profit performance. This strong foundation solidifies Inacomp's ability to exploit our position as a premier solutions provider in the '90s. The key to Inacomp's continued momentum is our success in building market share by focusing more on high-end solutions in areas such as networking, accounting and visual communications." Inacomp reported margins up from 15.6 in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 to 16.3 in the first quarter of fiscal 1991.

Significant increases in revenues from customer support services have also contributed to the company's overall performance. In the first quarter of fiscal 1991, support service revenues increased over 7 percent from the preceding quarter. Revenues in these areas have show steady increases during the past year, up 54 percent from the first quarter of fiscal 1990.

Inacomp has added 48 value-added solution providers through its TeamWorks program since September. "If this trend continues, we could greatly increase the number of dealers in the coming year. Recruiting this type of dealer is very important to Inacomp's future success. Historically, these business organizations have provided advanced solutions/consulting on higher-end computer architectures. Their orientation is very different from the traditional computer retail store. Our new TeamWorks dealers are now in the crucial process of transferring their expertise to the high-end PC platforms, like the Compaq Systempro and IBM 486 systems, now available to Inacomp. As a result, they have contributed under 1 percent of our first-quarter revenues. However, the company considers this investment in advanced support one of the key elements of our vision for long-term, value-added growth," Inatome concluded.

Inacomp Computer Centers, Inc. markets microcomputer systems and related products and services through over 270 company-owned, franchised and affiliate locations across the country. The company provides network consultation, installation, classroom training, system maintenance and repair to its customers. Inacomp also provides short- term rental and long-term leasing of microcomputer systems. Corporate offices are in Troy.

PARLIN, N.J. (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - The Du Pont Imaging Systems manufacturing facility here today was certified for conformance to the ISO 9002 quality standard.

The International Organization for Standardization (ISO) is a worldwide federation of national standards bodies.

The Du Pont (NYSE: DD) site is the first in the world to win ISO quality certification in silver films, proofing systems and flexo- graphic photopolymer plates, all used in the printing and publishing industry. This certification will be adopted by companies who wish to serve the European Community (EC) and its 320 million people after 1992.

"The ISO certification of the Parlin plant helps put Du Pont in a better position to compete in Europe after 1992," said Edgar S. Woolard, chairman of Du Pont. "The certification is strong evidence that Du Pont has made a serious commitment to strengthen quality at its manufacturing sites around the world. Du Pont will continue its drive toward higher quality in all aspects of our global operations."

The ISO in Geneva is charged with developing, promoting and updating quality standards across all industries other than electrical worldwide. Certification procedures based on the ISO 9000 series standards are being implemented rapidly in the European Community. Companies without ISO certification for quality standards will not be able to display the official EC mark in their advertising and packaging.

The ISO addresses quality standards through its 9000 series, first published in 1987. The ISO 9002 certification, awarded to Du Pont Imaging Systems' Parlin site, covers quality systems in production and installation.

The ISO is the world's recognized international standards organization, comprised of members from over 90 nations. It has 2,300 technical bodies and uses 20,000 experts in preparing more than 6,000 standards. The ISO's U.S. member is the American National Standards Institute.

Du Pont Imaging Systems is a leading supplier of film, proofing materials and electronic prepress systems for the printing and publishing industry worldwide. Sales in 1989 totaled $1.5 billion. Du Pont's total sales were $35.5 billion last year.

WHITE PLAINS, NY (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - At a meeting of 150 security analysts at Texaco Inc.'s (NYSE: TX) worldwide headquarters in Harrison, N.Y. President and Chief Executive Officer James W. Kinnear told the financial professionals gathered that "Texaco has the people, the technology and the understanding of our markets to translate our ambitious plans into major commercial achievements."

Backing its convictions, Kinnear said, Texaco plans to spend approximately $3.1 billion in 1991, or an increase of $200 million over 1990's capital spending budget. That compares to $2.3 billion in 1989. About two-thirds of Texaco's 1991 spending will be allocated for exploration and production projects.

"Although there are some major challenges in the future -- such as the impact of the Clean Air Act on one hand and the Middle East crisis on the other -- we believe that Texaco is in a good position to achieve solid results in the years to come." Kinnear also pointed to higher public expectations for quality and environmental protection as equally challenging trends, which, he said, really ought to be viewed as opportunities.

Summarizing the current situation in the Middle East, Kinnear noted that while 7 percent of the world's crude supplies have been curtailed due to the U.N. embargo of Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil, increased crude oil production and refining elsewhere have replaced the lost production, and inventories "are certainly adequate to meet expected demand." Kinnear cautioned, however, that "there's far less spare capacity than there used to be, should we face a situation beyond our control, like an unusually cold winter."

Kinnear said he hopes that the Middle East crisis can be resolved speedily and without war. He predicted that once it is settled, he would expect "an initial drop in prices" of crude oil. Kinnear noted that the market forces that were in motion before the crisis should reassert themselves, "and crude oil could settle in the low $20 range." But, he added, "there most likely will continue to be volatility beyond the end of the crisis, although we think there could be less than in the past," due to supply and demand on world markets being more in balance.

Regarding the company's Star Enterprise 50-50 joint venture in the United States with Saudi Arabia, Kinnear pointed to the "great success" of the refining and marketing joint venture formed in 1989. Kinnear noted that Star Enterprise, which has all of its assets in the United States, including three refineries and associated marketing facilities along the East and Gulf coasts, gets about 85 percent of its crude from Saudi Arabia. "Should there be a disruption in producing capacity, the continued supply to the Star refineries would be just as important to the Saudis as to Texaco," Kinnear stated. "Moreover, those refineries can run a variety of other heavy crudes, including Mexican and Venezuelan. Therefore, Star Enterprise can successfully compete for more crudes in the market."

EXTON, PA (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Intelligent Electronics Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: INEL), the world's largest chain of computer dealers in terms of both revenues and locations, expects to exceed investment community expectations in sales, profit, and earnings per share for fiscal year 1990, Richard D. Sanford, Intelligent's chairman and chief executive officer, announced today in an interview with the Dow Jones News Service.

"We expect Intelligent's year-end numbers will surpass the revenue and EPS expectations of the investment community," Sanford said. "We fully expect to announce our 28th consecutive quarter of record-breaking revenues and profitability." Sanford noted that the company continues to generate significant cash from operations as a result of strong asset management and profitability.

Intelligent's fiscal year ended Oct. 31, and the company said it plans to announce its fourth quarter and year-end results Monday, Dec. 3.

Sanford attributes Intelligent's continued success to its focus on the small and mid-sized business market, strategic manufacturer relationships, and experienced network of approximately 1,000 centers. "The caliber of our dealers supported by the leadership strength of Intelligent is combining to capture increasing share in the market," Sanford said.

TORONTO, (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Cara Operations Limited of Toronto today signed a letter of intent to purchase all the outstanding shares of Arvak Limited.

The purchase will be funded by internal resources and borrowings. The purchase price is $33.5 million to be paid partly in cash and partly by the issuance, subject to regulatory approval, of 1,000,000 Class A non-voting shares of Cara Operations Limited at a price of $14 per share. In addition, $7 million may be paid to selling shareholders on an earn-out basis over four years.

As it joins the Cara group of companies, Arvak Limited will be enhancing its position as a leading Canadian institutional food service company. Through its subsidiaries, Beaver Foods Limited, Les Services Alimentaires CVC Inc., and Summit Food Distributors Inc., Arvak is engaged in contract food service management and institutional wholesale food distribution. Based in London, Ontario, the Arvak group has annual consolidated sales of $220 million and 6,000 employees across Canada.

Cara Operations Limited is a diversified Canadian company with annual system sales, inclusive of franchisees' sales, in excess of $1 billion. Its operating divisions include Swiss Chalet, Harvey's, Airline In-Flight Service, Cara Restaurants and retail operations, Days Inn - Canada, and Grand & Toy Limited.

In announcing this development, Jaroslaw Bilak, chief executive officer of Arvak Limited, said, "Both Cara and Arvak are Canadian companies which share the same culture -- one of a tradition of outstanding service to their clients and customers and a strong commitment to their respective employees. With the financial strength of Cara, we will be well positioned to meet the competitive challenges and opportunities emerging in the 1990s and beyond."

Under the proposed agreement with Cara, Arvak will remain headquartered in London, Ontario, and its subsidiaries will continue as separate operating entities with their current management and employees in place.

DALLAS (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Howard P. Allen, former chairman of Southern California Edison Co., and Ann D. McLaughlin, former Secretary of Labor in the Reagan administration, today were elected to the board of directors of AMR Corp. (NYSE: AMR), the parent company of American Airlines.

"AMR is proud to be adding two such distinguished and widely experienced people to its board," said Robert L. Crandall, AMR's chairman and president. "Howard Allen has established a long record of outstanding achievement in business, civic and community affairs. Ann McLaughlin's many accomplishments include extensive service in both the private and public sectors.

"These two fine individuals will make a major contribution to AMR as it plans for continued growth and expansion in the difficult period of the 1990s," Crandall said.

Allen retired on Oct. 1 as chairman and chief executive officer of SCEcorp and Southern California Edison Co. after 36 years with the organization. He remains chairman of its executive committee.

Allen joined Edison in 1954, and was elected a vice president in 1962. He became a senior vice president in 1971, executive vice president in 1973 and president and a director in 1980. He was elected chairman and chief executive officer in 1984.

McLaughlin was named Secretary of Labor by President Reagan in November 1987 and later established the Workforce Quality Commission, the first blue ribbon commission to address workforce competitiveness issues in a global economy. She was awarded the President's Citizen Medal in recognition of her public service.

Earlier in the Reagan administration, she had been Under Secretary of the Department of the Interior and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, where she earned the department's highest honor, the Alexander Hamilton Award for distinguished leadership.

In September 1989, President Bush appointed McLaughlin chairman of the President's Commission on Aviation Security and Terrorism. The commission presented its report last May, focusing in particular on the events surrounding the destruction of Pan American Flight 103.

BLOOMINGTON, MINN (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - The Toro Company (NYSE: TTC) today announced a loss for the first quarter of fiscal 1991. The company said it expects to meet its earnings goal for the year.

For the first quarter ended Nov. 2, 1990, Toro reported a net loss of $5.6 million, or 47 cents per share, vs. net income of $2.6 million, or 24 cents per share, in the first quarter of fiscal 1990. Sales in the first quarter declined 5.6 percent to $129.4 million from $137.0 million in the first quarter of fiscal 1990. Excluding sales from Lawn-Boy Inc., sales in the quarter were down 14.4 percent vs. the year-ago quarter.

"On the positive side, we are vigorously pursuing a plan that aggressively reduces expense levels in response to a recessionary environment,'' said Toro Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Kendrick B. Melrose. ''The plan is based on the assumption that fiscal 1991 total sales including Lawn-Boy products will be flat compared to last year, and without Lawn-Boy products unit volume will be down approximately 10 percent. Despite our assumption of flat sales for fiscal 1991, we still believe earnings per share of around $2 is attainable."

Despite the uncertainties in the marketplace, commercial product sales remained strong worldwide, rising approximately 22 percent in the quarter compared to the same period last year, the company said. Sales continued to benefit from strong demand for new products serving both the golf, municipal and other growing non-golf professional markets, Melrose said. Toro looks for continued growth in its commercial products business, but at a lower rate of growth than in the recent past.

Irrigation products continue to be affected by economic conditions throughout the United States, Melrose said. Industrywide sales to commercial and residential customers have dropped because of the depressed real estate markets, and Toro has felt the added pressure of a more conservative inventory position taken by distributors and contractors, Melrose added.

The Toro Company is the world's largest independent manufacturer and marketer of outdoor maintenance and irrigation equipment.

MINNEAPOLIS, (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - MTS Systems Corporation, a manufacturer of computer-based systems for determining the durability of materials, products and structures; and measurement and control systems for the automation of manufacturing processes, reports fiscal year 1990 sales, net income and incoming orders.

Sales for the fiscal year 1990 increased 5 percent to $160,159,400 compared to $152,630,300 one year ago. Net income decreased 24 percent to $8,408,300 resulting in per-share earnings of $1.82 compared to $2.41 in the preceding year.

Sales for the fourth quarter of fiscal year 1990 were $47,568,300 compared to $53,366,100 in the comparable quarter one year ago. Pretax income decreased to $1,869,800 from $8,488,200 reflecting lower sales, a reduction in gross margin resulting from reserves required for completion of certain Seismic Simulation projects, and accelerated spending for new product development.

Profit in the quarter was also reduced by $570,000 due to write-offs associated with the previously announced sale of the company's Packaging Testing Equipment business to Mechanical Technology Inc. of Latham, N.Y. This business accounted for less than 2 percent of the company's revenues in the fiscal year and has not been profitable.

Net income of $2,057,500 and earnings per share of $.45 benefited from a lower effective tax rate for fiscal year 1990 due principally to higher Research and Development tax credits and increased tax exempt income from the company's Foreign Sales Corporation.

New orders for the fiscal year 1990 were $157,211,700, an increase of 7 percent compared to the previous year. Backlog of undelivered orders on Sept. 30, 1990 totaled $71,032,200 compared to $72,977,100 the same date one year ago.

The company said it does not expect significant revenue growth in fiscal year 1991 due to continued weakness in its North American markets but said it does expect earnings to recover due to the absence of the aforementioned reserves and write-offs and the increased profitability of its backlog.

At the regular quarterly meeting of the board of directors held on Nov. 28, 1990, the directors declared a dividend of 10 cents per share, payable on Jan. 2, 1991, to shareholders of record on Dec. 7, 1990.

At the same meeting the directors authorized the additional purchase of 200,000 shares of its common stock. Subject to price and market conditions, shares would be repurchased on the open market or through private transactions.

BETHESDA, MD (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Martin Marietta Corporation (NYSE: ML) today received a $525.9-million contract to modernize the information systems capabilities of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), the company's fifth major commercial and civil government contract since July. Together, the contracts have a potential value of more than $1 billion.

"These new programs advance our strategy of broadening the corporation's business base, moving further into related fields of high technology where we have experience and exceptional resources," said Norman R. Augustine, chairman and chief executive officer of Martin Marietta Corporation. "We expect this HUD contract to have a positive effect on our 1991 operating earnings and a significant impact into the next century."

In addition to the HUD contract, Martin Marietta recently was awarded contracts from the U.S. Postal Service to produce automated mail-processing machines; contracts from Pratt & Whitney and General Electric for jet engine thrust reversers; and a contract from the Australian Civil Aviation Authority to help modernize that country's air traffic control system.

The HUD program, to be administered over 12 years, represents that agency's plan to consolidate all of its automated data processing operations under a single contractor. The agency's present telecommunications networks will be combined into a single integrated network linking HUD headquarters in Washington, to a new Martin Marietta data center in Lanham, Md. The agency's 81 field and regional offices also will be tied into the network.

The majority of the data processing will be performed at the Lanham center, built specifically for the new program. The center will include a computer facility that will house state-of-the-art mainframes, a computer and telecommunications network command center and a tape library.

An initial staff of approximately 100 people will implement the preliminary phases of the contract, with employment eventually approaching 300 in the next year. Peter A. Bracken is vice president and Martin Marietta program manager for the project, called HUD Integrated Information Processing Service, or HIIPS.

CALGARY, Alberta (NOV. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - Shell Canada Ltd. (Montreal, Toronto Vancouver: SHC) announced today that it intends to offer for sale selected coal assets, including the Line Creek open pit coal mine in south eastern British Columbia, operated by its wholly owned subsidiary Crows Nest Resources Ltd.

For the upstream sector, Shell Canada has decided to focus its capital and management resources on its oil and gas businesses.

Construction of the Line Creek Mine was completed in 1982 and it currently sells about 3 million tons of coal annually, about 2 million tons of metallurgical, and the balance thermal. The coal is sold to a number of customers overseas, particularly in Japan and Korea, and is also exported to the United States and the United Kingdom.

The mine employs about 460 people, some 365 of whom are members of the International Union of Operating Engineers.

The company intends to retain some coal properties in Alberta and British Columbia.

"Shell's intention is to sell the Line Creek Mine as an operating entity, and it is intended that any purchaser will honor all existing agreements with the union, customers, and suppliers," said Bob Rouleau, president of Crows Nest Resources Ltd.

(NOV. 28) UPI - It was a lot to ask of a freshman. Too much as it turned out.

Florida's Craig Brown stood at the free throw line for two shots with four seconds left and 19th ranked Texas leading 75-74 Tuesday night. He missed them both.

The Longhorns drew two foul shots of their own and center Guillermo Myers made one of them, giving Texas a 76-74 victory in its season- opener. The Gators fell to 0-2.

''I never had any other thought that winning the game,'' said the crestfallen Brown, a 6-foot-3 guard from Steelton, Pa. ''I felt real good about shooting them, and then I felt real bad about what happened.''

Coach Lon Kruger, in his first season at Florida after moving from Kansas State, promised the young freshman there would be many more opportunities.

''When you have the game on the line and you're at the line that's what people look forward to, but occasionally, you're going to miss,'' Kruger said. ''I told Craig we'll have him at the line plenty the next couple of years, as hard as it may be for him to believe right now.''

Texas Coach Tom Penders said he was relieved to get the first victory over with on the road.

''I told the team that anyway we can get a win, we we'd take it and get out of here,'' Penders said. ''The team tonight played with a lot of intensity and a lot of fight.''

Elsewhere, at Pine Bluff, Ark., No. 3 Arkansas blew Mississippi College away 96-57 despite some disciplinary action. Todd Day and Oliver Miller, both of whom did not play in the first half, sparked a 50-8 second-half run.

Day and Miller, who played 12 minutes each in the second half, were suspended for the first half by Arkansas Coach Nolan Richardson for receiving technical fouls in the Razorbacks' Preseason NIT loss to No. 1 Arizona last week.

In a game at the Dean Smith Convocation Center in Chapel Hill, N.C., forward Clifford Rozier was more successful as a freshman than Brown, scoring 22 points, and leading fourth-ranked North Carolina to a 104-61 thrashing of Jacksonville.

Forwards George Lynch and Rick Fox added 19 each for the unbeaten Tar Heels. The Dolphins were led by forward Reggie Law with 16 and center Tim Burroughs with 15.

At Tuscaloosa, Ala., the Crimson Tide's Melvin Cheatum scored a career-high 28 points, including seven in overtime as eighth-ranked Alabama outlasted Wake Forest, 86-85.

''Down the stretch the team had confidence in me, and I got to capitalize on it,'' Cheatum said. ''They were not contesting my shots so they were leaving me open as I went to the basket.''

At Atlanta, 14th-ranked Georgia Tech won its second in two games, defeating Morgan State 87-65 behind a 33-point performance by Malcolm Mackey. Guard Kenny Anderson scored only seven points but collected a game-high 13 assists.

(NOV. 28) UPI - With the Bush administration pressing its case in the United Nations for an option to use military force against Iraq, Senate Democratic leaders debating U.S. gulf policy urged the White House to give economic sanctions time to work.

Administration officials reportedly have the necessary votes lined up among U.N. Security Council members to pass a resolution Thursday authorizing military action if Iraqi troops do not voluntarily withdraw from Kuwait.

''If ever there was a case for giving peace a chance, this is it,'' Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said Tuesday. ''This is one search for peace that does not involve appeasement of aggression. We should do all we can in Congress to stop this war before it starts.''

Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said there was justification for military action to force Iraq from Kuwait, but asked whether it was ''wise at this time and in our national interest.''

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, added: ''Will the embargo work? We don't know yet. It's only been in a short period of time. Let's give it a chance.''

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said President Bush ''should be displaying American staying power for the long haul. It is American determination to make the economic sanctions work over a long period that is more likely to impress Saddam Hussein.''

The Senate policy hearings are the first since the administration's announcement Nov. 8 that the United States would double its forces in the Persian Gulf region - to about 400,000 troops by January. The move gives the U.S.-led multinational force massed in the region an offensive capability.

The five permanent members of the Council - the United States, Britain, France China and the Soviet Union - reportedly have agreed on the use of force with the only sticking point being whether the resolution set a pullout deadline of Jan. 1 or Jan. 15.

French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said in a statement Tuesday that he proposed Jan. 15 as the last date for a pullout, citing Soviet ''reticence'' on setting New Year's Day as the deadline.

Kuwait, meanwhile, Tuesday asked the United Nations to take custody of Kuwait's civil records for future litigation against Iraq, which they said is systematically destroying their country.

A delegation of seven Kuwaiti refugees told a U.N. Security Council session that Iraqi soldiers acted like ''pirates'' and ''primitive people'' since they invaded the small emirate Aug. 2.

In the testimony against alleged Iraqi atrocities, Kuwaiti U.N. Ambassador Mohammad Abulhassan said Iraq embarked on ''very anomalistic'' actions against Kuwaitis including ''unjustifiable killings, displacement, violation of sanctities and rape, torture, humiliation of people's dignity, intimidation of innocent residents and organized pillagings.''

Abulhassan said the destruction brought back the ''era of pirates and primitive ages.''

Videotapes and pictures of victims of Iraqi ''barbaric acts'' were shown to the council.

The U.N. discussions on the possible use of force hit a stumbling block when Palestinian Liberation Organization allies tried to force a vote on Palestinian rights.

The resolution, introduced by Cuba, Yemen, Malaysia and Colombia three weeks ago, called for the stationing of a U.N. commissioner and a peace force in the West Bank and Gaza Strip to protect Palestinians living there.

The call for U.N. protection for Palestinians stemmed from non- aligned and Arab countries's repeated charges of human rights violations by Israel.

The non-aligned countries complained that Security Council president, U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering gave priority of discussions to the Persian Gulf situation and delayed U.N. action in the territories following the Oct. 8 Temple Mount riots in which at least 19 Palestinians were killed by Jerusalem police. Those countries asked for an immediate vote on their resolution.

The United States voted twice with the council to condemn the killings in Jerusalem and the Israeli rejection of a U.N. inquiry into the riots.

Pickering's presidency ends Friday and Yemen's U.N. ambassador, Abdalla Saleh Al-Ashtal, will take over for December. The council's 15 member states take turns presiding at the U.N. political body on a monthly basis.

(NOV. 28) UPI - In just a few hours, John Major is set to become Britain's youngest prime minister this century. The 47-year-old Major, the son of a trapeze artist, used his humble start as a selling point to succeed his mentor Margaret Thatcher. Backbiting within Thatcher's Conservative Party forced her to step down after 11-and-a-half years as prime minister. She formally tenders her resignation Wednesday to Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace.

Sentiment apparently is growing in the Senate to hold off on military action against Iraq to see if continued economic sanctions work. Senate Democratic Chairman Sam Nunn of Georgia isn't endorsing a delay, but he questions the timing of a military operation. Nunn says the question is whether military action ''is wise at this time and in our own national interest.''

Meanwhile, the Washington Post reports the White House has lined up the necessary votes in the U-N Security Council to pass a resolution authorizing force against Iraq. The Post says the five permanent members of the Council appear to have agreed on the use of force. But the paper says the only sticking point is whether the resolution should set a pullout deadline of January 1st or January 15th.

(NOV. 28) UPI - The Phoenix Suns have come a long way in a week.

Last Friday, they were embarrassed at home by the New Jersey Nets, who had broken a 34-game road losing streak two nights before. But the Suns regrouped Tuesday to score a big 123-109 road victory over the Portland Trail Blazers.

The setback knocked the Trail Blazers from the ranks of the unbeaten and ended Portland's 15-game winning streak, which dated back to the end of last season.

''Phoenix took care of that,'' Portland Coach Rick Adelman said of the streak. ''(The Suns) came in and shot the ball very well and we were a step behind all night.''

It was Phoenix's first victory in Portland in 21 tries, dating back to April 8 1983.

Tom Chambers led they way for the Suns with 28 points and Eddie Johnson added 25. Phoenix also got a big hand from its bench, which outscored Portland's subs 52-23.

The Suns turned a 35-31 lead at the end of the first quarter into a 73-55 advantage at intermission, but had to survive a furious third- quarter rally by the Blazers to gain the victory.

The Blazers scored the first nine points of the third quarter and appeared to be in control after scoring 12 unanswered points late in the period to take a 92-88 lead.

''Portland came out very aggressively in the third quarter and showed why they are such a great team,'' Phoenix Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said.

Phoenix came right back with five free throws by Kevin Johnson just before the end of quarter to put the Suns back in front 93-92. They led the rest of the way.

''We made a great run in the third period but didn't have enough to keep it going,'' Adelman said.

''We couldn't play any better than we did in the first half and I don't think Portland could play any better than it did in the third quarter,'' Fitzsimmons said.

Portland's leading scorer, Clyde Drexler, was thrown out of the game with 3:11 remaining in the second quarter after being whistled for an unsportsmanlike elbowing foul and then a technical foul moments later. He left with 12 points and Portland trailing 67-51.

Elsewhere in the NBA Tuesday night, Detroit blew out Atlanta 120-97, Milwaukee held off Indiana 112-98, Houston stopped the LA Clippers 107- 102, Cleveland overcame New York 107-102, San Antonio defeated Seattle 124-111, New Jersey upset Philadelphia 98-92, Denver outran Orlando 124- 113, Washington nipped

Golden State 115-113 and Minnesota crowned Sacramento 89-80.

-- AROUND THE NBA --

Detroit 120, Atlanta 97

At Atlanta, Bill Laimbeer scored 25 points and Mark Aguirre added 24 to lead Detroit to its eighth straight victory. The Pistons improved to 11-2, the team's best start ever. The Hawks, who have lost eight straight, were paced by Kevin Willis and Spud Webb with 16 points each.

Bucks 112, Pacers 98

At Milwaukee, Ricky Pierce scored 29 of his game-high 37 points in the second half to lift the Bucks to their fifth straight victory. Pierce pumped in seven straight in a key 9-0 spurt. Detlef Schrempf led the Pacers, who lost for the sixth straight time on the road, with 20 points.

Rockets 107, Clippers 102

At Houston, Akeem Olajuwon scored 34 points and collected 20 rebounds, and all five Rocket starters scored in double figures. The Clippers had pulled even at 85-85 with 10:17 remaining in the game, but Olajuwon scored 14 of the Rockets' final 22 points.

Cavaliers 107, Knicks 102

At New York, Craig Ehlo and Mark Price combined for nine of Cleveland's last 11 points, sending the Knicks to their third straight loss at home. The Cavaliers, who were led by Brad Daugherty's 27 points, held New York to two Gerald Wilkins' free throws over the last four minutes.

Spurs 124, Sonics 111

At Seattle, Sean Elliott scored 27 points and David Robinson added 25 to lead San Antonio. The Spurs trailed 97-95 entering the fourth quarter, but used eight points by both Robinson and Rod Strickland to run away from the Sonics. Seattle was led by by Quintin Dailey, who came off the bench to score 29.

Nets 98, Sixers 92

At East Rutherford, N.J., rookie Derrick Coleman scored 28 points and pulled down 23 rebounds to lead the Nets to their third straight victory. All five Net starters scored in double figures, but the bench produced only four points. The loss ended the Sixers four-game winning streak.

Nuggets 124, Magic 113

At Denver, Orlando Woolridge scored 12 of his 28 points in the fourth period to rally the Nuggets. Walter Davis added 22 points off the bench and Jerome Lane had 17 rebounds and 13 points for Denver. Orlando's Terry Catledge led all scorers with 30 points.

Bullets 115, Warriors 113

At Landover, Md., Bernard King scored 39 points and Harvey Grant added 22 to lead the Bullets to their first back-to-back triumphs of the season. Golden State, which has lost its last seven games on the Bullets' court, was led by Mitch Richmond's 28 points in his first action after missing five games with a thumb fracture.

Timberwolves 89, Kings 80

At Sacramento, Calif., Tyrone Corbin scored 17 points to lift Minnesota. The Kings failed to win at home for the fifth time in five outings, falling to 1-11 this season. Wayman Tisdale paced Sacramento with 19 points.

(NOV. 28) UPI - Around the world... Around the clock... U-P-I brings the latest news, next.

Margaret Thatcher resigns today as Britain's prime minister after running the country for more than 11 years. Thatcher formally hands in her resignation to Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace... turning the country over to her protege John Major. The 47- year-old Chancellor of the Exchequer becomes Britain's youngest prime minister this century.

The Bush administration continues to press its case in the United Nations for a Security Council resolution authorizing the use of military force against Iraq if necessary. But Senate Democratic leaders debating U-S policy in the Persian Gulf are calling on the administration to give economic sanctions time to work.

Administration officials reportedly have the votes they need among Security Council members to pass a resolution Thursday authorizing military action. But Massachusetts Senator Edward Kennedy says Congress should do all it can to stop a war before it starts. Says Kennedy- ''If ever there was a case for giving peace a chance, this is it.''

China's foreign minister left Beijing today on a sanctions-busting visit to the United States. The Chinese official strongly hinted to reporters at Capital Airport that China will abstain from voting on the U-N resolution. But he indicated he aims to drive a hard bargain in exchange for China's pro-Washington stance,

The Senate Ethics Committee heard more testimony from a crucial witness in the case against five senators, the so-called Keating Five. Edwin Gray, the former chief federal savings and loan regulator said he felt ''awkward and pressured'' during a 1987 meeting with four of the senators, but he said ''personal dignity'' prevented him from protesting his treatment.

Los Angeles police say one of the members of the pop music duo Milli Vanilli was arrested for sexual battery yesterday. Police say Rob Pilatus was arrested at his home in the exclusive Bel-Air section of Los Angeles... and released after posting bond. MOSCOW (NOV. 28) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has canceled a planned visit to Oslo, Norway, for the presentation of his Nobel Peace Prize, the official Tass news agency said Wednesday.

Tass quoted the Soviet president's press office as saying plans to attend the the Dec. 10 presentation were changed because of the ''crucial situation in the country and the president's preoccupation with affairs that occupy his constant attention.''

Gorbachev, awarded the Peace Prize for his reforms that allowed the end of the Cold War and the flourishing of democratic movements in Eastern Europe, has been criticized at home for devoting too much time to foreign affairs and overseas trips while the Soviet Union suffers serious shortages and domestic problems.

''It is hoped in Moscow that the Nobel committee will understand the reason for this postponement and agree to present the prize at a later date,'' Tass said.

BANGKOK, Thailand (NOV. 28) UPI - U.S. military experts, bolstered by promises of better Vietnamese cooperation, began their 12th joint search Wednesday for evidence of what happened to the 1,676 American servicemen missing in Vietnam, a U.S. embassy spokesman said.

''Two teams of U.S. technical experts have already arrived in Vietnam to work with their Vietnamese counterparts in an effort to resolve the fates of Americans missing or otherwise unaccounted for in Vietnam,'' said U.S. embassy spokesman James Williams.

He said the search was the 12th joint effort undertaken by U.S. and Vietnamese teams and the first since Vietnamese Foreign Minister met U. S. officials in Washington to promise greater cooperation on the issue.

''It is hoped that the results achieved will reflect the increased cooperation pledged by the Vietnamese government during those talks,'' Williams said.

The U.S. team includes experts from the military's Joint Casualty Resolution Center and the Army Central Identification Laboratory in Hawaii, he said.

The search, expected to take 15-20 days, will cover areas of at least six provinces in northern and central Vietnam.

A total of 2,294 Americans still missing in action from the war, including 1,676 men missing in Vietnam or in Vietnamese waters.

Vietnam returned the remains of 10 people believed to be missing American servicemen on Nov. 20 and those remains are now undergoing analysis at the Army Laboratory in Hawaii, Williams said.

Vietnam and the United States have improved relations in the past year, holding talks on the conflict in Cambodia and missing Americans.

The U.S. government has said the main obstacle to renewed diplomatic ties and an end to the U.S. economic embargo against Vietnam is the continuing conflict in Cambodia.

Officials, however, have also tied the pace of improved relations to Vietnamese cooperation on the MIAs.

HONG KONG (NOV. 28) UPI - Plans to repatriate boat people under a new program for Vietnamese who did not volunteer but did not object to returning to Hanoi were postponed Wednesday after more than 75 percent of the first group dropped out, officials said.

''The final number of persons in the new category of non-objectors ready to return to Vietnam Dec. 1 ... is not large enough to warrant a separate charter flight,'' the United Nations High Commissionor For Refugees said in a statement.

''It has therefore been decided to schedule a flight 48 hours later . .. to permit the UNHCR to include a number of persons in the voluntary repatriation program on the flight.''

The UNCHR had earlier given Hanoi a list of 111 boat people who it had identified for the new ''acquiescent non-volunteer'' category, which aims to speed up the removal of about 54,000 refugees from Hong Kong's camps.

But less than 48 hours before the group was to board a chartered Hanoi-bound jet, the number of returnees had dwindled to 25.

The new category, which came out of an agreement between the UNHCR, Britain and Hanoi, was billed as a critical step in solving Hong Kong's boat people problem and the government in the British colony had pressed for the flight to go ahead dispite the low numbers.

Officials have defended the new scheme, comparing it to a program for boat people volunteering to return to Hanoi, which drew only 73 Vietnamese for its first flight in March 1989 but has since returned more than 5,700.

Only those boat people classified by Hong Kong as political refugees are eligible for resettlement in third countries.

The rest - an estimated 90 percent of the colony's Vietnamese - are deemed economic migrants and face continued life in the camps or a return to Hanoi.

BANGKOK, Thailand (NOV. 28) UPI - Khmer Rouge guerrilla forces routed troops of the Vietnamese-backed Cambodian government in two battles, the guerrilla radio reported Wednesday.

The radio said its troops faced government forces including 1,200 Vietnamese soldiers who attempted to attack Khmer Rouge-held areas near the Thai border on Sunday.

''Our national resistance forces killed 50 of these Vietnamese enemy soldiers, with 12 bodies left on the battlefield, and wounded 20 others, '' it said.

In a separate battle nine days earlier in Kompong Som province near the country's main deep water port, the radio said 200 government troops were advancing on a guerrilla-held area.

''They were ambushed and routed by our national resistance forces,'' the report said.

It said 20 government troops were killed and 30 wounded in the battle near the southern coast.

The accounts could not be confirmed and analysts in Bangkok have said such Khmer Rouge reports are often exaggerated.

Earlier Phnom Penh radio reported that four more party and government officials have been punished for corruption - part of a drive to restore popular faith in the honesty of the Vietnamese-installed regime.

It said the corrupt officials included a vice chairman of a provincial people's committee, a local secretary of the communist party, an agriculture official in charge of warehouses, and a district education official.

The corrupt officials have been sacked and will have to repay up to $1,200 in embezzled funds, the radio said.

(NOV. 28) UPI - Britain gets a new prime minister... the Senate debates Persian Gulf policy... and President Bush is back home.

Senate Democratic leaders debating U-S policy in the Persian Gulf are urging the Bush administration to give peace a chance.

With the administration pressing its case in the United Nations for an option to use military force against Iraq, some Senate members say the White House should give the economic sanctions imposed against Iraq more time to work.

Massachusetts Senator Edward Kennedy said yesterday- ''If ever there was a case for giving peace a chance, this is it.'' Kennedy says Congress should do all it can to stop the war before it starts.

Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn of Georgia says military action is justified to force Iraq from Kuwait. But Nunn questions whether it's ''wise at this time and in our national interest. ''

Democrats John Glenn of Ohio and Carl Levin of Michigan echoed similar sentiments.

Glenn says the embargo hasn't been on long enough to prove that it will work. And Levin says it's America's determination to make the embargo work over a long period that is more likely to impress Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Meanwhile, there's word that administration officials have the necessary votes lined up among U-N Security Council members to pass a resolution Thursday authorizing military action if Iraqi troops don't leave Kuwait on their own.

The five permanent members of the Council- the United States, Britain, France, China and the Soviet Union- reportedly have agreed on the use of force... but the sticking point is whether the resolution should set a pullout deadline of January 1st or January 15th.

(NOV. 28) UPI - President Bush returned to Washington late yesterday after wrapping up a two-day summit with Mexico's president with more talk about reaching a landmark free trade agreement between the two nations.

Bush and Carlos Salinas de Gortari met earlier yesterday for the second of a pair of one- on-one meetings to discuss the accord that would lift tariffs and quotas.

They also asked American and Mexican businessmen for help in calming fears of some U-S lawmakers and union leaders that such a pact- along with Mexico's rock-bottom salaries- could lead to lost jobs and reduced wages in the United States.

Formal negotiations on the treaty are to begin next year. The White House has expressed hope that they can have a treaty in place by 1992.

Bush and Salinas attended a state luncheon at the governor's palace in Monterrey, an industrial metropolis that has been compared to Detroit. Bush saluted Salinas as a ''man who has raised Mexican-U-S relations to a new level.''

Salinas said the trade agreement ''will unleash powerful energies in both our economies.''

The visit to Mexico was Bush's first as president.

The U-S Postal Service has exposed a multi-Million-dollar mail fraud scheme.

Federal authorities say two postal employees and a Hollywood, Florida, company have agreed to enter guilty pleas for their part in the seven-point-five-Million-dollar mail fraud case.

U-S Attorney Dexter Lehtinen told a news conference in Miami- ''This is the largest case of its kind for the Postal Service in its history.''

Postal officials say 15-year veteran Richard Waesco and 12-year veteran Ronnie Ragins allegedly accepted kickbacks for allowing Atlas Pen and Pencil Corporation to mail its goods in bulk for about half of the required postage.

Officials say the two workers- ''received a payment in return for simply undercounting or overlooking false postal forms that listed the wrong amount of mail.''

Lehtinen says the two allowed Atlas to mail as many as two Million pieces of mail a month at cut-rate prices in return for payments ranging from 100 dollars to 400 dollars a month.

Officials say the pair accepted a total of more than 100-thousand dollars from Atlas and other companies.

The two were charged with one count of conspiracy to defraud and one count of bribery. They each face a maximum of 20 years in prison and a 500-thousand-dollar fine.

Atlas and its director Robert Schneider were each charged with conspiracy to defraud. The family-owned firm has agreed to pay back the seven-point-five Million dollars in back postage, but still faces 15- Million in fines. Schneider faces a maximum five years in prison.

(NOV. 28) UPI - One half of the scandal-rocked pop duo Milli Vanilli is out on bail after being arrested by Los Angeles police for sexual battery.

Sergent David Rossi says 26-year-old Rob Pilatus was arrested early yesterday morning at his home in L-A's exclusive Bel-Air section. He was later released after posting 10-thousanddollar bond.

Depending on the specifics of the crime, sexual battery can be prosecuted either as a felony or a misdemeanor. Rossi says detectives will ask the District Attorney's Office to file felony charges against Pilatus. That would carry a maximum four-year jail term upon conviction.

Rossi says the victim was a 25-year-old woman. The musician's neighbor told a Santa Monica newspaper she saw police escorting Pilatus and a young, blond woman from his house early yesterday.

Pilatus and Fab Morvan were stripped of the Grammy award last week after it was announced by their manager that the pair had not sung on their album. The L-P... ''Girl You Know It's True''... sold seven- Million copies and led to the duo's award as the best new group of 1989.

N-F-L Commissioner Paul Tagliabue has fined the New England Patriots and three players a total of 72-thousand-500 dollars for the sexual harassment of sportswriter Lisa Olsen.

The September 17th incident in the team's locker room was described by Tagliabue as ''distasteful'' and ''damaging to the league.'' The fines were levied following an investigation headed by special counsel Philip Heymann of Harvard Law School.

Tight end Zeke Mowatt... cited by Olson as the instigator of the incident...

was fined 12-thousand-500 dollars. Wide receiver Michael Timpson and fullback Robert Perryman, who now plays for the Dallas Cowboys, each were fined five-thousand bucks.

The Patriots' management was fined 25-thousand. In addition, the management was assessed an additional 25-thousand-dollar penalty to defray the cost of preparing instructional materials for all N-F-L personnel on responsible dealings with the media.

In a statement, owner Victor Kiam said the Patriots ''regret that the incident occurred.''

The 26-year-old Olson... who has been reassigned to the N-B-A Celtics and N-H-L Bruins... thanked Tagliabue and the special counsel ''for their thorough and revealing investigative report.''

(NOV. 28) UPI - John Major is about to become the youngest British prime minister since 1834. Major will be sworn in one day after his Conservative Party elected him leader. Margaret Thatcher has given Queen Elizabeth her resignation, ending her 11-year term as prime minister today. Major supported Thatcher until she bowed to pressure to resign.

Thatcher will remain in Parliament, where she represents the north London constituency of Finchley. But it is uncertain whether she will want to remain in the House of Commons after the next election. There is speculation that Thatcher could become the duchess of Dulwich, the south London area where she moves this week. She could also make Millions by writing her memoirs.

SINGAPORE (NOV. 28) UPI - Goh Chok Tong was sworn in Wednesday as Singapore's second prime minister in 31 years, heralding a new era with the affable politician aiming for a gentler, caring nation instead of one marked by iron-fisted control.

The inauguration was the culmination of the longstanding plan of outgoing Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew to transfer the leadership to a hand-picked, second-generation team headed by Goh, who had served as Lee's first deputy prime minister, and close his tenure as the world's longest-serving democratically elected head of government.

Goh, 49, educated in the United States, was inaugurated 14 years after he was first elected to Parliament. Since then he has held the defense, finance, health and trade and industry portfolios.

First to be sworn in among Goh's Cabinet was Lee, 67, who was named senior minister, a position enabling him to provide advice and speak up if Goh blunders.

Stressing that the power switch he mastermined is not knocking him out of the political arena, Lee also will continue to lead the ruling People's Action Party (PAP), which holds 80 of the 81 seats in Parliament.

Next named to the Cabinet was Lee Hsien-Loong, the former prime minister's 38-year-old son, who remains trade and industry minister in addition to his new status as one of two deputy prime ministers.

All 13 Cabinet members are holdovers from Lee's administration in what Goh and Lee describe as necessary continuity.

While Goh acknowledges that the younger Lee is a potential prime minister, he has denied that he is serving as a ''seat warmer'' and stressed that he, not Lee Kuan Yew, will be in charge.

Goh, also retaining his previous post as defense minister, plans to retain the prime ministership for at least eight years by winning the next election in 1993.

Lee is credited with transforming a sleepy island into one of the world's busiest ports and a major financial hub, but his critics describe him as autocratic and ruthless in his repression of dissent. As for Lee's policies of stringent restrictions on the foreign press and incarcerating suspected subversives without trials, Goh indicated there will be no radical change.

Goh's style is more mellow, and his genial and even-tempered disposition are a sharp contrast to Lee's single-minded determination to repress dissent. The tall, tanned and bespectacled man who ran a shipping line before entering politics epitomizes the hard-working Singaporean.

He proclaims to be aiming for a freer country and intends to encourage a more participatory democracy.

But analysts noted that it will be difficult for Goh to act without Lee's approval. ''No one in the Cabinet can really stand up to him,'' one official said.

Opposition politicians also doubted that the transition would bring meaningful change.

Noting that Goh is ''not as arrogant, belicose and intimidating'' as his predecessor,'' Lee Siew Choh said, ''If he brings about glasnost, openness and true democracy, and wins an election fairly, we will give ''nd wins an elec

But Lee Siew Choh, a non-voting member of Parliament, said he was convinced Goh would only serve as a ''seat warmer'' for the former prime minister's son.

J.B. Jeyaretnam, leader of the Workers Party and an outspoken critic, predicted that Goh will be a ''lame duck'' regardless of his aspirations.

''With Goh at the head of the table during a Cabinet meeting, the elder Lee to his right and the younger Lee to his left, what chance will he have of implementing his own policies?'' Jeyaretnam asked.

(NOV. 28) UPI - There's a Major change in the British government today.

After Margaret Thatcher went to Buckinham Palace to hand in her resignation today, John Major was sworn in as prime minister.

Thatcher told reporters gathered outside her official residence ''It has been a tremendous privilege to serve this country as prime minister. ''

Major takes charge of a badly divided party that he pledged to unify.

Shortly after being elected by members of the Conservative Party yesterday, Major said ''Our job now is quite clear. We are going to unite, unite totally and absolutely and go on to win the next election.''

Major actually fell two votes short of the 187 he needed to win outright on a second-round ballot of Conservative members of Parliament, but his two opponents conceded defeat and urged that he be made party leader and prime minister.

Michael Heseltine, who was responsible for Thatcher's demisse, received 131 votes and Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd got 56. Major had 185.

Opposition Labor Party leader Neil Kinnock called Major ''a no-change prime minister'' and repeated a call for an early general election, which must be held by mid-1992.

As chancellor of the exchequer, Major has had overall responsibility for the British budget and economy.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - The nation's total output of goods and services increased a revised 1.7 percent in the third quarter while orders for durable goods jumped 3.6 percent in October, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

The latest gross national product rise of $18 billion was weaker than a preliminary estimate released last month, and the surge in durable goods orders - the best since May - offset a drop of 1.6 percent in September, according to a pair of government reports.

Economists expected a 1.9 percent gain in the real GNP for July, August and September following a 1.8 percent advance in the previous quarter, and no change from September to October for durable goods - expensive items from aircraft to household appliances manufactured to last three or more years.

The data were adjusted for seasonal factors.

The approximately $4.5 billion increase in October durable goods was attributed mainly to an increase in demand for commercial aircraft, as the world's airlines placed more orders to replace their older and less fuel efficient jet fleets.

But ''since reaching a high in December 1988 of $132.1 billion, (total) orders have been unstable, fluctuating around a monthly average of $125.9 billion,'' the government said.

The October total was about $129.45 billion.

Not counting transportation equipment, durable goods orders were down 0.4 percent in October. Excluding defense hardware, orders were up 4.5 percent last month.

Exports - including aircraft, chemicals and and scientific equipment - have been a bright spot for the durable goods and GNP data for most of the year. For example, exports of goods and services advanced 4.3 percent over the previous quarter in the latest GNP report.

A final real GNP estimate will be released by the Commerce Department in December. Two or more consecutive quarters of negative numbers indicate the nation is in recession.

In the second quarter - April, May and June - the real GNP inched up 0.4 percent. Analysts anticipate a significant drop in economic activity when the fourth-quarter results are released early next year.

The government also reported Wednesday that after-tax corporate profits increased a surprising 6.7 percent - to an annual rate of about $177.2 billion - in the third quarter after edging down 0.6 percent in the second quarter.

Weak corporate profits have cut into government revenue and added to the widening federal budget deficit. Private economists expected after- tax profits would total only $166 billion in the third quarter.

The fixed weight price index, a measure of inflation tied to the GNP report, was up 4.2 percent in the third quarter vs. up 3.9 percent in the second quarter. Another index that tracks only domestic prices increased 5.1 percent after gaining 2.9 percent.

''Most of the step-up was in energy prices,'' in the aftermath of the Persian Gulf crisis, the Commerce Department said.

PARIS (NOV. 28) UPI - Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk met Wednesday with ambasssadors from Southeast Asian nations as part of his effort to persuade his country's four warring factions to begin peace talks in Paris, diplomatic sources said.

Sihanouk, who arrived in the French capital last week, met with the ambassadors from Thailand, Indonesia, Singapore, Malaysia, the Philippines and Brunei to discuss the Cambodian peace process.

The prince, who earlier this year stepped down as head of one of the warring factions, met with the ambassadors a day after Soviet Foreign Affairs Vice Minister Igor Rogatchev criticized his efforts to persuade the four factions to meet in Paris Sunday.

Rogatchev said the four factions should first be brought together under the auspices of the International Conference on Cambodia headed by France and Indonesia.

French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas has said Paris was ready to convene such a conference ''at the earliest possible moment'' if the ''final disagreements between Cambodians can be overcome.''

The five permanent members of the U.N Security Council agreed over the weekend on a cease-fire and transitional U.N. administration as steps towards ending the 12-year old war, but the plan must be accepted by the four Cambodian factions.

The factions disagree over the the structure of the Supreme National Council that would rule the country until elections can be held.

The five permanent U.N. members - the United States, France, England, the Soviet Union and China - met with representatives from the U.N. and Indonesia, which is co-chairman of the 20-nation Paris Conference on Cambodia that would guarantee the agreement.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - The nation's total output of goods and services increased a revised 1.7 percent in the third quarter.

The latest gross national product rise of $18 billion was weaker than a preliminary estimate released last month, and the surge in durable goods orders - the best since May - offset a drop of 1.6 percent in September, according to a pair of government reports.

Economists expected a 1.9 percent gain in the real GNP for July, August and September following a 1.8 percent advance in the previous quarter, and no change from September to October for durable goods - expensive items from aircraft to household appliances manufactured to last three or more years.

The data were adjusted for seasonal factors.

A final real GNP estimate will be released by the Commerce Department in December. Two or more consecutive quarters of negative numbers indicate the nation is in recession.

In the second quarter - April, May and June - the real GNP inched up 0.4 percent. Analysts anticipate a significant drop in economic activity when the fourth-quarter results are released early next year.

The fixed weight price index, a measure of inflation tied to the GNP report, was up 4.2 percent in the third quarter vs. up 3.9 percent in the second quarter. Another index that tracks only domestic prices increased 5.1 percent after gaining 2.9 percent.

''Most of the step-up was in energy prices,'' in the aftermath of the Persian Gulf crisis, the Commerce Department said.

TOKYO (NOV. 28) UPI - Mitsubishi Electric Corp. of Japan Wednesday reported increased consolidated profits sales for the six months ended Sept. 30.

MELCO said net income increased 18.0 percent over a year ago to $304.3 million while sales jumped 7.0 percent to $10.249 billion.

The company said overseas sales, including exports, gained 2.0 percent to $2.4 billion, accounting for 22.0 percent of the total sales, down from 23.0 percent a year ago.

The company said sales of industrial products and automation equipment grew 4.0 percent to $2.11 billion while those of information and communication systems and electronics devices were up 2.0 percent to $3.44 billion.

Sales of consumer and other products surged 18.0 percent to $3.33 billion, the company said.

TOKYO (NOV. 28) UPI - The worldwide business slowdown is creeping into Japan where major corporations will report a drop in profits this year after several years of continuous growth, according to a newspaper survey Wednesday.

The economic journal Nihon Keizai Shimbun said its survey showed that major Japanese companies are expected to report a substantial decrease in profits for the fiscal year ending March 31.

The report followed a government warning that the world economy is expected to worsen in the coming years, dealing a blow to developing nations suffering from the heavy external debt burden.

The government's Economic Planning Agency said in a report on the world economy released Tuesday that the worldwide slowdown has already begun, bringing down the annual growth rate from 4.1 percent in 1988 to 3.0 percent in 1989 and to an estimated 2.0 percent in 1990.

The government warned the worsening situation will be magnified by the outbreak of war in the Gulf region or by a failure of the ongoing multinational negotiations for freer world trade.

Nihon Keizai said its prediction of a slowdown in Japan was based on a survey of major corporations which are listed on domestic stock exchanges.

The journal said 1,038 companies, excluding financial institutions, which have released their business results for the half-year ended Sept. 30 showed that their total pre-tax profits declined 0.7 percent from a year ago to $31.61 billion) on sales of $1.079 trillion, up 9.2 percent.

Their profits for the year ending next March 31 are expected to fall 2.6 percent to $65.8 billion on sales totaling $2.23 trillion, up 3.9 percent, the journal said.

The report said 1,177 companies, including banks, securities and insurance firms, posted a 19.8 percent fall in half-year pre-tax profits at $44.6 billion on sales totaling $1.325 trillion, up 12.3 percent.

Their sales growth rate is expected to shrink to 6.2 percent at an estimated $2.735 trillion for the year ending next March 31, producing pre-tax profits of $95.1 billion, down 13.5 percent, the journal said.

The report cited rising interest rates and crude oil prices as a result of the Gulf crisis and the stock market slump as major adverse factors.

''The survey showed that Japan's economy, which has continued to expand against the background of brisk corporate capital spending and consumer expenditures, now stands at a cross-roads,'' the journal said.

The Economic Planning Agency said the domestic key indicator for future business performance plunged below the critical ''boom or bust'' 50 percent level in September for the first time in seven months.

Agency officials described the fall as temporary but added they are not optimistic about the future course of the Japanese economy.

A private credit research agency said business failures in October made an upturn for the first time in 69 months to hit a monthly high of this year.

Tokyo Shoko Research Co. said bankruptcies in the month totaled 646, up 9.7 percent over a year ago and up 21.7 percent over the previous month, with liabilities totaling $1.155 billion, up 48.2 percent over a year ago and up 64.6 percent over the previous month.

TOKYO (NOV. 28) UPI - Toshiba Corp. of Japan said Wednesday it will market three new high-speed notebook-sized computers and a new laptop computer with an advanced color display in December and March, respectively.

The company said the notebook-sized models offer three times the processing speed of their predecessors currently on the market.

Toshiba said each model has a fluorescent sidelit display, which displays graphics with brilliance three times that of current electric luminescent display. In all three models, random access memory can be expanded.

The laptop features a thin film liquid crystal display which is able to display 16 colors from a palette of 4,096 colors, the company said.

TOKYO (NOV. 28) UPI - Asian farmers joined forces Wednesday to indicate their firm stance against weakening existing bans on the rice imports.

With GATT talks on world trade liberalization set to climax Dec. 3-7 in Brussels, Belgium, farmers' associations from Japan, South Korea and Taiwan issued a joint statement calling on the trade body to let them keep their bans on rice imports.

''GATT agreements should clearly authorize efforts of countries to secure domestic self-sufficiency,'' the statement said in part. The term has come to refer to a ban on imports of staple foods such as rice.

The three countries currently ban virtually all rice imports, and Japan has argued for keeping its ban under a ''food security'' exemption it wants in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Tuesday, a Foreign Ministry spokesman reaffirmed that position, saying that Japan would be willing to discuss its position on rice only if other countries would put their most vital issues on the table.

During the five-year Uruguay Round of GATT negotiations, the United States has pressed for an end to all such bans.

The U.S. has asked that member countries convert such barriers into tariffs, which would them be gradually reduced over 10 years.

The concept was flatly rejected by the farmers' associations.

''The people of Korea, Taiwan and Japan have in history chosen ... rice as the crop most appropriate for the Asian monsoon season to feed many people. ... Therefore, every country should be guaranteed to decide its own agricultural policy,'' the statement said.

Speaking at a press conference following release of the statement, Mitsugu Horiuchi, the president of Japan's Central Union of Agricultural Cooperatives, said the U.S. proposal would devastate his members, most of whom work small, inefficient plots.

''If there is 100 percent liberalization, surely Japan's farmers will not be able to survive far into the future,'' Horiuchi said. ''This is not in the interest of the people living in the country.

''That is why we insist on complete self-sufficiency (in rice).''

Horiuchi said his organization planned to hold a rally in Tokyo against rice imports Thursday.

LONDON (NOV. 28) UPI - The Sunday Correspondent has ceased publication and gone into liquidation, hit by falling circulation and continued losses from an advertising slump, management said.

Chief Executive Nick Shott gave the 200 staffers of the Correspondent, which has been in business just over a year, an hour to clear their desks late Tuesday, after telling them the newspaper had ceased trading.

A last-ditch attempt to merge with Today, a daily owned by Australian-born media magnate Rupert Murdoch's News International, had fallen through because the Correspondent had failed to find a buyer for 51 percent of a restructured company, Shott said.

Circulation that fell to 130,000 earlier this year forced the Correspondent to relaunch in tabloid format Sept. 30, and to introduce sales gimmicks such as giving free copies in return for vouchers in advertisements in other papers.

The changearound included a new editor, John Bryant, and a $5.1 million refinancing deal.

Last Sunday's sales of 209,000 reportedly cost $1.33 each to produce against a cover price of 25 cents.

The Correspondent's launch Sept. 17, 1989 came just as Britain hit a slump in advertising, and was soured further by The Independent's inauguration of a Sunday newspaper in January, which sells about 320,000 copies a week.

The Correspondent was the first new British Sunday broadsheet since the Sunday Telegraph started publication 29 years ago.

PROVIDENCE, RI (NOV. 28) UPI - A Roman Catholic priest once accused of lying to help socialite Claus von Bulow beat attempted-murder charges denied Wednesday he stole $200,000 from his parish to support a lavish lifestyle.

The Rev. Philip Magaldi, head of St. Anthony's parish in North Providence from 1976 to 1988 before moving to Texas, appeared before Superior Court Judge Thomas Needham. He pleaded innocent to 11 counts charging him with embezzlement, larceny and forgery, and was freed on $50,000 personal recognizance.

''I would like to say more than simply that I am not guilty of the charges, but my attorney has advised me not to make any comments at the present time,'' Magaldi told reporters outside the Providence courthouse.

''I know a lot of pople think that when you say 'no comment' that you're guilty. I hope that people who have known me for the past 27 years in the parishes where I have served know that a 'no comment' is not necessarily an admission of guilt,'' he said.

The priest was indicted on Nov. 8 following a two-year investigation. Attorney General James O'Neil said the probe revealed Magaldi skimmed money from the weekly collections at St. Anthony's and embezzled from ''various parish funds.''

Magaldi, 54, allegedly used the money to buy lottery tickets and take vacations to such destinations as the Virgin Islands and Montreal.

Several years ago, he gained notoriety when he gave a sworn statement to support von Bulow, a Danish jetsetter who was acquitted after a second trial on charges he twice tried to kill his wife, Martha ''Sunny'' von Bulow, in their Newport mansion. Magaldi was indicted in 1985 on charges he lied in the statement, but the charges were dropped two years later for lack of evidence.

The Roman Catholic Diocese of Providence announced in May 1988 that Magaldi had resigned from St. Anthony's because of ''accounting errors.'' It said he was taking a leave of absence to study Spanish in San Antonio, Texas.

Prosecutors said Magaldi was now pastor of St. Mary's Church in Henrietta, Texas, but was not involved in allocating or depositing funds there.

(NOV. 28) UPI - China's foreign minister Wednesday virtually assured that Beijing would tacitly support a U.S.-backed U.N. resolution authorizing military force against the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait, and Iraq renewed its call for a dialogue with Washington on the eve of the U.N. vote.

In Washington, Senate hearings resumed Tuesday on the U.S. shift from a defensive to an offensive stance in the Persian Gulf region.

Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen strongly hinted to reporters in Beijing before flying to the United States that China would abstain from voting on the U.N. Security Council resolution rather than veto it.

Washington would prefer China's support when the Security Council foreign ministers vote Thursday but an abstention would not scuttle the resolution.

Qian denied reports that China had given private assurances it would vote in favor of the plan. When asked if China would not vote in favor of the resolution, he replied, ''I think it is like that,'' but asked if Beijing would veto the resolution, he said, ''I didn't say so.''

Qian nevertheless refused to be explicit about an abstension. ''I think you will know after the vote,'' he told reporters.

He also indicated that he will drive a hard bargain in exchange for the abstention, saying he sees his visit as ending a U.S. ban on high- level exchanges with Chinese officials imposed after Beijing crushed the Tiananmen

Square democracy movement in June 1989.

Earlier reports said all five permanent members of the Security Council - the United States, Britain, France, China and the Soviet Union - have agreed on the use of force with the only hurdle being whether the resolution set a pullout deadline of Jan. 1 or Jan. 15.

Baghdad Radio, meanwhile, quoted Iraq's first deputy premier, Taha Yassin Ramadan, as saying, ''The U.S. president is leading the world toward a military confrontation and he should enter into a dialogue (with Iraq) to prevent a catastrophe.''

Previous Iraqi calls for dialogue have been rejected, with the Bush administration saying such talks could not be held until Iraq withdraws from Kuwait, which it invaded Aug. 2 and soon annexed.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's second in command, Izzat Ibrahim, vice president of the ruling Revolutionary Command Council, echoed Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, who said Tuesday that Iraq would ''never succumb to any pressure,'' and that Iraq's position on Kuwait would remain unchanged.

The influential Iraqi newspaper Al Thawra, meanwhile, reiterated that any resolution by the Security Council sanctioning military action ''would not force Iraq to relinquish its historical right,'' a reference to Saddam's insistance that Kuwait historically is part of Iraq.

The newspaper, which speaks for the ruling Baath Socialist Party in Iraq, added that any U.N. resolution sanctioning force to drive Iraq from Kuwait ''will only damage the credibility and reputation of the United Nations.''

Echoing that stance was former Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, who said Wednesday in Amman before embarking on a second visit to Baghdad that such a resolution would violate ''the spirit of the U.N. charter.''

Ortega, leader of Nicaragua's opposition party, the Sandinista Liberation Front, said he hoped that ''all members of the Security Council will remain open to the possibility of initiatives favoring dialogue toward a peaceful solution to the gulf crisis.''

In Washington, the Senate Armed Services Committee heard Wednesday from retired Navy Adm. William Crowe and retired Air Force Gen. David Jones, both former chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

On Tuesday, Senate Democrats urged caution in the Senate Armed Services Committee hearings. Committee's Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said there was justification for military action to force Iraq from Kuwait, but asked whether it was ''wise at this time and in our national interest.''

Meanwhile, 70 Italians left Baghdad for home Wednesday. Saddam had ordered their release in response to an appeal Saturday from visiting Greek Catholic Archbishop of Jerusalem Helarion Cappuchi.

An Italian Embassy spokesman in Baghdad said the release left almost 200 Italians still in Iraqi custody. He said the rest were expected to leave as soon as their exit visas and other documents are issued.

Late Tuesday, Saddam ordered the release of an unspecified number of U.S. hostages in response to an appeal from former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali, who met with Saddam and told the Iraqi leader that 8 million American Moslems support Iraq.

HOUSTON (NOV. 28) UPI - Gulf States Utilities Co. has discussed possible mergers with both Houston Lighting & Power Co. and Central & South West Corp. of Dallas, an official of the financially troubled utility said.

GSU Chief Financial Officer Joseph Donnelly discussed the talks Tuesday while testifying before the Public Service Commission in Baton Rouge, La.

Beaumont-based GSU serves more than 500,000 customers in a two-state area stretching from near New Orleans to near Austin. The utility is seeking a rate increase of about $30 million in Louisiana.

Donnelly later said GSU is not involved in ongoing merger talks with the larger utility companies, and declined to say whether GSU is seriously seeking a merger.

Spokesmen for both HL&P and Central & South West declined comment on possible merger discussions.

Industry analysts said a merger of GSU and one of the Texas utilities would make sense, particularly a merger with Central & South West, which has made it known it wants to buy other utilities. The company held previous merger talks with GSU in the late 1980s.

''GSU has had so many problems, I would think they would be receptive to get over some of the torment they've been facing,'' said Herbert Jones, an analyst with Eppler, Guerin & Turner in Dallas.

GSU stock, with a book value of nearly $18 a share, or a total of more than $1.8 billion, was trading Wednesday at $9.50, up 25 cents.

Investors are worried about the stock because of litigation involving $4 billion in cost overruns on construction of the River Bend nuclear power plant in Louisiana, said Bert Kramer, a PaineWebber analyst in New York.

GSU may be sold for less than book value, he said.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (NOV. 28) UPI - Ohio State University President E. Gordon Gee says football coach John Cooper will not be evaluated for a possible contract extension until after next season.

Gee had indicated last week that an extension for Cooper's contract might come at the end of this season, and Cooper said Monday he would like an extension.

Gee, however, said Tuesday the time to consider an extension will be after next season when Cooper will have completed four years of his five-year contract.

''Clearly, the issue will come up at this time next year,'' Gee said. ''At this point, there are certainly no plans (for a contract extension) this year.''

Cooper, 19-13-2 and without a Big Ten title in his first three years at Ohio State, said Monday not receiving a contract extension now would make him ''nervous.''

''He certainly shouldn't be nervous,'' Gee said. ''I think I need to call coach Cooper in, put my arm around him, look in the mirror and say, 'Don't be nervous.'

''He has two years left on his contract,'' Gee said. ''We're looking forward to an excellent year next year. I expect John Cooper to be with us for a very, very long period of time.''

Gee is in his first year as the Ohio State president after leaving Colorado, where he gave football coach Bill McCartney a 15-year contract.

''John has two years left,'' Gee said. ''Bill was renewed at the end of the fourth year of a five-year contract. That's the time you really start talking about a contract extension.

''There's always an asterisk. The athletic director could come in and make a recommendation, but I surmise that will not be the case.''

DOVER (NOV. 28) UPI - The Delaware Lottery will join the multi-state Lotto America game in January, lottery officials said Wednesday.

Lottery Director Otho Brown said the game, already played in 15 states and the District of Columbia, will raise state sales because of its larger jackpots.

''Our research shows that the larger jackpots in neighboring states attract many Delawareans who go out of the state to play those games,'' Brown said. ''It is clear to us that many players want the Delaware Lottery to offer a bigger jackpot game.''

Lotto America is not currently offered in the states which surround Delaware, Brown said.

Tickets for the Wednesday and Saturday night Lotto America drawings will go on sale in Delaware in mid-January.

Profits from ticket sales of Delaware's Lotto America game will stay in the state. The lottery last fiscal year contributed more than $25 million to the state general fund.

Lotto America is already played in Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Washington, D.C.

Brown said the Delaware Lottery will continue its current 6-36 Lotto game.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - Barbara Bush is bowing out of the president's five-nation Latin American swing next week because of a low grade sinus infection, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater announced Wednesday.

Fitzwater said that the Bush's daughter, Dorothy, will substitute for her mother on the trip, which will include several events hosted by the wives of the presidents of the countries visited, and attendance at state dinners.

Anna Perez, the first lady's press secretary, said Mrs. Bush, who has been on a non-stop travel schedule with the president over the last two weeks, has a sinus infection that is aggravated by air travel.

Perez said the first lady is taking antibiotics for the infection.

President Bush is scheduled to leave Washington Sunday evening and travel to Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, Chile and Venezuela, returning to the White House on Dec. 8.

The first lady just returned from a two-day trip to Monterrey, Mexico, with the president, which immediately followed an 8-day journey to Europe and the Middle East.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan Wednesday blamed much of the current economic slump in the United States on rising oil prices and threats of war stemming from the Persian Gulf crisis.

"A significant part of the weakness we're looking at is Persian Gulf-related," Greenspan told the House Banking Committee. "We had evidence that in the third quarter, while there was some economic softening, (the economy) was still chugging along." But that changed following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2, Greenspan said.

Greenspan said the threat of war in the Persian Gulf, rising oil prices and credit tightening by banks throughout the United States have combined to create a "meaningful downturn" in U.S. economic output. Although he declined to determine whether the economy is in recession, he conceded "there is no question the economy is still easing."

"What we're looking at is a gradual decline, one that if it persists will give us a fourth quarter that is negative," he said. "The question of whether this is the beginning of a recession is clearly a forecast. We won't know if this is a recession or an abberation of economic activity for quite a while."

Greenspan told the panel that economic data indicates the economy to be in better shape than most people think. "The world out there, when you look at the hard data, is not in as bad a shape as it feels," he said. "We're not seeing at this stage a whole set of negative data."

Greenspan's remarks followed reports of a revised 1.7 percent rise in the U.S. gross national product and a 3.6 percent jump in orders for durable goods.

"If the economy was as bad at this point as a number of my friends and your friends tell us, we should see weaker numbers than we have," Greenspan said. "There's got to be a mistake in the durable goods numbers we've seen."

Turning back to the Persian Gulf crisis, Greenspan said rising oil prices are slowing U.S. economic growth and the threat of war has cast a cloud of uncertainty over consumer confidence.

When asked whether the United States should fight in the Persian Gulf to protect jobs, Greenspan said "that's not an inappropriate view." "If Saddam Hussein has the capability of turning the (oil) faucet on or off, he can have a very significant impact on world industrial output."

Sanctions blocking the purchase of oil from Iraq and Kuwait has removed 4.3 million barrels a day from the market, or ten percent of global oil production.

This loss has been fully replaced by other oil-producing nations, chiefly Saudi Arabia, Greenspan said, adding that the level of oil stocks last week was roughly the same as one year ago and about six percent more than the minimum required to prevent operating problems and shortages.

The Fed chairman declined to say how the Persian Gulf crisis is affecting thinking toward monetary policy. Since the invasion, the Fed has lowered its federal funds rate in response to indications of a weaker economy.

"Whether further adjustments to policy will be needed cannot be spelled out in advance and will depend on the specifics of the circumstances as they develop " he said.

"In the final analysis, I can only offer the assurance that the Federal Reserve will seek, as we have in the past, to foster economic stability and sustainable growth."

(NOV. 28) UPI - Britain's Queen Elizabeth formally invited John Major to form a new government and serve as her prime minister. Elevation of the 47-year-old one-time welfare recipient to head of government ends the reign of Margaret Thatcher as the longest-serving British prime minister this century. Major woN'T have far to move as he takes over the government. He was living just one door away, at Number 11 Downing Street, while serving as chancellor of the exchequer.

Earlier today, Thatcher formally left Number 10 Downing Street and handed her resignation to the queen during a 30-minute meeting at nearby Buckingham Palace. Major's first task is to sort out a new Cabinet and patch up any political wounds within his Conservative Party. He becomes the youngest prime minister of Great Britain since Robert Peel took the post in 1834 at age 46.

While Britain undergoes a changing of the political guard, so goes Singapore. Goh Chok Tong was sworn in today as the bustling island nation's second prime minister in 31 years. Today's inauguration of Goh is the culmination of the longstanding plan by outgoing Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew to transfer the leadership to a hand-picked, second- generation team. The 49-year-old Goh is U-S educated and has been Sinapore's minister of defense, finance, health and industry during the past 14 years. Lee will stay on as a senior adviser.

The Commerce Department is taking seasonal factors into consideration as it issues the official revision to earlier third-quarter gross national product figures. The government lowered the figure slightly to show an increase of one-point-seven percent in the total output of goods and services. Economists had expected a one-point-nine percent increase.

A separate report shows that after-tax corporate profits were up by an UNexpected six-point-seven percent in the July-to-September period after falling six-tenths of one percent in the second quarter. Weak corporate profits cut into government revenues, adding to an already growing federal budget deficit.

Iraq again is calling for talks with Washington to avoid a Persian Gulf war. It is a stand the Bush administration has rejected in the past with its own demand that Iraq get out of Kuwait first. This comes as the U-N Security Council prepares for a debate tomorrow on a resolution that would sanction the use of force to end the crisis.

Taking care of business at home will keep Soviet President Gorbachev from traveling to Norway as planned to pick up his Nobel Peace Prize. The Soviet news agency Tass quotes Gorbachev's spokesman as saying ''the crucial situation'' in the Soviet Union is one of the reason's the Kremlin chief changed his plans to attend the ceremony on December 10th. Gorbachev was awarded the Peace Prize for reforms that allowed democracy to grow in Eastern Europe. But he has been criticized for devoting too much time to foreign affairs and overseas trips while his constituents cope with food shortages and other domestic problems.

Sources in Tucson, Arizona, say actor Gary Coleman is hospitalized under an assumed name for treatment of a long-time kidney condition. The 22-year-old former star of the T-V sitcom ''Diff'rent Strokes'' already had received two kidney transplants.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - NASA and the company that built the Hubble Space Telescope share the blame for failing to detect the flaw that crippled the instrument's powers, a NASA report concluded.

Workers at the Perkin-Elmer Corp. in Danbury, Conn., had at least three major chances to find the defect before the telescope was placed into orbit in April but the employees wrongly dismissed the signs, the report said Tuesday.

In addition, employees in Perkin-Elmer's optical division failed to bring the signs of trouble to the attention of top company officials or anyone at NASA, said Lew Allen, who led a team that investigated the embarrassing flaw for NASA and issued the report.

However, NASA also must accept responsibility because the agency was in charge of the project and oversaw the work, Allen said.

''Perkin-Elmer should have not have allowed a situation for those inhibited communications to exist. NASA had every right to expect that Perkin-Elmer would have done a better job than this,'' Allen said at a news conference.

''On the other hand, it is fundamentally NASA's responsibility as the government agency to get this done. NASA should have been aware of what was happening at Perkin-Elmer,'' he said. ''I think you have to say each ... has to bear responsibility.''

Sen. Al Gore, D.-Tenn., who held hearings to investigate the telescope's defect, said the report ''makes crystal clear'' the need for NASA to ''continue its efforts to strengthen testing and quality control efforts.''

Lennard Fisk, NASA's associate administrator for the Office of Space Science and Applications, said it was ''premature'' to say whether the agency would take action against Perkin-Elmer, which is now called Hughes Danbury Optical Systems Inc.

In a statement issued Wednesday, Hughes Danbury said company officials ''concur in general with'' the report's ''technical findings'' and were ''distressed'' by the telescope's problem.

''We nonetheless are proud of our broader role on the Hubble Space Telescope program'' and ''will continue to support NASA in recovering the full Hubble capabilities,'' the statement said.

Fisk acknowledged the mistakes that led to both the 1986 explosion of the space shuttle Challenger accident and Hubble defect had some similarities. But Fisk noted Hubble's problem occurred 10 years ago and the agency had taken many steps since then to avoid such mistakes.

''Considerable effort has been made to promote communication,'' he said.

Allen noted that his panel checked whether similar problems exist with another NASA project underway at Hughes Danbury and found that improvements had been made.

Although the telescope can do valuable research despite its flaw, NASA plans to correct the defect in 1993 by installing a modified camera on board. The repair will cost between $40 million and $50 million, Fisk said.

The long-awaited $1.5 billion telescope was expected to revolutionize astronomy by being able to study the universe in greater detail than ever before through its advanced optical system and perch 381 miles above Earth.

But about two months after the instrument was placed into orbit, NASA was shocked to discover the telescope's supposedly perfect primary mirror was misshapen, preventing the telescope from bringing starlight into sharp focus.

An embarrassed NASA formed the six-member panel to investigate the defect headed by Allen, director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif.

The panel discovered the problem apparently was caused when a Perkin-Elmer worker incorrectly set a device called a reflective null corrector, which was used to measure the mirror while it was being precisely ground.

Employees had indications there was a problem when they had to install washers in the device to compensate for the faulty setting, and twice more when tests with other instruments, called refractive and inverse null correctors, indicated the mirror was shaped wrong.

But the warning signs were ignored because the reflective null corrector was considered the most accurate of the three testing devices, the panel found.

''The Perkin-Elmer plan for fabricating the primary mirror placed complete reliance on the reflective null corrector as the only test to be used in both manufacturing and verifying the mirror's surface with the required precision. NASA understood and accepted this plan,'' the report said. ''This methodology should have alerted NASA management to the fragility of the process and possibility of gross error.''

In addition, Perkin-Elmer tended to operated like a ''closed shop'' in which NASA overseers were not allowed to actually watch employees work, Allen said.

The report also cited pressures over cost and time that deflected attention from the mirror's construction.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - Here are key provisions of the five-year farm policy law, which will freeze subsidy rates, reduce the number of acres eligible for subsidies, expand environmental protections and renew public food programs:

CROP FLEXIBILITY

As part of spending cuts, allows "triple base" plan, which would reduce by 15 percent the wheat, feed grain, cotton and rice acreage eligible for support payments. Farmers could plant virtually any crop, excluding fruit and vegetables, on the land. Wheat, feed grains, cotton, rice and oil seeds grown on the land would be eligible for government loans.

A voluntary ten percent "planting flexibility" program also is offered. Rules on allowable crops are similar to triple base but limits may be applied to soybean planting.

TARGET PRICES

Frozen at this year's levels: $4 a bushel for wheat, $2.75 for corn, $2.25 for barley, $1.45 for oats, 72.9 cents a pound for cotton and $10.71 per 100 pounds of rice.

LOAN RATES

Slightly increases rates for wheat and feed grains by calculating loans on basis of 85 percent of average market price for preceding five years. Agriculture Department unilaterally could reduce rates by 20 percent.

Creates marketing loan for soybeans and other oilseeds. Soybean rate is $5.02 a bushel with rates for minor oilseeds, such as canola, sunflowers, flax and safflower, set at proportional amounts.

Cotton and rice marketing loans are retained. Minimum rate for cotton is 50 cents a pound and for rice $6.50 per 100 pounds. Maximum reduction of five percent a year is allowed.

DAIRY

Support price is set at minimum of $10.10 per 100 pounds of milk, the current rate. Agriculture Department is required to report by Aug. 1 on ways to control production if burdensome surpluses develop.

If Congress does not act by Jan. 1, 1992, and surpluses would exceed seven billion pounds, government can assess a fee to cover the cost of buying surpluses that exceed seven billion pounds. Dairy farmers also face assessments as part of deficit-cutting package.

SUGAR

Support price frozen at 18 cents a pound for raw sugar. Imported sugar is guaranteed at least 1.25 million tons of sales; marketing quotas will be put on domestic beet and cane sugar if needed to assure it. As part of spending cuts, a 1 percent fee will be charged on crop loans.

OTHER COMMODITIES

Peanut, honey, wool and mohair support programs are reauthorized. As part of deficit-cutting package, producers face assessments on loans or deductions from payments.

PAYMENT LIMITS

Reduces to $250,000 the maximum amount farmers can receive in government payments, either directly or through affiliated businesses, compared to limit that effectively was $500,000.

New set of rules includes $50,000 limit on crop subsidies and $75,000 limit on receipts from marketing loans, loan deficiency payments and so-called Findley payment made when prices are particularly low.

Payments under the wool, honey and mohair programs would be racheted down form $200,000 in 1991 to $125,000 by 1994.

PUBLIC NUTRITION

Food stamp program is reauthorized but with simpler rules and additional penalties for fraud and misuse of coupons. Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program and Commodity Supplemental Food Program also are reauthorized for five years.

An attempt to expand the food stamp program by $5 billion in honor of the late Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, was dropped due to lack of money.

CONSERVATION

Expands list of benefits that can be lost by farmers who violate conservation compliance rules, which require farmers to control erosion, or who violate "sodbuster" rule by putting fragile land in crop production.

Strengthens the "swampbuster" rules against converting wetlands to crop production. In limited cases, allows farmers to eliminate "nuisance" spots if they restore wetland of at least the same size.

Extends the Conservation Reserve Program for five more years, with enrollment set at a minimum of 40 million acres. List of eligible land is broadened.

ENVIRONMENTAL SAFEGUARDS

A voluntary Wetland Reserve is created that would preserve up to one million acres through purchase of long-term conservation easements. A Water Quality Incentive Program is established to help farmers develop plans and change production techniques to prevent contamination of water supplies. Farmers could receive up to $3,500 a year for five years in cost-share assistance. Goal is 10 million acres.

For first time, certified pesticide applicators, including farmers, will be required to keep records on use of restricted-use pesticides. Information would be available to health and government workers but confidentiality of individual records would be protected.

ORGANIC FOOD

First-ever set of nationwide rules on what can be called organic food is established. In general, producers would have to go three years without use of chemical fertilizers and pesticides to qualify for "organically grown" seal.

FOOD FOR PEACE

Program is reorganized to allow donation of food in non-emergency situations, in addition to past use of concessional sales and famine relief. Forgiveness of debts allowed in some instances.

EXPORT PROMOTION

Export Enhancement Program, the major U.S. export subsidy program, is reauthorized at a minimum of $500 million a year, with new efforts to aid high-value exports.

Targeted Export Assistance Program is renamed as Market Promotion Program with activities targeted on markets where unfair trade practices exist. Funding is a minimum of $200 million a year. Export credit guarantees set at a minimum of $5.5 billion a year.

MIAMI (NOV. 28) UPI - A judge lifted an order barring Cable News Network from playing jailhouse recordings of Manuel Noriega's phone calls after lawyers for the deposed dictator argued Wednesday that any potential damage had already been done.

Defense attorney Frank Rubino said he saw a transcript of the recordings for the first time Tuesday. Only one of the seven tapes contained privileged conversations between Noriega and his defense team and CNN had already broadcast that one, he said.

''We had no idea what the rest contained,'' Rubino said. ''We never objected to any tape that was not an attorney-client tape. The damage is done. Why close the barn door? The horse is out.''

Two weeks ago, Rubino asked U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler to bar CNN from playing the tapes, saying it could prevent Noriega from getting a fair trial.

Hoeveler did so and the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the order. But Rubino dropped his objection to the tapes Wednesday after reviewing the transcripts. Hoeveler then lifted the restraining order, freeing CNN to play the tapes.

Asked how much damage had been done, Rubino said that would be for the judge and a jury to determine.

CNN attorney Steven Korn said the ruling vindicated the Atlanta network.

''No prior restraint was ever appropriate. No prior restraint is appropriate now,'' Korn said.

The ruling still sets an important legal precedent. It was the first time the Supreme Court had barred a news organization from broadcasting information in its possession.

But CNN played a portion of the tapes after Hoeveler's order and Rubino said he still would ask Hoeveler to hold the network in contempt of court for violating the order. No hearing was scheduled on that issue.

Rubino said he would also seek to have the charges against Noriega dropped because of government misconduct.

''We had to put out fires. Now, we're going after the pyromaniacs that started the fire,'' Rubino siad.

He acknowledged that Noriega knew his calls were being recorded at the Metropolitan Correctional Center, where he has been awaiting trial for nearly a year.

But Rubino said the U.S. government had no right to distribute the recordings to the Panamanian government, which Rubino contends leaked the tapes to CNN.

The Panamanian government has filed a $6.5 billion civil racketeering suit against Noriega, claiming he looted the nation's treasury and moved the assets to Europe from banks in Hong Kong, Israel, Singapore, Australia and Brazil.

An attorney for the Panamanian government said the taped calls prove Noriega is moving vast sums of money around the world.

Asked if the allegations are true, Rubino quipped, ''I hope it's true and I hope it moves to my bank account.''

He and Noriega's other lawyers have asked to withdraw from the case because they have not been paid. Rubino has accused the U.S. government of deliberately freezing Noriega's bank accounts to prevent him from obtaining adequate legal representation.

Hoeveler has given the government until Friday to report on how much of Noriega's frozen money could have come from drug profits and other illegal sources.

Noriega is charged with marijuana smuggling and providing a drug- trafficking and money laundering sanctuary for South American drug smugglers. His trial is scheduled to begin in January, but likely will be postponed.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) UPI - Americans will spend $37 billion on Christmas gifts this year, about 4 percent less than the 1989 holiday season, The Conference Board said Wednesday.

The typical American family was expected to spend about $325 on Christmas gifts in 1990, down from $335 last year, the private business research organization said.

Holiday spending was expected to drop in three of the nation's four major regions. Median family spending in the Northeast was expected to drop the sharpest, 7 percent to $357. Spending in the Midwest was expected to drop 5 percent to $315, and spending in the South was expected to drop 3 percent to $311.

The West, including Rocky Mountain and Pacific coast states, was expected to be the only region to hold steady. The spending projection was unchanged at $315.

''Holiday joy is being tempered by continuing fears about the Middle East crisis and pending Federal tax increases,'' said Fabian Linden, executive director of the board's Consumer Research Center.

''The economy has been sluggish for months now and consumer confidence is considerably lower than it was last year at this time.

''Still, it may very well be that when all the Christmas lights are lit and the carols are being sung, the gift-giving spirit will be stronger than suggested in the current survey. One bright spot is this year's holiday shopping season is slightly longer than last year's,'' he said.

The survey covering 5,000 families was conducted during the first two weeks of November by National Family Opinion Inc., of Toledo, Ohio.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - Farmers are gaining an often-stated goal - more freedom to decide which crops to grow - but it comes with the price of a smaller federal safety net under the farm policy law signed Wednesday by President Bush.

Approved by Congress last month, the law constitutes a new step by the government to help farmers earn more money on their own, rather than relying on subsidies. The first step was the 1985 farm law, which had the goal of bolstering U.S. farm exports.

''In fact, this is the most environmentally progressive farm bill ever,'' Bush said during a brief ceremony called to mark the signing of the bill.

''It's a market-oriented bill ... keeps our farmers competitive. It lets farmers make more of their decisions based on the market (rather than) the traditional farm program straitjacket.''

In addition to revising the farm program, the legislation sets the terms for food aid, export promotion, agricultural research and public feeding programs for the next five years.

It also offers significant steps to preserve wetlands, including creation of a Wetlands Reserve of up to 1 million acres, and protect water supplies from contamination by farm chemicals by encouraging farmers to change production methods and helping defray the cost of the changes. The first nationwide rules on what can be called organic food also are part of the new law.

The White House estimates the cost of the law at $170 billion over five years. Much of the spending is contingent on congressional funding, which could determine the law's environmental legacy.

Nonetheless, the law is likely to be best-known for its major changes in the farm program. It works hand in hand with the $500 billion deficit-reduction law to reduce projected farm subsidy spending over the next five years by 25 percent, or about $13 billion, to about $41 billion.

Most of the reductions would be achieved through use of the so-called triple base plan, which makes 15 percent of the wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice land ineligible for subsidies but would allow farmers to grow other crops on the land.

The idea is to let farmers look for money-making alternatives to the current mixture of crops. Triple base will be accompanied by a 10 percent ''planting flexibility'' program that is voluntary but has the same basic rules and goals.

Triple base is an untested idea but Congress preferred it to the prospect of any further cuts in crop subsidy rates. The so-called target prices were cut 10 percent under the 1985 farm law. They will be frozen at 1990 levels under the new farm bill.

Farmers generally have expressed pleasure at the outcome of the 1985 law - at $78 billion, the most expensive farm bill ever - but have complained they were locked into growing the same crops by rigid government rules.

Proponents have described the new farm bill as the best package possible in a time of budgetary constraints.

However, Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., has called it ''a slow economic death sentence for the nation's small family farmers'' and Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., argued lower government spending will translate directly into lower farm income.

Some analysts say triple base is a bold step toward greater reliance on the free market, but may have little value to farmers in regions, such as the Great Plains, where the climate provides few crop choices.

The farm bill is projected to lead to a slight decline in corn acreage, modest increases in soybean and cotton acreage and little change in wheat acreage. Soybean acreage is most likely to rise in the Midwest and drop in the South, where yields are lower.

There are about 2.14 million farms in the United States. Farm numbers fell 11 percent during the 1980s.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) UPI - Telephone ''party line'' operators hired employees to pose as callers who tried to prolong conversations, increasing the cost to consumers, state officials said Wednesday.

Employees were instructed to engage in ''elaborate charades, including assuming different personalities and disguising their voices, all in an attempt to keep callers on the line and increase company revenues,'' said state Attorney General Robert Abrams.

Several former employees went to the attorney general's office in early 1988 to report the scam.

Abrams said two operators and their five companies were fined $25,000 and agreed to provide full refunds or billing credits for consumers who called the ''party lines'' between September 1987 and August 1989.

The settlement was reached in lieu of filing criminal charges against the operators, identified as A. Joel Eisenberg and Betsy Superfon, both now of Seattle, Wash.

One young woman, who asked not to be identified, said Wednesday that in the three months she worked as a ''monitor'' for a party line operating out of Patchogue, Long Island, she was told to listen in on conversations and do whatever she could ''to keep people on the phone as long as we could.''

Monitors had a red light on their phones that told them how many minutes callers had been on the line, and pay raises were based on how long the monitors could prolong conversations, said the former employee.

''We could be pretty creative,'' she said. ''We would sometimes blurt something outrageous out just to keep them talking and listening.''

She added, ''I'm glad people are getting their money back. It's pretty pathetic to do that to people.''

The company opened the ''party lines,'' in which up to eight people pay as little as 10 cents a minute to engage in joint conversations, on the 212, 718, and 516 area codes in 1987, and expanded to the southern 914 area code the following year, the attorney general said.

The operators agreed to make full refunds for consumers who were billed by New York Telephone for calls made to any of the party lines from September 1987 until August 1989, when the practice ended, Abrams said.

ROCKFORD, IL (NOV. 28) UPI - Motorists who had to navigate a minefield of scrap metal that fell from a truck flooded police switchboards Wednesday to complain about flat tires.

Rockford police said more than 80 calls about ruined tires were logged by midmorning and motorists also were complaining to state officials and the Loves Park Police Department.

Loves Park Police Chief Darryl Lindberg said a tractor-trailer truck apparently left S&S Cartage Co. in Loves Park shortly after 4:30 a.m. without a completely secured tailgate.

''Every time he hit a bump, pieces of scrap metal spilled out,'' Lindberg said. ''We're not talking about giant bars - those people could have swerved around - we're talking about little jagged metal casting and stamping scraps.''

Lindberg said the truck driver will be cited for failing to secure his load.

The driver was en route to a scrap company in Havana and Lindberg said he expects angry complaints to be filed by motorists all along the route.

''We put an attempt to locate out right away but so far, no one's spotted the truck yet,'' he said.

S&S has also notified its insurance company to expect a barrage of claims.

The small metal scraps virtually shut down Alpine Road, one of Rockford's main thoroughfares, while street crews cleaned up the mess, said Lt. Rich Gambini of the Rockford Police Department Traffic Division.

''We're advising motorists to come down to the department and pick up a mail-in traffic accident form,'' Gambini said.

Authorities reported business was brisk at service stations along the trucks' route.

(NOV. 28) UPI - In Washington, Senate hearings continue on the Bush administration's policy in the Persian Gulf. Senate Democrats yesterday urged a cautious approach to the crisis. And today they heard testimony from Retired Navy Admiral William Crowe and Retired Air Force General David Jones, former chairmen, of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Jones told lawmakers, that from a purely military standpoint, ''the more power we have over there, the better off we are.''

The Iraqi government continues to manipulate the number of foreign hostages it says it holds. Baghdad says it has authorized release of 70 Italians, leaving another 200 Italians still in custody. And Saddam Hussein has ordered release of an UNspecified number of U-S hostages following an appeal by former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali.

The farm bill that President Bush signs into law today is designed to help farmers earn more money on their own. The measure runs for the next five years and is expected to freeze subsidy rates while reducing the number of acres eligible for subsidies. At the same time, it will expand environmental protections and keep public food programs going. There are two-point-one-Million farms in the United States, a number that was cut 11 percent during the 1980's.

A federal judge in Miami today lifted a restraining that barred Cable News Network from playing jailhouse recordings of Manuel Noriega's telephone conversations. Attorneys for the deposed Panamanian leader, who is awaiting trial in Miami on drug charges, say they heard the tapes yesterday and only one section contains conversations between Noriega and his defense team. Chief Noriega lawyer Frank Rubino says that since C-N-N already broadcast that tape, the restraining order was useless.

Denver officials are counting up the damages following a spectacular fire at Denver International Airport that consumed an estimated two- Million gallons of jet aviation fuel. The airport is the nation's seventh busiest and the tank farm helps fuel many of its 12-hundred daily flights. It took firefighters some 53 hours to bring the blaze under control using a combination of water, fire-retardant form and dry powder.

The nation's oldest chartered press club is closing. A bankruptcy trustee overseeing the Pittsburgh Press Club says he'll close it for good this Friday because it canNOT make payroll or retain its workmen's compensation insurance. The club still has 850 members. A farewell bash is set for Friday night.

SPRINGFIELD, IL (NOV. 28) UPI - Gov. James R. Thompson has added another plaque to his trophy room in the State Capitol but the newest one - from a historical group - has a minor flaw.

The National Park Service and the Abraham Lincoln Home National Historic Site honored the outgoing governor on Tuesday for his work in support of historic projects in Illinois during his 14 years in office.

The bronze and wood plaque thanks Thompson for the rededication of the home but the date of that ceremony is incorrect. The plaque said the rededication was June 16, 1989, even though it actually happened one year earlier.

Both the National Park Service staff and aides to Thompson had approved the plaque and the error was not noticed until it was too late to reschedule the presentation.

Larry Blake, head of interpretive services at the home, said the mistake will be corrected before the plaque is placed on permanent display at the home's visitor's center.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) UPI - Retailer R.H. Macy & Co., suffering the effects of a weakening economy and a heavy debt load, had its first-quarter net loss double to $66 million, the Wall Street Journal said Wednesday.

The loss for the quarter ended Oct. 31 accompanied a 9.5 percent decline in sales to $1.55 billion from $1.71 billion a year earlier, said a report in the Journal, which cited a confidential memo to potential equity investors.

Macy's representatives were not immediately available to comment.

The department store chain did not disclose its operating profit on earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization for the quarter, but analysts have been expecting Macy's to report a drop in operating profit to about $165 million, compared with $207 million in the year-earlier quarter.

Macy's, which underwent a leveraged buyout in 1986 and carries about $5 billion of debt on its books, operates some 150 stores. The comapny paid $1.1 billion in 1988 to acquire the Bullock's and I. Magnin chains.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - The chairman of Berkshire Hathaway announced Wednesday the Omaha, Neb., company, through its World Book Inc. subsidiary, was making an unprecedented $25 million investment for the production of low-income housing.

Berkshire Hathaway Chairman Warren Buffett, shunning the term philanthropy, told reporters the $25 million - which will pay for about 750 housing units nationwide - should be considered ''an investment with a pro-social outcome.''

The incentive for the investment is the Low Income Housing Tax Credit law, approved by Congress as part of the 1986 Tax Reform Act and just extended in the new budget bill. Buffett said his company will realize tax credits incrementally over the next 10 years that could net his company $8 million after taxes. Housing developed as a result of the investment must remain for low-income people for 15 years.

The announcement was made just hours before President Bush signed into law the Affordable Housing Act, intended to encourage the private sector to join the government in developing housing for low-income people.

Berkshire Hathaway will invest the $25 million in the National Equity Fund, which was founded in 1987 by the Local Initiatives Support Corp. to provide an investment vehicle to channel corporate dollars into community revitalization. Corporations invest in the fund as limited partners in return for tax credits and standard real estate deductions.

Buffett said he considered it ''illogical'' that other corporations don't take more advantage of the tax credit law.

''I don't understand exactly why companies make investments of just $1 million '' he said. ''I hope we'll encourage other corporatons to look hard at this and (realize) it's a perfectly sensible investment.''

He did note, however, the risks involved in depending on the tax credit law.

''The risks would be if the rules of the game were changed by Congress or if the local community development groups stray,'' he said, adding he did not think either scenario was likely.

The investment was termed unprecedented because of the amount of the contribution by a single corporation for the intended purpose of building new - and rehabilitating older - housing for low-income persons.

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY (NOV. 28) UPI - Hungary's Finance Minister Ferenc Rabar plans to resign because of disagreements over finance policy with the leader of the cabinet economic secretariat, it was reported Wednesday.

A report in the Vilaggazdasag daily newspaper quoted Rabar as saying he will quit regardless of whether Gyorgy Matolcsy, the head of the cabinet economic secretariat, remained in government.

Rabar's intentions came as the 1991 budget bill was to be presented to the legislature and appeared based on factional friction within the government over how the ailing economy should be cured and who should manage it.

Rabar has called for widespread liberalization to stimulate investment and enterprise among the business community. The finance minister gave no date for his resignation but Prime Minister Jozsef Antall told the legislature Tuesday he would announce changes in his government within a month.

That announcement seemed to respond to public demand. Since gasoline price hikes led to nationwide protests a month ago, opposition parties have urged Antall to change his economic policies and bring new blood into the government.

The antagonism between Rabar and Matolcsy came to a head Wednesday when the prime minister's closest economic advisor said the 1991 budget prepared by the Finance Ministry ''will carry on with the same old policy of restricting demand and maintain the unfair tax system''.

Matolcsy said he wanted to see incentives to increase supplies as well as new ways to ease tax burdens and to finance housing.

''We are confident that the policy we have offered is better and would steer the economy to an upswing and to a more open market economy, '' Matolcsy said.

The 1991 budget forecasts a 36 percent to 39 per cent inflation rate and higher prices. The budget proposal is unlikely to pass the legislature before next year, delaying talks between Hungary and international banks on credit lines and stand-by credits.

ATLANTA (NOV. 28) UPI - To the victors go the spoils.

The 1990 All-Southeastern Conference football team announced Wednesday by United Press International was virtually a three-school affair as Florida, Alabama, and Tennessee combined for 17 positions on the 24-player squad.

Florida, the SEC's top offensive team, had six all-stars - sophomore quarterback Shane Matthews, senior wide receiver Ernie Mills, junior offensive lineman Cal Dixon, linebackers Tim Paulk and Huey Richardson, and sophomore defensive back Will White.

The Gators, 9-1 going into Saturday's game at No. 8 Florida State, are banned from the SEC championship, a bowl berth and the UPI Coaches' rankings because of NCAA probation.

Alabama, unranked because of an 0-3 start but winner of six of its last seven games and the top defensive team in the SEC, also had six representatives on the all-star team - senior offensive linemen Terrill Chatman and Roger Shultz, senior placekicker Philip Doyle, senior defensive lineman George Thornton, junior linebacker John Sullins, and senior defensive back Efrum Thomas.

Tennessee, ranked No. 10 nationally and expected to win at least a share of the SEC championship and a berth in the Sugar Bowl, was represented by five players - running back Tony Thompson, sophomore wide receiver Carl Pickens, 310-pound offensive lineman Antone Davis, former junior college defensive back

Dale Carter, and freshman punter Joey Chapman.

Auburn, which would also have at least a share of the SEC crown and a probable Fiesta Bowl berth if the 20th-ranked Tigers beat Alabama Saturday, had three All-SEC performers - junior offensive lineman Ed King, senior defensive lineman David Rocker, and senior defensive back John Wiley.

Others named to this year's team were running backs Randy Baldwin of Mississippi and Harvey Williams of Louisiana State; and defensive lineman Marc Boutte of LSU and Kelvin Pritchett of Mississippi.

All three of Auburn's all-stars - King, Rocker and Wiley - as well as Chatman, Schultz, and Richardson were all repeaters from the 1989 UPI All-SEC team.

Matthews, a slender, 6-2 sophomore from Pascagoula, Miss., was the dominant passer in the SEC this season. With a game to go, he had thrown for 2,601 yards and 21 touchdowns. Matthews threw for 351 yards and three TDs against Mississippi State, 344 yards and three TDs against Georgia, 332 yards against Oklahoma State, and 303 yards and four TDs against Kentucky.

The three All-SEC running backs went into the final week as the league's top three rushers. Thompson, a stumpy senior who got his chance when Chuck Webb was injured, has rushed for 1,025 yards and 12 TDs; Williams, returning to action this season after a long layout, had 973 yards and seven TDs; and Baldwin, a junior and the only one of the three expected back next year, had 970 yards and 11 TDs.

Pickens, a 200-pound sophomore, goes into Saturday's game at Vanderbilt with 50 receptions for 861 yards to his credit. Mills, a senior lettering for the fourth straight year, had only 34 catches for 644 yards, but leads in TD receptions with nine.

Doyle, a senior from Birmingham, was edged out last year for the honor of being All-SEC placekicker by David Browndyke of LSU. Without Browndyke to compete against this time, Doyle was the odds-on favorite as he kicked 21 of 26 field goals in the Tide's first 10 games - three of those in Alabama's biggest victory of 1990, a 9-6 decision at Tennessee.

Tennessee grabbed the punting slot for the second year in a row. Last year's All-SEC punter was Kent Elmore, who averaged 40.2 as a senior after leading the league in 1988 but failing to make the all-star squad. Chapman, with a game to go, was averaging 41.6 yards per punt in his inagural season.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - Two retired chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Wednesday urged the administration to give economic sanctions a chance to work on Iraq before deciding to commit U.S. forces to combat.

And that position, which is becoming a consensus position at least among congressional Democrats, picked up a powerful backer - Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., of the Senate Appropriations Committee, who can significantly influence defense spending and thus foreign policy. Byrd sided with the military men testifying before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The committee is holding hearings on the administration's response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and President Bush's vow that if U.N.- sponsored military sanctions do not cause Iraq leader Saddam Hussein to withdraw his occupying forces, they will be forced out by military action.

Later in the day the panel arranged to hear from former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

''We should give sanctions a fair chance before we discard them,'' said retired Adm. William Crowe, who stepped down as chairman of the Joint Chiefs in September 1989. ''I personally believe they will bring (Saddam Hussein) to his knees ultimately, but I would be the first to admit that is a speculative judgment.''

''If in fact the sanctions will work in 12 to 18 months instead of six months, the trade-off of avoiding war with its attendant sacrifices and uncertainties would, in my estimation, be more than worth it,'' he said.

Retired Air Force Gen. David Jones, who held the job from 1978 to 1982, told the committee that President Bush should ask Congress for authorization to use military force, a move he said would prove to be a unifying factor in national opinion about the crisis.

And Jones also urged caution, saying that throwing 400,000 soldiers into the region was a high-risk tactic that might solve the crisis politically but could unnecessarily cause fighting. He suggested a smaller supplement to the 230,000 forces now in place, with the ability to reinforce those forces later if war were necessary.

Byrd, whose political clout far outweighs his single vote in the Senate, rarely attends Armed Services Committee meetings, and his presence Wednesday was a sign of his desire to be a major player in the debate. He has always insisted that Congress have a hand in the major decisions of a military or foreign policy nature.

He told Crowe he agreed with calls for letting the sanctions run longer and said his agreement ''does not come from being an expert in modern warfare or ancient for that matter, but from the wisdom sometimes espoused assembled around a pot-bellied stove at a country store on a cold day in December. You're voicing what my people are saying. You're urging patience, the virtue of patience.''

''I share your view that time is on our side, not his. ... We have to be very careful about urging military action at this point. It may come to that and if it comes in due time I think the American people will support it. ...

''It would seem to me that we would be very well advised to wait a year if it takes a year or a year and a half. The American people have shown their ability to withstand sacrifice over a long period of time,'' Byrd added.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., also voiced concern about any rush to military action.

''I hope the administration will listen to the voice of wisdom, the voice of caution that we hear here. It is a voice of strength,'' he said after listening to Crowe and Jones.

LONDON (NOV. 28) UPI - As John Major moved into 10 Downing Street Wednesday he knew he'd also acquired the two problems that forced Britain's longest serving prime minister this century into involuntary retirement.

Labeled ''son of Thatcher'' during his brief leadership campaign, Major will need better luck or political skill than the ''Iron Lady'' to heal the Conservative Party's divisions over European integration and to soothe the public's hostility to the poll tax.

Major bristled at the charge that he was Margaret Thatcher's clone, but enjoyed her semi-public endorsement in the leadership contest, defeating two rivals.

His victory closed two weeks of very un-British and certainly un- Conservative public squabbling. Conservatives now hope to unite behind him for the next general election, which must be held by July 1992.

''At the end of this week I believe that there is a smile on the face of the party that will mean we are fully united for the future,'' Major said in his first public statement as prime minister.

After naming a Cabinet, one of Major's first challenges will be finding a position on European economic and political union that will satisfy the spectrum of Tories in time for next month's European Community conference in Rome.

The party includes Nicholas Ridley, who left the Thatcher Cabinet in July when he called the European Community a ''German racket,'' and likened it to domination by Hitler, and those who have embraced the EC Executive Commission President Jacques Delors' three-stage plan for a single European currency and central bank.

It was Thatcher's defiant resistance to greater European integration that prompted the resignation of her deputy prime minister, Geoffrey Howe, who said Thatcher's approach risked isolating Britain for years to come.

Howe's resignation set off the most serious and ultimately fatal challenge to Thatcher's 15-year leadership of the party.

Over Thatcher's reluctance, Major, as chancellor of the exchequer, Britain's treasury, succeeded last month in taking Britain into an EC exchange rate mechanism, which limits a country's ability to set its own interest rates by tying its value to that of others members'.

He sought to put the division over Europe behind him in his first public comment after getting the queen's request to form a government. ''We have in front of us the budding and development of an entirely new Europe, a budding and development in which this country will play a full and leading role.''

But in a recent interview, Major said he could not foresee Britain yielding additional sovereignty to the EC in the next decade, leading some to believe the change from Thatcher will be only in tone, not in substance.

The poll tax, a flat head tax that requires a dustman to pay the same as a duke, presents another thorny problem. Implementation of the tax in England earlier this year led to massive demonstrations and a riot in London, and more than a million Scots have refused to pay the tax that was imposed in the north in 1989.

The levy helped make Thatcher the most unpopular prime minister since public opinion polling began here in 1937, and gave the opposition Labor Party a wide margin in approval ratings from spring until she agreed last Thursday to resign.

Major and the other two men who sought to be prime minister - Michael Heseltine and Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd - all said they would take a fresh look at the tax. Major, however, was the least optimistic about finding an alternative, reminding colleagues that reducing the poll tax would likely mean higher income taxes.

One immediate change will be in the leadership style. What has been described as Thatcher's haughtiness elicited both respect and bitterness. Major, at least until he wins a general election on his own, is expected to revert to the more traditional ''first-among-equals'' style of Cabinet government.

Where Thatcher asked about potential appointees, ''Is he one of us'' - that is did he share her views - Major after his election emphasized that he wanted a ''Cabinet of all talents.''

During his campaign, Major said he wanted to create a ''classless society'' and emphasized his own humble origins, the son of a circus trapeze artist who became succesful in banking before turning to politics.

He was expected to be more sympathetic to education and training than Thatcher was, attempting to lure Labor's working-class supporters.

In his first comment to the press, he spoke of building a ''society of opportunity.''

An opponent of capital punishment, Major is considered more liberal on social issues than Thatcher.

TOKYO (NOV. 28) UPI - Mitsubishi Motors Corp., said Wednesday it has donated its 2-liter DOHC car engine to the California Energy Committee for use in the CEC-sponsored Flexible Fuel Vehicle Fleet Test Program.

The Tokyo-based company said the program is intended to study the possibility of replacing gasoline with methanol as fuel for vehicles to reduce air pollution. Methanol releases less hydrocarbon emissions than petroleum fuel.

Mitsubishi said Flexible Fuel Vehicles run on a compound of 85 percent methanol and 15 percent petroleum. Such vehicles are being tested because the use of petroleum to a certain degree as an additive to methanol will be needed while an efficient all-methanol distribution system is being refined, it said.

Similar tests have been under way on public streets in major U.S. cities such as New York and Chicago.

The test program in California is scheduled to run through December 1992, the company said.

Mitsubishi said the company has replaced the materials used for engine parts and fuel tanks to prevent corrosion, rubber expansion and friction caused by methanol fuel.

The company said it has also developed a new counter system that eliminates imperfectly-burned methanol and formaldehyde fumes from methanol engine exhaust emissions.

Mitsubishi, part of Japan's giant Mitsubishi Group industrial concern, is 12 percent owned by Chrysler Corp., and is involved in a car-building joint venture with Chrysler, Diamond Star Motor, in Normal, Ill.

LONDON (NOV. 28) UPI - With the political excitement over Britain's new leadership finished, investors sent stock prices lower Wednesday on the London International Stock Exchange, as recession and worries of a war in the Gulf again were the focus of traders.

Share prices closed mixed after a nervous, roller-coaster session driven by rumors and news from the oil rich Persian Gulf on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange. Volume was moderate.

In London, the blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which added 7.6 points Tuesday, fell 15.2 points to 2,144.3. The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 13.5 points to 1,686.2.

Volume amounted to around 381 million shares compared with 378 million shares changing hands Tuesday.

Analysts said although Britain's new Prime Minister, John Major, was the financial district's choice, it had been expecting his victory for the last three days.

''Anyone who has been hoping for a cut and run tactic has been disappointed. Major has been at pains to make it clear he won't be cutting interest rates quickly to go for an early election,'' said George Hodgson, an equity market economist at brokers SG Warburg Securities.

Meanwhile, profit taking crept into the market and some disappointing corporate news helped to send stocks lower.

Britain's industry bellwhether, Imperial Chemical Industries, dropped 25 cents to $16.35 after its chairman warned the recessionary effects would last longer than expected.

Guinness slipped 22 cents to $13.96 on worries that its recently announced acquisitions could be too ambitious.

Guinness is expected to complete the purchase of Spanish brewer La Cruz del Campo for some $254 million, and buy nearly 70 percent of German brandy maker Asbach for an estimated $50 million.

Barclays Bank PLC eased 26 cents to $5.09 amid Japanese property worries and downgradings, while the Royal Bank of Scotland lost 10 cents to $2.70 ahead of its earnings report on Thursday.

Maxwell Communications gained 9 cents to $2.92 after reporting its latest earnings jumped 6 percent.

Hambros, a merchant bank, eased 2 cents to $4.46 after reporting its latest earnings rose 19 percent. Analysts said the stocks slipped after the bank issued a cautious statement regarding the next quarter.

In Germany, stock prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange closed mixed in moderate trading. The closely watched German Stock Index, which had plummeted 68.26 points in the previous two sessions, added 5.36 points to 1,420.62.

Banking, chemical and retailing stocks generally ended higher, boosting the overall market higher, analysts said.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - After an absence of more than one year, a U.S. ambassador returned to Lebanon Wednesday to take up residence there.

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher confirmed that Ryan Crocker, newly confirmed envoy to Lebanon, flew to Beirut from Cyprus by helicopter Wednesday and moved into the embassy in east Beirut.

The move came after a U.S. security team had spent three days in the city and reported that it would be safe for Crocker to come.

The former U.S. ambassador, John McCarthy, left Beirut in September 1989 with the remaining U.S. staff of diplomats amid a raging civil war between government forces and and some military personnel loyal to dissident Gen. Michel Aoun.

McCArthy returned once briefly to Lebanon to present his credentials to President Elias Hrawari, but that was in a remote site in northern Lebanon and not in strife-torn Beirut.

Officially, the Beirut embassy was never closed and a Lebanese caretaker staff kept the U.S. flag flying, but no U.S. diplomats were permitted to go to Lebanon because of the danger involved.

Boucher said it has not yet been decided when to send in further diplomats to join Crocker in Beirut.

Aoun's forces, attacked by Syrian troops, gave up last month and Aoun took refuge in the French Embassy in Beirut, where he remains.

Under Syrian pressure, the remaining militia groups have begun pulling out of Beirut, bringing a measure of calm to a country that has been devastated by intermittent civil war since 1975.

Crocker, 51, is a career diplomat, had been confirmed by the Senate and was sworn in last month. He joined the Foreign Service in 1971 and has served in Iran, Qatar, Iraq and Lebanon. He speaks Arabic.

The previous U.S. Embassy in west Beirut was destroyed by a terrorist car bomb in 1983, with the loss of 17 Americans, including the Central Intelligence Agency's Middle East staff, which was meeting in the building.

U.S. officials suspected that the attack had been planned and directed by Syrian intelligence officers, but no direct chain of evidence was ever produced.

(NOV. 28) UPI - Federal Reserve chief Alan Greenspan is blaming higher oil prices and the threat of a Persian Gulf war for much of the nation's current economic troubles. The nation's top banker made the assessment today in testimony before the House Banking Committee. He declined to use the word recession in describing the situation, but he told committee members there is- in his words- a ''meaningful downturn'' in economic output.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater also talked of the economy this morning reacting to Greenspan's testimony and to revised third- quarter G-N-P figures. Fitzwater says the administration's position is the same, that the nation is in a ''slowdown,'' to use his word. The revised Commerce Department figures show the output of goods and services increased one-point-seven percent in the third quarter. But that is slightly below the one-point-eight percent increase tracked in the second quarter.

Most of the key elements appear to be in place as the Bush administration works to use the military option to get Iraq out of Kuwait. The U-N Security Council is to debate the issue tomorrow and it appears the five permanent members will approve the use of force. China is one of those key members and Foreign Minister Qian Qichen talked with reporters in Beijing today, strongly hinting that China will abstain, rather than veto, when the vote is taken.

Iraq is trying to de-fuse the issue before it comes to a vote by again calling for dialogue to settle the Persian Gulf crisis. That's a position the United States has rejected in the past, calling instead on an UNconditional withdrawal from Kuwait. But Iraq's calls for talks comes as top government leaders in Baghdad keep saying they will ''never succumb'' to demands that Iraq give up its claim to Kuwait.

A Swedish volunteer nurse was stabbed in the back at a hospital in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip today. One report said her assailant left a note claiming he carried out the attack in retaliation of foreign intervention in the Persian Gulf. Another report said the note warned of what it called ''other attacks against Jews.'' The nurse was listed in moderate to serious condition in the hospital's intensive care unit.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency has given final approval to New Hampshire emergency plans in the event of an accident at the Seabrook nuclear power plant. The plan essentially calls for using buses and cars to evacuate each of the 17 New Hampshire towns within Seabrook's emergency planning zone. Six other towns within the zone are covered by a separate state emergency plan because those towns agreed with Seabrook opponents who claim the area is too densely populated to be adequately protected by any emergency plan.

Hawthorn is a firm that trains and breeds animals for circuses and safari parks and takes in elderly animals ready for retirement. The pachyderm fell down and suffered a few cuts and bruises during the trip, but a Hawthorn official says she is fine now that she is at her new home. VATICAN CITY (NOV. 28) UPI - Polish Cardinal Wladyslaw Rubin, a personal friend and compatriot of Pope John Paul II who served most of his career in the Vatican, died Wednesday in Rome, Vatican sources said. He was 73.

''He was a true, good and faithful servant of God and the church, carrying out tasks of particular delicacy and responsibility,'' the sources quoted the pope as saying when he heard of Rubin's death.

The cause of death was not immediately known, but Rubin had been ill for a long time and John Paul paid one of his periodic visits to the cardinal at his bedside on Sunday.

Among his various appointments in the Vatican Curia, or government, during the postwar years, Rubin formerly served as Prefect of the Congregation for the Eastern Rite churches and was in charge of the pastoral care of Poles living abroad.

Rubin was born in Toki, near Lvov, on Sept. 20, 1917, when the region was part of the Austro-Hungarian empire. It is now in the Soviet Ukraine.

During World War II, Rubin served as a volunteer with Polish troops in Italy and remained in Italy after being ordained in 1946. He became a bishop in 1964 and in 1979 Pope John Paul II, also a Pole, made him a cardinal.

Rubin's death reduced the Sacred College of Cardinals to 143 members. Only 102 are under the age of 80 and therefore eligible to vote in an eventual election to choose a new pope.

BAMAKO, MALI (NOV. 28) UPI - Liberian rebel leader Charles Taylor signed a cease-fire with other warring factions Wednesday but observers at peace talks in Mali said groundwork had not been laid for a political solution to the civil war in Liberia.

Some sources at the Bamako extraordinary summit of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) said Taylor was forced to sign the cease-fire because of pressure from his main military backers, Libya and Burkina Faso.

But Taylor denied that he had received backing from either country and said he had not been forced to sign the cease-fire agreement. ''I have been the most generous in this, with 90 per cent of the country and people under my control, giving up everything to bring peace to my people,'' he said.

While Taylor agreed to stop fighting the rebel forces of Prince Johnson and the remnants of government troops, the Bamako agreement fails to push current political initiatves any further forward.

And Taylor implied Wednesday that he did not recognize the interim government of Amos Sawyer, which is now in the Liberian capital, Monrovia.

The cease-fire comes after both Libya and Burkina Faso agreed to stop providing weapons to his National Patriotic Front of Liberia after a visit by West African foreign ministers to Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi on Nov. 19.

Libya's foreign minister flew to the Nigerian capital Lagos Tuesday to assure the Nigerian president, Gen. Ibrahim Babangida, that Libya would ''make sure'' that Taylor signed the cease-fire agreement, Babangida told the 13 ECOWAS heads of state meeting to discuss the 11- month-old Liberian civil war.

President Blaise Compaore of Burkina Faso, who has provided arms, ammunition and military advisers as well as troops to the NPFL, agreed to end his military support for Taylor without conditions, West African sources said.

President Felix Houphouet-Boigny of the Ivory Coast also has supported Taylor by allowing him easy access across the border between the two countries, facilitating the arms supply from Burkina Faso.

Houphouet-Boigny is believed by sources within ECOWAS to have wanted a cease-fire above all else, whatever the political outcome. The long- term potential for a political solution within Liberia is becoming increasingly unimportant to the countries that have until now allowed the war to continue through their support, a source said.

Herman Cohen, the U.S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs, called on Burkina Faso Tuesday to end support for Taylor. Cohen, quoted by the British Broadcasting Corp., said U.S. financial assistance to Burkina Faso would be reduced if this backing continued.

Taylor's growing image as a leader hungry for power rather than the idealistic rebel who overthrew the brutal regime of the late President Samuel Doe has undermined him in the eyes of most West African leaders and has severely embarrassed his backers, the source said.

The cease-fire between the warring factions does not include any implicit recognition of the Sawyer government, elected by a conference of Liberians in August. It represents a broad sweep of Liberian political opinion forced into exile under the Doe regime.

While Taylor said he has ''agreed to receive Sawyer,'' the cease-fire agreement to which the NPFL had agreed ''states very clearly that no group in Liberia is recognized as an interim government,'' he said. This view contradicts the view of ECOWAS, whose 6,000-strong peace-keeping force in Liberia is protecting the Sawyer government.

The cease-fire agreement also includes provision for more countries to send troops to join the force. Taylor said this would ''give more countries a fairer opportunity to participate.''

The indication is that the five countries already there - Nigeria, Ghana, Sierra Leone, Guinea and Gambia - have become identified as anti- Taylor forces, and that troops perhaps from Ivory Coast and Burkina Faso will balance the military presence between what are effectively seen as pro and anti-Taylor countries by the arrival of troops whose governments have given Taylor backing in the past.

JERUSALEM (NOV. 28) UPI - About 1,500 immigrants are arriving in Israel each day, bringing their number to the highest level since the latest wave of immigration began last year, officials for the semi-governmental Jewish Agency said Wednesday.

The total number of immigrants between January 1990 and April 1991 is expected to be more than 300,000, among them 250,000 from the Soviet Union and 10,000 from Ethiopia, Jewish Agency Treasurer Meir Shitrit said.

Between January and mid-November, Israel received more than 145,000 immigrants immigration officials said.

Shitrit said Israel would have to raise $30 billion to absorb an expected 1 million immigrants in the next three years but added that these newcomers would cause a 50 percent increase in the gross national product.

Meanwhile, Absorption Minister Yizthak Peretz was attacked in the Knesset, Israel's parliament, for saying recently that one-third of the immigrants arriving from the Soviet Union in Israel were not Jewish according to Jewish law. Peretz, an ultra-Orthodox rabbi, said those Soviet immigrants were ''a danger to the future and security of the country.''

''You are the minister of libel, the minister of anti-immigration, an anti-Jew '' former Absorption Minister Ya'acov Tzur said Wednesday during his attack on Peretz. Tzur is a member of the opposition center- left Labor Party.

According to Israel's 1952 Law of Return, only Jews are entitled to automatic citizenship and immigrant benefits. But Orthodox Jews believe the guidelines should be stricter, such as in the case of converts and children of intermarriages.

FORT MYERS, FL (NOV. 28) UPI - A police dog apparently lifted the 2-week- old daughter of a Lee County sheriff's deputy from her crib and dropped her on a bedroom floor, where the infant was found dead, investigators said Wednesday.

Kayla V. Reeves was pronounced dead on arrival late Tuesday at Lee County Memorial Hospital, sheriff's spokesman Robert Graziano said.

''It appears the dog had taken her from the bassinet,'' Graziano said.

The infant's father, Deputy Scott Reeves, is a sheriff's specialist and the handler for the German shepherd police dog named Tasso. The dog lived with the family at their Fort Myers home.

Graziano said Suzanne Reeves put her daughter to bed in the bassinet about 9 p.m..

''At approximately 11:30 p.m., the infant was found on the floor,'' he said.

The parents called paramedics, who took the baby to the hospital.

An autopsy was pending. Graziano said the infant did not appear to have been mauled, and there was no indication the bassinet had been tipped over.

''There was nothing that was very obvious,'' Graziano said. ''When you have a child that little, literally a fall to the floor could have been the cause of death.''

The dog was impounded at a veterinary clinic pending results of the investigation.

Because the death occurred in the city limits, the Fort Myers Police Department is in charge of the investigation.

TRIPOLI, Libya (UPI) Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi said Wednesday he failed in an attempt to arrange a meeting between Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia and therefore is ''no longer interested in the gulf crisis.''

The mercurial Libyan chief said he asked the two Arab leaders to meet for a last-ditch chance at peaceful negotiations before the 15 foreign ministers of the U.N. Security Council decide in New York whether to adopt a U.N. resolution authorizing force to dislodge Iraq from Kuwait.

Saddam, facing international pressure to withdraw from Kuwait, was interested in the proposed meeting but Fahd backd out, Gadhafi said in a statement read by Information Minister Ali Abu Gazia.

The Libyan leader flew more than 150 foreign journalists to Tripoli from Cairo Athens, Rome and Belgrade for a news conference he said was to have been an announcement of the Saddam-Fahd summit.

But negotiations for the meeting, at which he was to have played mediator, fell through.

''Libya is no longer interested in the (Persian) Gulf crisis,'' Gazia said, reading from the statement. ''We have no relation with the problem.

''We leave such adamant parties to pay the price be they Saudis, Kuwaitis or Iraqis,'' he said.

Libya backed an Arab League call for the immediate and complete withdrawal of Iraqi troops from occupied Kuwait during a summit in Cairo shortly after the Aug. 2 invasion.

Since then it has become a strong critic of the U.S.-led multinational force deployed to the region and has taken a softer stand against Saddam than many Arab leaders.

Gadhafi did not respond to a call by King Hassan of Morocco earlier this month for an Arab summit to settle the crisis.

NEW DELHI (NOV. 28) UPI - Prime Minister Chandra Shekhar dismissed the government of northeastern Assam state for its failure to maintain law and order, assuming direct control of the state through a measure called President's Rule, a government official said Wednesday.

He said the state government of regional Asom Gana Parishad party was dismissed Tuesday night for its alleged failure to combat militant activities of the United Liberation Front of Assam.

The government also banned ULFA, and declared Assam a disturbed area, empowering security forces with special powers to detain and raid hideouts of extremists.

Security forces have fanned out across the state in an attempt to nab militant activists, the official said, adding that several activists of ULFA have been taken into custody.

The state government was dismissed just a month before its five-year term was due to end and the state was to elect a new government.

Assam is the third state to be placed under presidential rule. The other two are the northern Jammu and Kashmir, as well as Punjab state, where separatists are waging a bloody campaign for secession from India.

P. Upendra, India's former information and broadcasting minister, was quoted by the news agency Press Trust of India as saying the dismissal of the state government was ''undemocratic, unconstitutional and unwarranted.''

''By its thoughtless action, the Chandra Shekhar government has risked throwing Assam into the same turmoil as Punjab and Kashmir, and the situation, instead of improving, is likely to deteriorate,'' the news agency quoted Upendra as saying.

The ousted chief minister, Prafulla Kumar Mahanta, described the dismissal of his government as a ''betrayal of democracy. The action portends very dark future for the people of Assam,'' the Press Trust quoted him as saying.

The ULFA has been campaigning for the past few years against non- Assamese, alleging economic domination of the state by people from oustide Assam.

Several businessmen and opposition Congress (I) Party leaders have accused the Asom Gana Parishad's government of failing to take stern measures against ULFA activisits. They say ULFA activists demand and get huge ransom money from companies.

The militants accuse businessmen of exploiting resources of the state without benefitting people of the state.

Violence in Assam peaked early this month when a major tea company in the state flew out its officials and stopped work at its tea estate rather than pay ransom allegedly demanded by the ULFA.

The President's Rule lasts for six months and can be renewed for another six months. The governor could end the direct rule by revoking assembly suspension or by holding fresh election to the state assembly.

OSLO, Norway (NOV. 28) UPI - Norway's Nobel Peace Prize committee said Wednesday it cannot postpone the Dec. 10 Nobel award ceremony despite Moscow's announcement that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev could not travel to Oslo to receive his prize before May 1991.

''The statutes of the Nobel Foundation and an unbroken tradition mean that the committee cannot put the presentation off until next May,'' Nobel Committee secretary Geir Lundestad told reporters Wednesday.

Gorbachev was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for reforms that allowed the end of the Cold War and the flourishing of democracy in Eastern Europe.

Lundestad said he hoped Gorbachev would be able to come to Norway in May to deliver the traditional Nobel Lecture, which all laureates give to Oslo university the day after the award.

Lundestad said Norway's Nobel committee informed the Soviet president he could send a representative on his behalf Dec. 10 to receive the prize - a medal, a certificate and $720,000.

Norwegian Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland said she understood Gorbachev's decision not to attend the December ceremony but hoped he would come in May.

''With the process that has now been set in motion for the future government of the Soviet Union, we must accept and respect the decision, '' she said.

The official Soviet news agency Tass quoted the Soviet president's press office as saying the delay was requested because of the ''crucial situation in the country and the president's preoccupation with affairs that occupy his constant attention.''

Gorbachev has been accused at home of devoting too much time to foreign affairs and overseas trips while the Soviet Union suffers serious economic and other domestic problems.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (NOV. 28) UPI - Engineers Wednesday readied the shuttle Columbia for the overnight start of its countdown to blastoff Sunday on a long-delayed astronomy flight, a record-tying 17 days after NASA's last launch.

Columbia's intricate countdown was scheduled to begin at 1 a.m. EST Thursday with the ship's seven-man crew - a post-Challenger record - planning to fly in from Houston late Thursday night to prepare for blastoff on the 38th shuttle mission.

Launch is scheduled for 1:28 a.m. Sunday - six months behind schedule because of crippling fuel leaks - to kick off a 10-day flight to study the most violent stars and galaxies in the universe with telescopes sensitive to high-energy forms of light that are blocked by Earth's atmosphere.

If all goes well Columbia will glide to a landing Dec. 11 at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., at 8:25 p.m. PST to close out the year's sixth shuttle flight, the 13th since the Challenger disaster.

''There are no problems out there at all,'' NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone said of work at Columbia's launch pad. ''We're not looking at any issues.''

Air Force meteorologists called for a 70 percent chance of acceptable weather at launch time Sunday, setting the stage for NASA's second sky- lighting nighttime shuttle liftoff in less than three weeks.

On board will be commander Vance Brand, 59, co-pilot Guy Gardner, 42, John ''Mike'' Lounge, 44, Robert Parker, 53, Jeffrey Hoffman, 46, and civilian astronomers Ronald Parise, 39, and Samuel Durrance, 46.

It is the largest shuttle crew since Challenger's launch in 1986 and the first since then to include non-professional astronauts.

Columbia's launch comes just 17 days after the shuttle Atlantis's Nov. 15 blastoff on a military flight, the fastest pace since two shuttles were launched 17 days apart in 1985, and 57 days after the shuttle Discovery ferried the Ulysses solar probe into space Oct. 6.

The rapid-fire launching of three shuttles in less than three months marks NASA's most impressive performance since 1985 when three flights were launched between Oct. 3 and Nov. 26, a period of just 54 days.

But the flight rate this time around is misleading in that Columbia and Atlantis originally were scheduled for takeoff in May and July respectively. Both ships were grounded by elusive hydrogen fuel leaks and after both orbiters finally were repaired, most of the routine pre- launch work had been completed.

In any case, few missions have had as much trouble getting off the ground as Columbia's.

Launch originally was scheduled for March 6, 1986, but the Challenger disaster the previous Jan. 28 grounded the shuttle program until late 1988 and Columbia's mission ultimately was delayed to May 30.

But the night before takeoff, explosive hydrogen gas was detected leaking into the shuttle's engine room, forcing NASA managers to delay the launch until a suspect fuel-line fitting could be replaced.

After a second delay because of trouble with one of Columbia's on- board telescopes, the shuttle was grounded twice in a row in September because of persistent hydrogen leaks in the ship's engine compartment.

After replacing two suspect seals and three fuel pumps, Columbia finally passed a critical fueling test last month without springing any more leaks, clearing the way for launch Sunday.

Mounted in Columbia's 60-foot cargo bay is a battery of telescopes built to study ultraviolet light and X-rays from stars and galaxies that cannot penetrate Earth's atmosphere.

Unlike the Hubble Space Telescope, launched from the shuttle Discovery April 25, Columbia's telescopes will remain in the spaceplane's cargo bay throughout the flight, operated by the ship's crew much like a ground-based observatory.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Republican Party leaders hope Gary Alvin Franks, the congressman-elect from Connecticut's 5th District, can attract other blacks into their overwhelmingly white ranks.

They cite the elevation in the Nov. 6 election of the Waterbury alderman to the nation's loftiest post held by any black Republican elected official as proof that theirs is ''the party of opportunity.''

Franks started orientation sessions Wednesday on Capitol Hill with other incoming House members.

Asked if he could work for the GOP strategists who made Willie Horton an issue in the 1988 presidential campaign, Franks grinned broadly and replied cautiously, ''I'm proud to be a Republican.''

He also managed to duck most other questions on his first full day in Washington after his election victory.

Franks will be the first black GOP member of the House since Oscar de Priest, who served three terms after winning a seat from Chicago in Herbert Hoover's presidential landslide of 1928.

The 37-year-old Yale graduate who operates his own real-estate business will become the only conservative in the Congressional Black Caucus, known for its bedrock liberalism.

Franks said he had met only several members of the caucus and had not discussed politics with them.

President Bush campaigned for Franks, who defeated former liberal Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., for a seat vacated by John Rowland, who ran unsuccessfully for governor.

In terms of his political philosophy, Franks appears closer to the president's critics on the right, such as GOP House Whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia.

''I do consider myself a fiscal conservative,'' Franks said, declining to elaborate. ''My priority now is to get myself organized so that I can hit the ground running,'' he said, when he takes his seat on Jan. 3.

''I'm looking at the Armed Services Committee,'' Franks said of the panel where he hopes to fill a seat vacated by Rowland. ''I'm also looking at other possible committee assignments.''

He is a staunch supporter of a cut in the capital-gains tax rate, which the president has abandoned for now. Franks also remains opposed to new taxes, which Bush has accepted.

The first black ever elected to Congress from Connecticut opposed the Civil Rights Act of 1990, which Bush vetoed, arguing that it would impose job quotas based on race.

Franks said Wednesday he hopes to support a 1991 non-quota version of the civil rights legislation, a bill the president can support.

''We're going over the rules and regulations of the House,'' Franks said of the orientation sessions he is attending with other incoming members. ''That's important because I don't intend to break any of them. ''

Franks advocates the death penalty for drug traffickers, reductions in welfare benefits and a constitutional amendment prohibiting burning the American flag.

He is a native of Waterbury whose father was a mill worker and whose mother worked as a dietary aide at a hospital. All six of their children graduated from college.

Franks was an honor student and senior class president at Waterbury's Sacred Heart High School before receiving a scholarship to Yale, where he was captain of the basketball team.

Franks said he will be hiring staff members and looking for housing in Washington, where he will work Tuesdays through Thursdays.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) UPI - With a bankruptcy court award of enough money to get through the winter, Eastern Airlines Wednesday said it is better able than other airlines to survive an industry shakeout.

Federal Bankruptcy Judge Burton Lifland late Tuesday granted Eastern's request for $120 million in cash to keep it flying through March plus an additional $15 million creditor contingency fund so the airline could avoid the periodic pleas that have eroded public confidence in its staying power.

The bad publicity and speculation surrounding each court appearance for more money had driven passengers away and spurred creditors to ask for early payments, the airline said in arguing for a long-term award.

The award "represents a very clear victory for Eastern," Martin Shugrue, the airline's court-appointed trustee, said in a Wednesday news conference.

Following the news conference, Shugrue told a few reporters: "A continued shakeout in the airline industry will occur ... I can't put a time on it. I'm not that good."

Shugrue added, "If all things remain the same, if government doesn't begin to pay more attention to what's going on, I think there will be more casualties." In recent months, the airline industry has been hurt by a slowdown in the nation's economy and rising fuel costs.

The trimming down that Eastern has done in its Chapter 11 bankruptcy "makes it more likely Eastern will be one of the survivors. We've got our costs down. We have an opportunity to reorganize ourselves. Eastern can come out of this with a clean balance sheet," Shugrue said.

The court award "is more than enough money to get Eastern cash positive. We have no intention of being back in court seeking further cash drawdowns. It is simply not going to be," the trustee said.

But even with the court award, Standard & Poor's Corp., the credit-rating service, said "long-term prospects for Eastern remain poor due to a weakening economy, high fuel prices, and industrywide fare promotions aimed at leisure travelers."

S&P also said the prospect of Eastern continuing for at least several more months is "bad news" for competitors such as Delta Air Lines Inc., USAir Group Inc., Midway Airlines Inc., and others.

Even if war breaks out in the Middle East, Shugrue said advisers have told him that oil would not stay for long at "skyrocketing levels." Shugrue said, "The government can act in meaningful ways to deal with that issue before it becomes a crisis." He said the White House should release oil from the nation's Strategic Petroleum Reserve to deal with any crisis. The reserve holds 590 million barrels of oil.

Consequently, Shugrue said: "We are planning for fuel in the $30 a barrel range in 1991 ... about 91 cents" a gallon for jet fuel. He added, "Yesterday we were paying 97-98 cents (a gallon), down from $1.24 where it spiked a couple of months ago. So, we think (the cost of fuel) is manageable."

The trustee said, "We're in a recession. The only people in the country that don't know we're in a recession live in Washington ... I can tell you the airline industry is in a recession and has been and we're dealing with that."

Unless the government changes policy, "the airline industry is moving towards the haves and the have-nots. And the haves are three (airlines) and the have-nots are everybody else," he said. "I think it's bad public policy to allow these airlines to shut down, to go out of business, or merge into mega-carriers," he said.

Eastern plans to sell its 13 aging Lockheed L-1011 airplanes, and has been negotiating with several investor groups over the sale of Eastern Express, a regional carrier serving Florida and the Bahamas. Shugrue said he was "confident something could be worked out" with the Soviet Union's Aeroflot airline for five of the L-1011s.

Asked about sales of Eastern assets to U.S. or foreign buyers, he replied: "We have a whole list of asset disposition opportunities available to us having to do with equipment and facilities that are surplus to Eastern's long-term needs that we will continue to evaluate." He, however, added: "We don't have at the moment a major asset transaction planned or contemplated."

(NOV. 28) UPI - President Bush has signed a new farm policy measure into law, one the administration estimates will cost 170-BILLION dollars during the next five years. Bush calls it the ''most environmentally progressive farm bill ever.'' Besides giving farmers more leeway in deciding what to plant, it creates a Wetlands Reserve of up to one-Million acres. It also helps protect water supplies from contamination by farm chemicals.

Britain's new prime minister, John Major, is moving rapidly to end any political division within the ruling Conservative Party. He has met with rival Michael Heseltine, who began the party leadership challenge that swept Margaret Thatcher from power. Neither would say later if Heseltine has been offered a post in the new government that Major is forming. Heseltine served as defense secretary under Thatcher until 1986 when he resigned in protest over her leadership style.

Argentina and Brazil say they'll take steps to join the Western Hemisphere nuclear NON-profileration treaty... an agreement both nations have boycotted up to now. But in a ceremony today at a hotel near the Brazilian-Argentine border, Presidents Carlos Menem of Argentina and Fernando Collor de Mello of Brazil signed documents that commit the two nations to enter negotiations with the International Atomic Energy Agency to guarantee bilateral nuclear safeguards.

Train stations are open and passenger trains are rolling again in Germany as union officials representing 260-thousand striking eastern German rail workers resumed talks with management. The strike paralyzed the eastern German rail system for two days, and still hampers freight train service. The union wants planned cuts in the workforce to be subject to negotiation and it wants pay raises similar to those of its western German counterparts.

The Peruvian-born wife of Polish presidential candidate Stanislaw Tyminski says her husband's political aspirations first surfaced four or five years ago when he wrote a book on his views. But it was NOT published until last July. In it, Tyminski writes of a plan to save Poland's economy by concentrating on gaps in world markets that Polish products can fill.

A U-S ambassador has taken up residence in Lebanon for the first time in more than one year. Newly confirmed Ambassador Ryan Crocker flew by helicopter from Cyprus to Beirut and has moved into the closely guarded U-S Embassy in east Beirut. His return follows a three-day sweep of the area by a U-S security team which decided it is safe for the ambassador to move into the embassy.

Bob Hope says he's having trouble tracking down President Bush to solve a dilemma with plans for Hope's Christmas show for American troops in Saudi Arabia. Hope told a Houston newspaper that he has been told by administration officials that he should just shake hands with the troops, and that the usual ''entertainment'' is out because of Saudi customs. But Hope says ''our guys want girls'' and, besides, his troupe is NOT performing for the Saudis. Hope says Barbara Eden, Vic Damone and Diahann Carroll have volunteered their time... and that he hopes to get singer-dancer Paula Abdul to take part.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (NOV. 28) UPI - Blacks outraged by a white extremist group's weekend attack on black children in the northern town of Louis Trichardt began boycotting the town's white-owned businesses Wednesday.

Many shopowners reported business down by more then 80 percent, suggesting a near total boycott by blacks invoking one of their most powerful weapons of peaceful protest against South Africa's apartheid policies.

The boycott came a day after President Frederik de Klerk and African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela met in Pretoria but failed to resolve their differences over the ANC's right to stage public marches, rallies and boycotts and other mass protests.

The ANC, which suspended its guerrilla war against white rule but insists on the right to continue with peaceful protests, Wednesday accused the government of blackmail by refusing to release political prisoners until the ANC suspends all forms of protest.

A statement said the black majority was left with ''no option but to continue with mass action'' until apartheid is eradicated.

Khaki-clad whites wearing uniforms of the neo-Nazi white supremacy movement attacked about 400 black children on a church outing Saturday in the town park chasing them with sticks and whips, according to community church leaders.

Police announced formation of a special investigating team but no arrests have been made in the town, whose council is controlled by the right-wing Conservative Party.

Officials said 30 to 40 men were involved in the attack but they were unable to confirm reports that several children were hurt.

Senior police officials failed Monday to persuade local community activists, including ANC officials, to cancel the boycott at the start of the usually busy Christmas shopping season. It is the second black consumer boycott launched in the town this year to protest racist policies of the local authorities.

The Conservative Party, which rejects de Klerk's racial reform program, condemned the attack on the children but warned that Louis Trichardt voters have rejected integration and groups breaching the town's decision will face the consequences.

WESTCHESTER, IL (NOV. 28) UPI - A panel of health care experts warned Wednesday the quality the quality of services offered by hospitals may suffer by 1994 because of the worsening financial situation in the health industry.

The Healthcare Financial Management Association said hospitals reported falling profitability, a weakened ability to pay for existing debt, aging physical plants and a decreasing ability to finance replacements - all signs that trouble lies ahead.

The association examined data for 1989 - the last year for which figures were available - for 1,800 hospitals and projected through the year 1994. The panel of experts said a combination of factors will exert strong negative pressure on hospitals in the next four years, including Medicare's prospective pricing system and the resulting decline in operating margins.

"Panel members are not very optimistic about the future," said Richard L. Clarke, president of the 28,000-member organization. "Productivity will have to increase and/or quality will decline if hospitals are to survive in the long run," said Christopher F. Weinheimer, a member of the association panel and senior vice president of the Medical Center Hospital of Vermont in Burlington.

The expected decline in operating margins will make it more difficult for hospitals to secure financing for projects and inhibit administrators' ability to retire debt, the panel said.

The experts said they expect occupancy rates to remain flat and those hospitals unable to husband their resources will be forced to close by the turn of the century.

LONG BEACH, CA (NOV. 28) UPI - McDonnell Douglas Corp., the nation's biggest defense contractor, said Wednesday that it would be able to adhere to a $6.57 billion ceiling in developing and producing the first six C-17 cargo jets. The company downplayed a published report it would incur a $500 million cost overrun on the project.

"We continue to believe that we will not exceed the ceiling," said Donald Hanson, spokesman for Douglas Aircraft Co., the McDonnell Douglas unit that is building the C-17 for the Air Force at its plant in Long Beach, Calif.

The Los Angeles Times reported Wednesday that an internal Air Force study has estimated that Douglas will spend $7.1 billion - to complete development and production of the first six planes under what is a fixed-price contract.

The contractor, which expects to begin flight testing on the planes next year, has also disclosed that it will need payment on unspecified claims from the Air Force to break even on the contract.

In a recent filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, the contractor said it has already reversed $93 million in profits on the C-17, and plans to recover $125 million from the Air Force on claims in order to break even on the contract.

If the estimates are correct, they could force McDonnell Douglas into serious trouble, since the St. Louis-based aerospace giant is already carrying a debt load of about $3 billion and has been reporting disappointing earnings.

The study, conducted by Brig. Gen. John Nauseef, was initiated after the Air Force suspended progress payments in July for work on the plane, which is designed to ferry troops and cargo to areas with short runways. The Air Force plans to order 120 C-17s, which would bring the contract's price tag to about $30 billion.

The company said the Air Force subsequently resumed making progress payments in late September, but it is not clear if the company's entire request is being met.

Air Force spokesman Robert Perry said Wednesday that he could not confirm the $7.1 billion estimate from the study, because it is not yet completed. "It would be inappropriate for me to comment about the figure until the study is complete," Perry said.

Lawrence Harris, an aerospace analyst with Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards in Los Angeles, said that he is "cautious" about whether the company can meet the break-even number.

"It's quite likely that a certain number of design changes will have to be made, which can drive the price up," Harris said. "You can do all the studies in a wind tunnel, but we don't know how its going to fly until it's in the air so that's a concern."

"We also don't yet know what type of learning curve will go on once it goes into production - that is, how much can the number of manufacturing hours be cut," Harris said. "That will really determine how much production units are going to cost."

"Either side could be right, but caution is warranted because the unforeseen can always occur," Harris said. "Cost estimation is an art, not a science. There are always some surprises."

BOSTON (NOV. 28) UPI - The state Aeronautics Commission has narrowed to 11 the potential sites for a second major area airport to help handle an anticipated overflow from crowded Logan International Airport, The Boston Globe reported Wednesday.

The commission said its original list of 182 possible sites was first reduced to 32 and then to 11. "These 11 locations are currently the best site opportunities," said James B. King, commission chairman.

Four of the sites are at two military installations - two at Fort Devens in Ayer, Mass. and two at the former Otis Air Force Base on Cape Cod. The other locations include two sites in Plymouth, including a tract owned by Digital Equipment Corp; one in Fall River-Freetown; one at Freetown-Lakeville; one in Douglas-Uxbridge; one in Middleboro; and one in Winchendon, all in Massachusetts.

King said the state must take action in the 1990s to secure enough land and regulatory approval to open a new airport by 2010. A report by the New England Council last month said that by 2010, the region's air passenger and air cargo load will be too much for Logan to handle, and that smaller airports cannot relieve the pressure.

King said a new facility would have to be able to accommodate 20 million to 30 million passengers a year. He said 23 million will use Logan this year.

The commission's blue-ribbon panel set up to study the second-airport siting process plans to hold three public meetings on the 11 proposed sites next month, said Betty Desrosiers, project director for the Aeronautics Commission.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) UPI - The gang rape of a woman jogger outraged the public more than any crime since the Lindbergh baby kidnapping, but police under pressure to make arrests apprehended the wrong people, a defense lawyer told the jury Wednesday.

''The ravaging of this woman took place at another time and in another place in Central Park,'' said Howard Diller, whose client, Kevin Richardson, 16, is on trial with Kharey Wise, 16, on charges of rape and attempted murder.

They were among six youths indicted in the April 19, 1989, crime spree through a moonlit Central Park. The pack was accused of randomly attacking joggers and bicyclists, including the 30-year-old investment banker who was raped, beaten into a coma and left for dead in a muddy gully.

''This is a crime not only uninvolving him,'' Diller said pointing to his hulking client, ''but also uninvolving any of the names (of co- defendants) that have come up.''

He told the jury the youths were wrongly arrested by police trying to quickly solve the high-publicity case. The public pressure in 1989 was as intense as the nationwide outrage in 1932 over the kidnapping of Charles Lindbergh's baby son, Diller said.

''(The jogger) was the Charles Lindbergh Junior of 1989,'' Diller declared.

He noted the Lindbergh family was famous and had won the public's respect. The jogger, a Yale business school graduate and whiz kid at Salomon Brothers, also proved to be a lightning rod for praise.

''This city has a great deal of respect for those in the banking industry and for the elite who jog and ride,'' Diller said.

New Yorkers were horrified when, after a long day at work, she jogged into the park and was beaten so badly doctors thought she might die.

In their haste to close the sensational case, police rounded up black and Hispanic youths who live near the park, including Richardson, Diller said.

''(They) had to come up with perpertrators. The community demanded it,'' Diller told the seven-woman, five-man jury at state Supreme Court in Manhattan.

''What you all have to decide is whether in trying to get the perps, they got the right perps,'' he added.

In the Lindbergh case, the baby was found dead two months after he was kidnapped from the mansion near Princeton, N.J. Bruno Hauptmann was convicted in the case and was later executed. However, the controversy over the case has never stilled and recently two best-selling books proclaiming Hauptman's innocence have fanned the flames.

Summations in the eight-week Central Park rape trial could stretch into Friday. The jury was expected to begin deliberations late this week.

CHICAGO (NOV. 28) UPI - Major league baseball's annual winter meetings, being held separately from the minor league meetings because of a rift between the two sides, begin Monday but the trading which usually spices these proceedings may be absent.

That's because more than 80 free agents are still available with more possibly joining the ranks in January on a second-look basis because of prior collusion on the part of owners. General managers therefore are expected to sort through the pile before parting with any of their own players.

''There may not be any trades at the meetings but maybe we can set the groundwork for future trades,'' said Chicago Cubs president Don Grenesko, whose ballclub already dipped into the free agent pool to grab left-handed pitcher Danny Jackson.

More than 800 people are expected to gather over the weekend at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare for the meetings, which runs through next Wednesday.

Commissioner Fay Vincent will address the group Monday, followed by a Rule 5 draft. The American League and National League owners' meeting will be held Tuesday, while the joint major league owners meeting is scheduled for Wednesday.

Because the closing date of the winter meetings no longer corresponds to the deadline for interleague trading, most activity is expected to center on free agent signings. Changes in major league waivers, included in the Basic Agreement in 1985, moved the trading deadline to July 31.

Last year's winter meetings in Nashville established a record for number of transactions with 28 (five trades and 23 player signings), involving 40 players. Forty-five players were involved in 23 deals at the 1988 meetings in Atlanta.

The free agents available include American League Cy Young winner Bob Welch, who is being aggressively lured by the Chicago White Sox and new general manager Ron Schueler; 1987 AL Most Valuable Player George Bell; and St. Louis speedster Vince Coleman.

Pittsburgh's Zane Smith has received bids from several ballclubs seeking pitching help, and if recent offers are any indication, he can name his price.

The Cubs inked Jackson, who was 6-6 last season for Cincinnati and on the disabled list three times, to a four-year, $10.5 million deal, while the San Francisco Giants signed Bud Black to a four- year, $10 million contract.

The major league representatives also are expected to discuss the growing rift between themselves and the minor league system, which is holding its own winter meeting in Los Angeles at the same time.

The issues still unsettled are the length of years covered by the new agreement between the majors and minor league teams, the amount of games the minor leagues should play each season, the amount of revenue the majors want from the minors and an understanding as to the Baseball Commissioner's power.

''The control sought by the majors is already there,'' said Mike Moore, chief administrative officer of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, the governing body of minor league baseball. ''The difference is that the minors would have the first crack at enforcement of the rules. And the minor leagues will continue to recognize continued authority of the commissioner.''

No new talks were scheduled.

Major league teams will try to bolster their ranks in Monday's Rule 5 draft. Players left unprotected may be selected for $50,000. The selection rules provide that the player must remain on the drafting team's active major league roster during the following season or be offered back to the original club at half the original price.

The draft order is based on reverse order of finish in 1990, with the two leagues alternating. Atlanta will pick first, followed by the New York Yankees St. Louis, Minnesota, Houston, Milwaukee, San Diego, Kansas City, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Chicago Cubs, Seattle, Montreal, Cleveland, San Francisco, Detroit, Los Angeles, California, Cincinnati, Texas, New York Mets, Toronto, Pittsburgh, Boston, Chicago White Sox and Oakland.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - Declaring ''the status quo of centralized bureaucracy is not working for the people,'' President Bush signed a $24.8 billion housing bill Wednesday creating an additional 360,000 units of affordable housing.

At an East Room ceremony to sign the mammoth bill, Bush noted that the legislation also represents a significant shift in policy, handing state and local governments a much larger role in making housing decisions.

''It's the people who have the best answers for themselves and their families, not the government,'' Bush said. ''It puts power in the hands of people.''

The White House said the bill authorizes spending $24.8 billion for housing programs in fiscal 1991 - nearly a 70 percent increase over the previous year - and $27.1 billion in 1992.

The cornerstone of the legislation is a new program, HOME Investment Partnerships, a block grant program to provide $1 billion in seed money in the next fiscal year to communities for housing construction, rehabilitation and rental assistance.

Aiming to keep the federal government out of the construction business, the administration had objected to including money for new housing construction, but got its way with inclusion of Housing and Urban Development Secretary Jack Kemp's HOPE program, which would allow selling off public housing projects to tenants.

Bush pointed to that program, telling those assembled for the signing ceremony: ''These are the people who will help us meet our goal of 1 million new homeowners by 1992.

''We want public housing to become a springboard for independence, not a bottomless pit for dependency.''

House Banking Chairman Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, a major player in formulating the new policy, attended the function. He has called the measure ''the first major, comprehensive housing legislation in more than a decade.''

In addition to providing greater housing opportunities to the poor, the bill creates the National Housing Trust to subsidize downpayments and mortages for first-time home buyers with middle incomes. It also authorizes $123 million in fiscal 1991 for housing programs for people with AIDS and, for the elderly, would place a new emphasis on combining housing with social services, such as transportation and meals, to keep them living independently.

''The status quo of centralized bureaucracy is not working for the people,'' Bush declared. ''The National Affordable Housing Act gives people the best kind of government assistance. It provides opportunity and it encourages responsibility without the shackles of dependency.''

LONDON (NOV. 28) UPI - Prime Minister John Major made extensive changes Wednesday to the administration he inherited from Margaret Thatcher, cobbling together a ''Cabinet of all talents'' and asking former rival Michael Heseltine to sort out the controverial poll tax.

Heseltine, 57, was made environment secretary, which will put him in charge of reviewing the head tax that he bitterly criticized in the campaign that brought down the longest ruling prime minister of the 20th century.

Norman Lamont, 48, was boosted from deputy to chief of the Treasury to fill the post vacated by Major, 47. The prime minister's campaign manager must get the domestic economy in shape before a general election is called within 20 months.

The urgent task of restoring faith in the Conservative Party after a bruising month of political warfare was handed to former Environment Secretary Chris Patten. As chairman of the Conservative Party, he is to lead the Tories into a fourth consecutive general election victory.

Signalling a desire for continuity in foreign policy with the Persian Gulf crisis threatening to escalate, Major said he would keep leadership opponent Douglas Hurd, 60, as foreign secretary, and Tom King, 57, as defense secretary.

Eight changes were made among about 20 Cabinet-level posts. The figure is flexible, and additional shifts were expected.

Heseltine's appointment was aimed at mending the rift in the party and followed through on Major's promise to appoint ''a Cabinet of all talents.''

Major's selection of Heseltine to craft changes to the poll tax indicated he was willing to consider a major overhaul of a plan he has defended.

Some detractors took perverse pleasure in Heseltine's assignment.

''The wages of sin may not be death but they could be the reform of the poll tax,'' one bitter Thatcher supporter said, suggesting that Heseltine deserved the job of resolving one of the party's ugliest problems.

The flat rate imposed to cover the cost of local services has been condemned as regressive. More than a million Scots refused to pay it and violent demonstrations have been staged against it in England.

The posting marks a return to government for Heseltine, who resigned four years ago, alleging Thatcher had tried to undermine her Cabinet during an attempt to save Britain's only helicopter manufacturer.

Lamont's career has followed in Major's jetstream. He succeeded the prime minister as chief secretary to Treasury and before that was financial secretary and oversaw the selloffs of state industries such as British Petroleum and British Steel.

The new chief secretary to the Treasury is David Mellor, who also was part of Major's campaign team.

Succeeding Mellor as arts minister is the former government chief whip, Tim Renton. The new chief whip is Richard Ryder, who was promoted from within the office.

Kenneth Baker was shunted aside as party leader and will be Home secretary. He had a rough run, having to explain away by-election and local election losses, the resignations of two key Cabinet ministers and the gaping chasms on European policy within the party.

While Patten and Major are the same age and have long been viewed as potential rivals for the premiership, they work well together and Major recognized him as an eloquent disciple of the Conservative philosophy.

Former Home Secretary David Waddington is now leader of the House of Lords, succeeding Lord David Belstead, who is leaving government.

Malcolm Rifkind was named Transport secretary to replace Cecil Parkinson, 59, a friend of Thatcher's who resigned. Rifkind will be replaced as Scottish secretary by Ian Lang, a junior minister in the department who campaigned on behalf of Major.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) UPI - A single gunshot was fired early Wednesday through the window of a Manhattan newsstand - after a gang of men had warned the store's owner to stop selling copies of the strikebound Daily News, police said. No arrests were made, and no one was injured, authorities said.

Azeem Ali, owner of Kumar News, at 591 Ninth Ave. at 44th Street, said he was warned right after the strike began not to sell the News, but has been selling more than 200 copies a day during the month-long strike without incident. "I never missed a day" during the strike, he said.

On Wednesday at 4:45 a.m., however, Ali said a gang of as many as 15 men confronted him on the street just as bundle of papers was dropped off, warning him to stop selling the News.

"One guy comes out of a car, in front of the store and shoots a gun," Ali said. The store's glass window was blown out, but no other damage was reported.

Ali said News management had sent a representative to the store after the incident. "If the Daily News gives me security, I might continue to sell (the News), but without security, I won't sell anymore," Ali said. News management could not immediately be reached for comment Wednesday.

In two other strike-related incidents of violence Wednesday, police reported a News delivery truck and security van in Queens were set upon by a gang of men brandishing golf clubs, who smashed the van's windows and set fire to newspapers, and another Manhattan newsstand had its locks jammed with a tar-like substance.

The Hudson News Station, at 2 Penn Plaza in Midtown, reported its gate locks had been vandalized between 1 a.m. and 6 a.m., police said. And the News driver and a security van were attacked at about 4 a.m. at Queens Boulevard and Elliot Avenue by approximately 17 men carrying golf clubs, police said.

The truck driver fled, but the security van had its windows smashed and the gang then set fire to newspapers placed in the street, police said. No injuries were reported and no arrests were made, police said.

Wednesday's incidents pushed the number of reported strike-related arsons, bombings, vandalism, assaults, and brawls to more than 230 since the strike began Oct. 25, with 107 arrests, police said.

News publisher James Hoge has blamed striking union members with organizing a campaign of violence and intimidation against News replacement workers and newsstand dealers, a claim union officials have vehemently denied.

At a hearing Monday on strike-related violence before several state legislators, top police brass refuted Hoge's claim, testifying they have found no evidence of a conspiracy and the acts all appeared to be random.

News management has blamed the violence with scaring away its largest advertisers, including the tabloid's "big three" of Macy's, A&S and Alexander's.

Striking ad employees at the Newspaper Guild said the paper has been left with only 40 of its 615 pre-strike advertisers. The most recent advertisers to pull out of the paper are The Wiz, Consumers Catalogue Showrooms, Newmark and Lewis R&S Strauss, and Jennifer Convertibles, union officials said Wednesday.

Also Wednesday, the second edition of the "Real News," a paper put out by striking News workers, began hitting the streets with stories by reporters covering their old beats.

The second edition of the strikers' paper contained what the unions said were a series of exclusive reports, including one story of the Dinkins administration's plans to shut seven firehouses to help close the budget gap. The first issue had dealt only with strike-related matters from the unions' point of view.

About 2,500 members of the Guild and eight unions represented by the Allied Printing Trades Council walked off their jobs at the News Oct. 25 after ten months of fruitless contract negotiations. Since then there have been sporadic talks between union negotiators and managment with federal mediators in attendance.

Before the strike, The News, founded in 1919, was the largest-circulation local newspaper in New York. It is owned by the Tribune Co., the Chicago-based publishing, broadcasting and entertainment conglomerate.

SACRAMENTO, CA (NOV. 28) UPI - Ruling that prosecutors had produced enough evidence for a trial, a judge Wednesday refused to dismiss charges against a landlady accused of murdering nine of her boardinghouse tenants.

Attorneys for Dorothea Puente, 61, argued that a lower court judge erred when she bound Puente over for trial after a week-long preliminary hearing.

They argued there was no evidence that the seven decomposed corpses unearthed from Puente's yard in November 1988 or of two other tenants had been the victims of foul play, much less that Puente had killed them.

The case of the ''F Street'' landlady drew national attention when police began digging up the remains of the mostly elderly tenants. At first, the demure, grandmotherly Puente was so far above suspicion that authorities escorted her from her boardinghouse through a throng of television cameras and on-lookers so she could visit a relative.

Instead, she fled to Los Angeles, where she was arrested a few days later.

She is accused of drugging her victims so she could cash their Social Security and disability checks.

Along with the murders of the seven people unearthed from her yard, she is charged with the 1982 death by overdose of one tenant and the death of another whose body was discovered on New Year's Day 1986 in a wooden box along the Sacramento River.

''What's really being said here is, 'You have bodies, there must be a murderer' without any credible evidence of the circumstances of the death,'' defense attorney Kevin Clymo said in arguments Wednesday before Superior Court Judge Jack Sapunor.

He argued that, because prosecutors had no eyewitness who saw Puente drug tenants and no evidence that she buried the bodies, the charges should be dismissed. Clymo argued that many of the victims were heavy drinkers and smokers and could have died of natural causes.

Because Puente had once been sent to prison for drugging and robbing elderly victims, she could have been fearful she would be suspected of wrongdoing if she reported the deaths of tenants to the authorities, Clymo contended.

But the judge agreed with Muncipal Court Judge Gail Ohanesian, who had conducted the preliminary hearing, that prosecutors had presented sufficient evidence to justify a trial.

Sapunor said that defense lawyers had overstated the health problems of victims. Although most were elderly and some were heavy drinkers and smokers, none had life-threatening conditions, the judge said.

He also said there is evidence that Puente purchased Dalmane, a tranquilizer found in the victims' bodies, and that she profited by cashing the victims' Social Security checks.

The trial is scheduled to begin March 13.

Puente, who was not in court Wednesday, has been jailed without bail since her arrest two years ago. She faces the death penalty if convicted.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - More people in the United States died in 1988 than in any one year on record as deaths due to AIDS, homicide and influenza rose while mortality from heart disease, stroke and cancer declined, according to a federal study.

In its Final Mortality Statistics, the Centers for Disease Control's National Center for Health Statistics reported 2,167,999 deaths in 1988 - 44,676 more than the number recorded in 1987, the previous record year for annual deaths.

The report said population growth, the ''aging'' of the population and an outbreak of influenza were contributing factors.

During the one-year period, there was a 20 percent increase in the the death rate for AIDS, an 8 percent increase for pneumonia and influenza and a 5 percent rise in the death rate due to homicide. The 1988 homicide rate of 9 deaths per 100,000 persons was slightly lower than the record high in 1980.

Death from heart disease was down 1.9 percent, stroke was down 2 percent and cancer mortality declined 0.2 percent, the report said.

''As we succeed in reducing mortality from the leading causes of death, we must address the increasing risk from homicide and HIV infection (which causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome),'' said William Roper, director of the Centers for Disease Control.

''I am convinced that the health education and prevention efforts, which served so well in combating chronic disease, can also be effective in helping us deal with these new threats,'' he said.

In a speech at Yale University Wednesday, Health Secretary Louis Sullivan harped on a similar theme, urging individuals to adopt a ''renewed sense of personal responsibility.''

''For the harsh truth is that a high percentage of the disease and disability afflicting the American people is a consequence of unwise choices of behavior and lifestyle,'' the secretary said.

Overall life expectancy at birth was set at 74.9 years in 1988. Provisional data for 1989 showed improvement, up to 75.2 years.

Life expectancy in 1988 for whites remained unchanged from the previous year at 75.6 years. However, it declined for the black population to 69.2 years, continuing a downward trend observed since 1984.

Overall, blacks had age-adjusted death rates that exceeded those of whites by 50 percent.

Blacks had higher rates for most of the leading causes of death. The homicide death rate for blacks was six times that for whites and the AIDS death rate for blacks was three times that for whites.

However, deaths due to suicide and chronic obstructive lung disease were more prevalent among whites.

Heart disease and cancer were the two leading causes of death for Hispanics as well as non-Hispanics living in areas concentrated by that minority.

Other 1988 highlights:

-10,917 persons died of drug-induced deaths, or 4.2 deaths per 100, 000 population, up 11 percent from 1987.

-18,872 persons died of alcohol-induced deaths, or a rate of 7 deaths per 100,000, up 3 percent from 1987. However, the rate decreased 15 percent between 1979 and 1988.

-38,910 deaths of infants under 1 year old, or 10 deaths per 1,000 live births and the lowest rate ever recorded in the United States. Among black infnats, the rate was 17.6 per 1,000, about twice that for white infants - 8.5. The Hispanic infant mortality rate was 8.1 per 1, 000.

-310 women died of maternal causes, up from 251 in 1987. These causes included toxemia, ectopic pregnancy and other complications of pregnancy and childbirth.

BALTIMORE (NOV. 28) UPI - General Motors Corp. is indefinitely laying off 300 of its 3,500 workers at the Broening Highway minivan plant because of projections of continued depressed sales, executives were quoted saying in a newspaper report Wednesday. Management said the layoffs begin Jan. 22, and may reduce the output of the Baltimore plant by more than ten percent.

Rodney Trump, president of the area's United Auto Workers union local, said the plant's managers and labor representatives have not discussed the numbers or specifics of the layoffs.

But Trump said most of the laid-off workers probably would have at least five years' seniority at the plant. He told The Baltimore Sun in Wednesday's editions that plant officials told him they planned to slow the assembly line from 47 vans to 42 vans an hour.

GM executives said the 47-van-an-hour line would be slowed, but declined to say by how much.

#90332u1622 11/28/1990 ~United Press International
NEW YORK (NOV. 28) UPI - The dollar strengthened Wednesday, restored as a result of remarks to Congress by Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan indicating concern about the weak dollar and about restraining inflation.

Traders said the U.S. currency moved up handily across the board on what the foreign-exchange market saw as a bit of subtle jawboning by the Fed chief and a hint that American interest rates will not go through the floor.

Greenspan acknowledged the domestic economy is weakening, but he declined to say it was in recession. He sent an indirect message to financial markets that the Fed would continue to fight inflation while accommodating growth.

In plain English, that meant the Fed would not press ahead immediately with an easing of interest rates. This helped the dollar, as rising interest rates in Germany and elsewhere have lured away fickle investors seeking higher yields.

"Ever since then, it's been up, up and away," one New York trader said of the effect of Greenspan's comments. This forced traders to cover "short" positions as prior commitments to sell the dollar are known, by buying the currency.

In late New York trading, the dollar stood at 1.4855 German marks, up from 1.48 marks Tuesday, and 130.05 Japanese yen, up from 128.20.

Lou Rappaport, Societe Generale's chief dollar trader, said Greenspan's comments could signal a slightly firmer dollar stance. A weak dollar can boost exports but can also fuel inflation by making imported goods more expensive.

"The market has been looking for some time to pick a bottom for the dollar," Rappaport said. And while this doesn not signal a major dollar turnaround, he said, there may be a reassessment going on as to how low it ought to go. Rappaport added that the dollar could be helped as currency players grow more cautious in thin - and therefore volatile - trading at year's end.

The British pound slipped to $1.97 from $1.9830. Other New York dollar rates: 1.2700 Swiss francs, up from 1.2590; 5. 0150 French francs, up from 4.9920; and 1.118 Italian lire, up from 1,110.

In European trading, the dollar closed lower but recovered from the day's lows after Greenspan voiced concern about the dollar. In earlier activity, the U.S. unit fell on poor U.S. economic data and on firming German interest rates.

"Greenspan's comments caught the market on the hop and caused a rally in the dollar," said Suresh Hiremath, a trader for Goldman Sachs in London.

In Frankfurt, the dollar closed slightly lower, at 1.4815 German marks vs.1.4840 at Tuesday's close. In Zurich, the greenback slipped to 1.2580 Swiss francs vs. 1.2595 the day before.

London was awaiting an announcement of cabinet appointments from new Prime Minister John Major, including the person to replace him as chancellor of the exchequer. The pound suffered a bit from profit-taking but closed unchanged at $1.9745.

The dollar was down in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to, respectively: 4.9880 French francs vs. 5.0190, 30.59 Belgian francs vs. 30.69 and 1,108.80 lire vs. 1,115.85.

In Tokyo, the dollar slipped to 128.90 yen from 128.95. Traders said they sold the dollar on expectations of U.S. interest rate cuts.

Gold closed higher in Zurich, at $386.50 an ounce vs. $384.50 Tuesday, but was unchanged in London at $385 an ounce.

Silver closed lower in both Zurich, at $4.12 per ounce vs. $4.15, and London, at $4.10 an ounce vs. $4.13 Tuesday.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $385 an ounce, down from $385.25 Tuesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled the new December gold contract at $385.70 an ounce, down from $385.80.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.145 an ounce, up from $4.12. Comex silver finished trading at $4.125, up from $4.102.

WARSAW, Poland (NOV. 28) UPI - Solidarity leader Lech Walesa urged a national television audience Wednesday to vote for him in the second round of the presidential election to overcome ''the Polish crisis''.

''I want to be president of all Poles,'' he said. ''I am looking for a platform of agreement with all.''

He said the resignation of Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, which is expected to be approved Thursday by the Parliament, has triggered a political crisis.

''The Polish crisis is big and strong forces are needed to overcome it,'' he said. ''I want to be president of victorious Polish reforms,'' Walesa said.

Mazowiecki, who lost his presidential bid in the first round of the election Sunday, offered his resignation Monday night. He was defeated by Stanislaw Tyminski, an emigre businesman from Canada.

Walesa and Tyminski will compete in a runoff Dec. 9.

Walesa promised continuation of the reforms Mazowiecki started 14 months ago - a suggestion that could prompt many Poles to vote for Tyminski.

The reforms tamed hyperinflation but dropped living standards nearly 40 percent.

Walesa attended the meeting of the Solidarity Parliamentary Caucus, which adopted a resolution supporting him.

''The OKP appeals for general participation in the election and voting for the candidate coming from the mainstream of Solidarity,'' its statement said.

In a separate statement, Walesa called on Polish television to give a chance to Tyminski to present his views to the Polish people.

''The Poles should learn what views he has,'' he said.

ST. LOUIS (NOV. 28) UPI - Rumors that the Mississippi River is bubbling along the New Madrid Fault, where residents already are bracing themselves for a predicted earthquake next month, are just a lot of hot air, a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers spokesman said Wednesday.

The spokesman, Ken Kruchowski, said he received several calls Tuesday and Wednesday asking about reports that the river was bubbling and the corps was closing the Mississippi to navigation.

He said the callers asked about ''bubbling in the Mississippi River somewhere, a precursor to the predicted quake along the New Madrid fault.

''Where they're getting this, I have no idea,'' an exasperated Kruchowski said. ''There's no bubbling in the river anywhere that anybody here knows about.''

The rumors are the latest aspect of what has become near-hysteria in the Midwest about a prediction by New Mexico climatologist Iben Browning, who says there is a 50-50 chance for an earthquake measuring at least 6.5 on the Richter scale in the central United States on or about Dec. 2-3.

The prediction has prompted a number of school districts in southeastern Missouri, southern Illinois, northeastern Arkansas, and adjoining areas of Tennessee and Kentucky to cancel classes early next week. City officials in Carbondale, Ill., were not allowed to take vacation next week, and other local authorities in the region are making preparations for a possible disaster.

The seismic zone takes its name from the southeastern Missouri town of New Madrid, about 150 miles southeast of St. Louis, where some of the most powerful earthquakes in the nation's history struck in 1811-12.

Kruchowski said officials of the U.S. Coast Guard had been getting similar calls asking about the reported bubbling on the river.

''The Coast Guard even checked with all of the pipeline companies to see if there were any leaks on the river,'' he said. ''There is nothing bubbling up anywhere.''

The only closure on the river is near the Municipal Docks area in the St. Louis harbor, Kruchowski said. He said that part of the river was being closed at night to allow a dredge to work in the area, where the channel is becoming too narrow.

''The tows are scheduling to take that into account,'' the corps spokesman said. ''There's no backup to my knowledge.''

Kruchowski said the corps was taking no special precautions against the possibility of a December temblor.

''We have got an earthquake task force set up,'' he said. ''We are trying to organize so that we can cope with an earthquake should it happen, because everyone is expecting a major quake sometime in the next 10 to 20 years. We figure we might as well be prepared.

''As far as December 3rd, who knows? There's no more likelihood of it happening on December 3rd than on next July 5th.''

Earthquake experts from the National Earthquake Prediction Evaluation Council, an advisory group to the U.S. Geological Survey, released a report last month that said the scientists had found no scientific merit to Browning's prediction.

The report said a major earthquake in the New Madrid seismic zone is no more likely to occur in early December than on any other date and that the prediction should not be used as a basis for public policy.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - There will be more large farms in coming years, plenty of small farms and lots of pressure on medium-size farmers to either get big or scale back their operations, two analysts said Wednesday.

Economists Thomas Carlin and Donn Reimund said the number of U.S. farms, which has fallen since the Depression, would continue to decline during the 1990s, but at a slower rate than recorded in the 1980s.

There are about 2.14 million farms in the United States, down 11 percent from a decade ago. Carlin and Reimund forecast a 3.5 percent drop by 1995, which would mean 2.06 million farmers and a 6 percent drop for the decade, meaning about 2.01 million farms would be in operation at the end of the century.

Their analysis, presented during the the Agriculture Department's annual Outlook Conference, was the latest pointer toward what one study has called ''an emerging dual structure'' in agriculture. In it, big farms would produce a growing share of crops and livestock while small farms, although plentiful in number, are highly dependent on off-farm jobs.

''Indeed, if we peer beneath the surface, we can see that today's farm sector closely resembles our description for the year 2000,'' said Carlin and Reimund who work for the department's Economic Research Service.

Mechanization and adoption of hybrid seeds and chemical fertilizers and pesticides were major factors in the drop of farm numbers in the 1950s and 1960s. According to the economists, farm numbers will be more heavily influenced in coming years by outside economic forces, such as interest rates and export sales.

Mid-size farms have suffered the largest losses, measured in percentage terms, among farm categories in the past two decades. From 1982-1987, small to moderate-size commercial farms accounted for 40 percent of the drop in farm numbers.

About one-fifth of U.S. farms are in that category and they account for about 17 percent of farm production.

''Operators of mid-size farms are under considerable financial pressure to either enlarge their farming operations or to scale back to a smaller part-time size,'' the economists said. ''Consolidation of mid- size farms into larger units has been a major source of growth of large commercial farms over the past two decades.

''This farm consolidation is expected to continue, but at a somewhat slower pace in the 1990s.''

Large farms control half of the farm land in the nation and produce a torrent of food. In 1987, Carlin and Reimund said, 75,700 farms accounted for half of the market value of all agricultural products.

''There will be more large farms at the turn of the century ... and production will be even more concentrated among our nation's largest farms,'' they said, but farming still will be far less concentrated than most indutries.

Meanwhile, there will be ''a large number of small farms'' whose existence is virtually untouched by changes in farm income. For many of the owners, farming is a part-time occupation.

''The key to their staying power is going to depend on the vitality of the rural nonfarm economy,'' Carlin and Reimund said.

At the start of this year, there were 1.02 million small farms, 806, 200 medium-size farms and 317,700 large farms.

In the Midwest and Plains states, where good land is abundant and off-farm jobs relatively scarce, ''there is still pressure for farm expansion and consolidation,'' Carlin and Reimund said.

There also is continued pressure for small farm operators in the South to switch to urban jobs, they said, while farm numbers have stabilized in the West. Farm numbers dropped in the Northeast during the 1980s.

TRENTON, NJ (NOV. 28) UPI - A state grand jury Wednesday indicted a white Teaneck police officer on charges of reckless manslaughter in the slaying of a black teen in April that sparked a night of violent protests.

The jury charged Officer Gary Spath for firing the bullet that killed 16-year-old Phillip Pannell Jr. on April 10.

Pannell was shot once in the back at a schoolyard basketball court as he ran from police who were answering a report of a teen seen brandishing a gun.

Witnesses to the shooting said Pannell was trying to surrender and had his hands in the air when the officer fired the fatal shot.

Spath's partner, Officer Wayne Blanco, said he was patting down Pannell when he felt what he thought was a gun and the teen began to run. But witnesses said Pannell was never touched by the officer when he fled the scene.

The shooting sparked a night of violence in the Bergen County town when black teens went on a rampage the day after the shooting, breaking windows and attacking police cars.

The grand jury was the second panel to investigate the case.

A state grand jury in July refused to indict the officer, but Attorney General Robert Del Tufo immediately empaneled a new jury to hear the charges. Del Tufo said the first jury's deliberations were tainted by misleading and mistaken medical testimony.

The events that followed the shooting also led to Del Tufo removing long-time Bergen County medical examiner Dr. Lawrence Denson, who performed the autopsy on Pannell.

Del Tufo said a second review of the autopsy findings showed Denson never attempted to match up the bullet holes in Pannell's clothing with the shot in his back, which would have shown whether the youth's arms were raised when he was shot.

If convicted on the charges, Spath faces a maximum of 10 years in prison and up to $100,000 in fines.

The shooting tarnished the affluent community's image of itself as a bastion of tolerance. Teaneck voluntarilly desegregated in the early 1960s, but following the shooting blacks in the town told of harrasment at the hands of white police officers.

CAIRO, Egypt (NOV. 28) UPI - The Persian Gulf crisis and the sluggish economy are overshadowing Thursday's parliamentary elections but campaign rallies have drawn large and excited crowds despite an opposition boycott of the elections.

That's because a new law allows candidates to appear on the ballot by name rather than simply by party affiliation, presenting voters with a choice of personalities than staid party policies.

Campaigning ended Wednesday without major incident, although Cairo Radio reported one ruling party candidate for the Nile Delta town of El Mahala died of exhaustion.

The country's Interior Minister, Maj. Gen. Abdul Halim Mussa, pledged that his forces would maintain law and order during Thursday's poll. He also admitted that 15 members of the outlawed Moslem Brotherhood and 10 members of more radical Islamic groupings were standing for election despite the ban on the Moslem Brotherhood.

''The constitution is very clear on the rights of every citizen to run as a candidate, as long as there are no legal impediments,'' Mussa told the state-owned radio. ''The Moslem Brotherhood entered parliament twice on previous occasions in alliance with the opposition parties of El Wafd and the Social Labor Party,'' he said.

''The (Moslem) Brothers can enter the electoral race independently,'' Mussa added, in what appeared to be a concession to Islamic groupings.

Thousands of armed police and troops were mobilized to guard more than 23,000 polling stations around the country, the radio said.

President Hosni Mubarak's ruling National Democratic Party is virtually assured of victory after the country's 16 million eligible voters cast their ballots around the mostly agricultural nation.

Mubarak himself won't be directly affected by the vote because his six-year term runs until 1993.

Mubarak called the elections last month after voters overwhelmingly approved in a referendum the dissolution of the previous Parliament - which the country's Supreme Court said was unconstitutional because too many candidates were elected on a party ticket.

The government changed election laws to conform to the constitution but major opposition parties boycotted the vote because they said Mubarak had not consulted them first. The parties also say the government has tampered with election results in the past, a charge the country's former interior minister admitted.

Despite the boycott, almost 3,000 candidates are vying for 44 places in the People's Assembly or Parliament and some of the independent candiadtes are backed by the fundamentalist Islamic Brotherhood, an outlawed group that opposes Mubarak's pro-Western policies.

One such candidate, Ragab Hamida, distributed leaflets with the symbol of a gun which he claimed symbolized not an armed revolt but ''our determination to fight corruption and the abuses of power.''

Candidates have also spent large amounts of money to entertain crowds at campaign rallies, although voters in rural areas traditionally vote on the basis of a clan rather than a political party system.

If the NDP wins a majority, as everybody believes it will, Mubarak can claim the vote served as a vindication of his wise handling of the gulf standoff.

If the NDP loses its edge, Mubarak can blame that on the economic hardships that Egypt has suffered as a result of Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

What the vote won't immediately show is whether the outlawed Islamic Brotherhood is gaining popularity in a country that spearheaded Arab Nasserite socialism for four decades.

The Brotherhood, like the atheist and therefore alien Egyptian Communist Party has never been able to legally field candidates in any election but rather has relied on alliances with other legal parties to make its mark.

The Islamic Brotherhood has tried to make its mark by issuing statements accusing the authorities of rigging the elections, and capitalizing on the lack of adequate social welfare and health care for Egypt's poor.

Official figures are vague, but economists estimate almost a quarter of the working population is unemployed or underemployed at a time when inflation is hovering around the 25 percent mark.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) UPI - The stock market closed mixed Wednesday in very dull trading as the blue chips gave up ground when oil prices staged a recovery late in the day.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 10.64 Tuesday, lost 8.66 to close at 2535.15.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.04 to 173.91 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 0.15 to 317.95. The price of an average share added 1 cent. Secondary markets finished higher.

Advances led declines 841-654 among the 1,995 NYSE issues traded. Big Board volume totaled 145,490,000 shares, down slightly from 147,590,000 traded Tuesday.

Stocks opened mixed, drifted on either side of Tuesday's closing levels and then extended their advance before turning mixed in late trading. The gains came against a backdrop of lower oil prices. Oil opened slightly lower, with January crude down 21 cents at $32.65 a barrel and then fell further. At midday, oil was down 61 cents at $32.25.

But by afternoon, oil had turned higher, wiping out the Dow's gains. January crude oil closed up 42 cents to $33.28 a barrel. Except for the midday advance and the late dip, however, the Dow spent the session hovering right around Tuesday's closing levels.

"It was really a nothing day," said Dennis Jarrett, chief market strategist at Kidder, Peabody & Co. "The Dow seemed to have more negative bias than the overall market, though. The (broad market's) advance-decline ratio came up nicely on the positive side."

As for factors that did not affect trading, Jarrett mentioned Treasury bonds, which were a notch lower on the day, as well as news of revised 1.7 percent third-quarter growth in gross national product and the testimony of Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan before the House Banking Committee.

Greenspan rejected the notion the Fed should aggressively ease monetary policy under the current circumstances. Jarrett said many investors expect lower rates, but not a dramatic drop - basically in line with Greenspan's comments.

"People are kind of bobbing and weaving, waiting for the purchasing managers' report Monday and the job statistics a week from Friday," said Jarrett. "There just wasn't a lot of activity that was too dramatic in any direction."

On the trading floor, C&S Sovran was the most active issue, up 1/4 to 17 1/8. The Limited followed, up 1/8 to 15. Texas Instruments was third, up one to 31 7/8. General Motors was also active, up 3/8 to 37 3/4.

Waste Management was heavily traded as well, up 3/4 to 32 5/8, after having slipped Tuesday in active trading amid news that one of the company's units had been awarded a contract by Hong Kong to build and operate a chemical waste facility there.

Among the blue chips, AT&T lost 3/8 to 31 7/8, IBM eased 1 1/8 to 112 3/8, and Coca-Cola lost 5/8 to 45 1/2, but McDonald's rose 3/8 to 29 1/8.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 182,371,290 shares, little changed from the 181,236,470 traded in the previous session.

Prices rose in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index gained 1.97 to close at 298.97. Advances led declines 308-244 among the 799 issues traded. The price of an average share rose seven cents. Composite volume totaled 14,731,320 shares vs. 15,553,000 traded Tuesday. Fruit of the Loom led the Amex issues, up 1/2 to 8 1/4.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index rose 1.01 to close at 355.06.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - Temperatures will be colder than normal this winter east of the Mississippi River but slightly warmer than average in the Plains states west to the Pacific Coast, the National Weather Service reported Wednesday.

In its annual 90-day forecast for December through February, the weather service said the Southern Appalachian states can expect the greatest probability of colder weather, while the Northwest and the southeastern gulf region - particularly southern Georgia and northern Florida - will likely see higher than normal levels of precipitation.

The California coast, like parts of Florida that have experienced dry conditions during the past four years, can expect only slightly higher levels of precipitation than normal - but far from what would be needed to erase the negative effects of the drought.

However, the "odds," as scientists put it, are pretty good that below-normal precipitation will fall in the interior of Southern California, Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Kansas.

The annual forecast is far different from conditions last winter, which by comparison was considerably milder than normal in January and Feburary after acolder-than-normal December.

"This forecast represents a shift in direction," said Robert Livezey, a climate scientist with the weather service who correctly predicted last year's winter forecast.

Livezey attributed the colder temperatures expected in the East to the onset of a so-called "warm event" - an increase in water temperature in the Pacific Ocean. Warmer ocean water "exaggerates" the jet steam responsible for weather conditions by pushing the air mass further to the north and east. That, in turn, draws colder Arctic air south.

Consequently, people who live in the Great Lakes states and mid-Atlantic region will feel more than a nip in the air. But, Livezey said, schoolchildren in eastern states shouldn't necessarily expect more snow days this winter: "In terms of precipitation, things are a bit more subtely complicated, as they usually are."

Livezey added that his interpretation of a complicated mathematical formula suggests that snowfall in the East will amount to slightly more than the norm. How much higher? "At this point, it's really beyond the state of the art to make a seasonwide snow forecast," he said.

Livezey was equally noncommittal when asked whether a colder winter would bring an increase in fuel prices, which are already at record levels due to the Persian Gulf crisis.

The Department of Energy said Wednesday that Americans can expect to pay up to 46 cents more per gallon for heating oil if world oil prices continue to fetch $35 a barrel and there is severe winter cold.

New England, which is already experiencing a recession, could be particularly hard hit because it imports over 70 percent of its heating oil, more than any region in the nation. Livezey said the weather service's overall accuracy in long-term forecasts is roughly 60 percent.

MIAMI (NOV. 28) UPI - A Colorado brokerage firm Wednesday took control of three Stuart-James Co. offices in Florida and was promptly ordered to cease operations by state regulators.

The state's Office of the Comptroller sent a letter Wednesday afternoon to Chatfield Dean & Co. of Englewood, Colo., informing the company that the action was illegal, said Terence McElroy, a spokesman for the comptroller. "We have notified them to immediately cease that operation," he said.

Earlier in the day, Chatfield Dean announced it had assumed control of the troubled Stuart-James brokerage, including its offices in Tampa, Clearwater and Boca Raton.

Stuart-James, once ranked as one of the nation's leading dealers of low-priced - and often speculative - "penny" stocks, has been under pressure from state and federal regulators since last year for questionable business practices. The firm said last week it would cease selling securities by the end of the year.

Chatfield Dean, licensed to sell stocks in Florida from its out-of-state offices, informed state regulators it would seek permission to operate the three Stuart-James offices in Florida.

However, regulators told Chatfield Dean late Tuesday they were inclined to deny that application because of the firm's problems elsewhere, McElroy said. "They apparently attempted an end-run around us," he said. Chatfield Dean announced Wednesday it had assumed control of Stuart James under a management agreement that eliminated the need for state approval.

"We have been advised that application to the Florida Comptroller's Office is not needed when one broker-dealer takes over another," said Chatfield Dean's president, Sandford D. Greenberg, in a statement. But McElroy said state regulators believe otherwise.

"Under normal circumstances, that is correct. Under the particular circumstances that govern this case, it is not," he said. "The rule is that a company in good standing can acquire a company such as Stuart-James that is going out of business. But they need to be in good standing."

Florida regulators asked Chatfield Dean Oct. 12 to voluntarily surrender its license to operate in Florida, McElroy said. "Because of the regulatory and disciplinary problems they have had in other states, we are asking them to voluntarily surrender their license to operate in Florida," he said.

McElroy said state regulators could take emergency action to revoke the licenses of both firms if Chatfield Dean ignores the state's warning.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - Are the economic sanctions beginning to bite in Iraq? From evidence gathered by the State Department and other agencies, the answer is apparently yes.

But are the sanctions biting enough to begin to achieve their goal of changing the behavior of President Saddam Hussein? The answer is apparently no. And in fact, Saddam may be using them achieve a kind of Battle of Britain mentality, lining up popular support for his defiant stand against the outside world.

With over 100 nations taking part in the embargo, there is remarkably little leakage, according to the State Department's assessment.

The export of Iraqi oil has been virtually cut off, depriving Iraq of its main source of income. Its overseas hard currency assets were frozen in August.

The Department of Defense reports that the naval interception force has challenged thousands of ships and boarded several hundred others, turning a handful of vessels away from ports.

''We know that 3 1/2 months after sanctions were imposed, they are beginning to have an impact on Iraq in various specific areas,'' said State Department spokesman Richard Boucher. ''For example, tires are in short supply, and shortages of raw materials, spare parts, lubricants and chemicals are hampering industrial operations.''

Boucher added a big ''but'' to that assessment: ''We have no assurance, however, when the embargo will achieve the objectives of the international community. Saddam Hussein has not given any indication that he is concerned about the hardships faced by his people or his country's dismal economic prospects.

''We know he will make sure that his army and the ruling elite are the last to be affected. Saddam still seems to believe he can play for time.''

The evidence from inside Iraq, as reported by Iraqi newspapers and Western visitors, is that there are spotty shortages, huge price increases on some food, but nobody seems to be starving. The Iraqi Parliament acknowledged that food hoarding is a problem by passing a draconian law that punishes food hoarding by death.

According to an Iraqi newspaper, the country is using corn - or maize as it is known in Europe and the Middle East - as a food for humans for the first time. Previously, it had been used only as fodder for animals.

The minister of health has told Iraqi pharmacies to ''promote the circulation and processing of domestically grown medical herbs'' as a substitute for the imported medicines that are no longer available.

Wheat flour for bread, the main staple in the Iraqi diet, appears to be a continuing problem. Barley, also previously used only to feed animals, is now being mixed with wheat.

The price of a sack of wheat has skyrocketed to more than 100 times its pre-embargo price, according to newspaper reports. Most bakeries in Baghdad have closed down, according to the reports, because housewives prefer to take their rations in flour, rather than loaves of bread.

Food ration cards were introduced almost immediately after the economic embargo started, but only now are they beginning to be used for some supplies, including rice, sugar and tea.

Iraqi mothers are being encouraged to breastfeed their infants, partly as a disease-prevention measure and partly to conserve supplies of dairy products.

The trade ministry acknowledged that some canned goods are in short supply.

The country's regulations, however, guarantee that the armed services will be the last to suffer. The regulations say that each soldier is entitled to 120 percent more flour, 160 percent more rice, 20 percent more tea and 342 percent more legumes than civilians.

Nevertheless, reports from deserting soldiers suggest that those extra rations are not reaching the troops in the field. Some Iraqi troops are reported to be getting only one meal a day in some sectors.

LOS ANGELES (NOV. 28) UPI - The U.S. Justice Department Wednesday joined a federal lawsuit alleging a Teledyne subsidiary overcharged the government by tens of millions of dollars on defense subcontracts in the 1980s.

The suit, unsealed Wednesday in U.S. District Court, claims Teledyne Systems, which manufactures electronic components for military aircraft and satellites, was filed in May 1989 by a former Teledyne Systems employee under the federal False Claims Act.

The ''whistleblower'' suit, alleging overcharging by the Northridge- based subsidiary by as much as 40 percent on its contracts, prompted a government investigation that led to the Justice Department's decision to become a plaintiff.

''The government will later file its own complaint, but in joining the lawsuit it agrees generally with the whistleblower allegations of how Teledyne has defrauded the United States,'' a U.S. Attorney's Office spokeswoman in Los Angeles said Wednesday.

Teledyne Systems is also reportedly the target of a criminal probe by the government.

Leon Dayan, an attorney for the former Teledyne Systems employee who brought the suit, Klaus Kirchoff, said the government was overcharged ''tens of millions of dollars per year.''

Kirchoff's lawyers said it was unclear exactly how much the government was overcharged between 1981 and 1989, but one noted that ''Teledyne did about $300 million worth of government contracts and subcontracts (annually).''

''The (inflated) markups ranged from 10 to 40 percent throughout most of the 1980s,'' one of the lawyers, Mary Louise Cohen, said. ''That means (the fraud involved) at least $30 million a year.''

Since 1981, the U.S. government ''has spent well over $1 billion to acquire the products and services of Teledyne Systems,'' the suit said.

Teledyne Systems manufactures components that include ''on-board computers and ground-station test equipment and related products and services for use in military aircraft, helicopters and satellites,'' the suit said.

Kirchoff was a senior pricing specialist at Teledyne Systems for four months in 1988 and left the company because he disagreed with its alleged practices of inflating prices on electronic components which the government could only purchase from Teledyne, his attorneys said.

In March, Teledyne pleaded guilty to fraud charges filed against another subsidiary, Teledyne Electronics, and agreed to pay fines and damages amounting to as much as $8.4 million in connection with a separate investigation involving corruption in military procurement.

In April, two Teledyne executives were convicted of criminal conspiracy and fraud in that case while a third was acquitted.

Teledyne, based in Los Angeles, is the nation's 36th largest defense contractor. In fiscal 1988, its sales to the Pentagon were $470 million.

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) UPI - Average yields for money-market mutual funds were lower over the latest reporting week, as were deposit and lending rates at savings and loan institutions, financial reporting organizations said Wednesday.

The Donoghue Organization, of Holliston, Mass., said average seven- day simple yields were 7.27 percent, down from 7.35 percent the previous week, and 30-day simple yields were at 7.34 percent, down from 7.38 percent.

The average maturity of fund portfolios fell to 50 days from 51 days.

Donoghue noted that total assets of the 689 taxable and tax-free money-market mutual funds it tracks rose above the $500 billion mark for the first time since such investment funds emerged in 1972. They totaled $501.09 billion vs. $499.40 billion a week earlier, Donoghue said.

The Bank Rate Monitor in North Palm Beach, Fla., gave average rates as follows: money-market deposit accounts, 5.83 percent, down from 5.84 percent; Super-Now accounts, 4.95 percent, down from 4.96 percent; six- month certificates of deposit, 7.33 percent, off from 7.36 percent; 1- year CDs, 7.39 percent, off from 7.43 percent; 2 1/2-year CDs, 7.50 percent, down from 7.53 percent; and five-year CDs, 7.72 percent, down from 7.75 percent.

The average rate for a one-year, adjustable-rate mortgage was 8.03 percent, down from 8.04 percent the previous week.

The average rate on a 15-year, fixed-rate mortgage fell in the latest week to 9.48 percent from 9.53 percent. The average rate for a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage was off to 9.79 percent from 9.84 percent.

The average rate for a four-year automobile loan was at 12.25 percent, up from 12.23 percent.

SACRAMENTO (NOV. 28) UPI - Most assault weapon owners in California have so far ignored a landmark state law requiring that they register their firearms by Jan. 1, state officials said Wednesday.

Fewer than 3 percent of the estimated 200,000 to 300,000 assault weapons in the state have been registered since California became the first state in the nation to ban sales of the military style guns last January.

Only 5,150 of the assault weapons had been registered as of last Friday, Bob Drake, chief of the state Bureau of Justice Information Services, said.

The National Rifle Association said gun owners are refusing to register their assault weapons as an act of civil disobedience to protest the law.

''I think that most people believe the law is an unconstitutional infringment on their rights and is of no merit and they are simply not going to pay any attention to it,'' said Richard Gardiner, the NRA's director of state and local affairs.

The unexpectedly low compliance with the law means there will be thousands of illegal weapons in California after New Year's Day. Police in Los Angeles and San Francisco said they would not set up special task forces to hunt for unregistered assault weapons.

''I don't foresee roving bands of police officers barging into people's homes looking for assault weapons,'' San Francisco police spokesman Sgt. Jerry Senkir said. ''We will certainly take advantage of the law if we find these assault weapons out on the street.''

Gun control advocates blamed the NRA for encouraging gun owners to ignore the law.

''In their magazines, they print a lot of letters to the editor saying why people won't register their guns,'' said Luis Tolley, Western director of Handgun Control Inc. ''They've indirectly encouraged people not to register their weapons and helped create civil disobedience.''

But Gardiner said the NRA ''would never advise anyone to violate the law.''

''We'll tell them what the law says and what the penalties are for not complying with it. It's up to each individual to make their own decision,'' he said.

The state banned the sale of 56 different types of semiautomatic assault weapons last year after Patrick Purdy sprayed a Stockton schoolyard with more than 100 rounds from an assault rifle in January 1989, killing five children and wounding 29 others and a teacher before committing suicide.

People who owned the guns before June 1, 1989, may keep them legally if they register them with the state Department of Justice by Jan. 1, 1991. People who bought the guns after the deadline are allowed to keep them only if they obtain special permits similar to those issued for machine guns.

Assault weapon owners who fail to register their guns by New Year's Day face an automatic $350 fine. Subsequent violations may be prosecuted as a misdemeanor or a felony, and include jail terms.

Drake said the law was effective even though few gun owners are registering their assault weapons.

''It stopped the sale of them. There are no more that are being legally sold '' Drake said.

Tolley said gun owners who refuse to register their assault weapons will make it difficult for police to determine who is supplying the guns to criminals.

''If you find someone with five of these, you don't know if he is a collecter or a black marketeer. You have to treat him like a criminal because you can no longer distinguish between the two,'' Tolley said.

LOS ANGELES (NOV. 28) UPI - The downturn in the nation's real estate market will hit hardest in the commercial sector, which is severely overbuilt, an industry consultant predicted Wednesday.

''The problem is that you have an oversupply in a liquidating marketplace,'' said David A. Eisner, a partner in the real estate group of the accounting firm Price Waterhouse, in a speech to about 200 executives at the University Club of Los Angeles.

The specter of empty office buildings and unleased shopping malls has been worsened by the growing problem of obtaining financing, Eisner said. He estimated that the volume of commercial real estate lending this year has declined by 50 percent from last year.

''The days of thinly capitalized deals are over,'' Eisner said. ''Money does exist for deals, but the key is that lenders don't want any risk. So deals are going to have to make economic sense.''

Real estate developer John Miller, a partner with Los Angeles-based Lincoln Property Co., said the industry is paying the price for its excesses during the 1980s.

''We had a big party in the 1980s. Now we're going through a lot of sobriety '' Miller said, explaining that it has become almost impossible to get a loan unless a project is 100 percent rented.

''Very few banks admit that they're in the real estate business any more,'' Miller told the audience. ''We are in for a long downsizing of the commercial real estate business for the next four or five years.''

Over this time, Miller said, the size of commercial business will probably be cut in half. ''A lot of people who built buildings for a living are going to have to find a new job,'' he said.

Eisner, who was more optimistic than Miller, said the slump will be exacerbated by a sharp decline in Japanese investment and the failure of major pension funds to make major buys.

All this tightening will probably force a reduction in the number of players in commercial real estate, Eisner predicted, but the picture will improve once vacancy rates begin to fall.

''These problems can be worked through,'' Eisner said. ''Money is not a problemlike it was in 1981, when interest rates were 21 percent.''

Eisner also said that real estate problems will be less severe in Arizona and California because of the region's strong population growth, its reliance on non-traditional businesses and its booming Pacific Rim trade.

Eisner predicted that housing, which has been clobbered partly because of a soft California market that has seen new residential permits fall by 50 percent over the last year, will rebound soon.

''The current cycle is no different from any other down cycle,'' Eisner said.

California's market, which represents between 15 percent and 20 percent of housing sales, currently has over a year's supply of resale homes on the block

- more than double the amount a year ago.

SACRAMENTO, CA (NOV. 28) UPI - The governor of the nation's richest state ordered the Legislature Wednesday to meet in a special session to consider $1 billion in proposed emergency spending cuts and transfers.

Gov. George Deukmejian directed lawmakers to return to Sacramento on Monday and scheduled a meeting with leaders of both parties in hopes of persuading them to back his austerity plan.

State tax collections have unexpectedly dropped $408 million below projections just four months into the current fiscal year, and a $4.3 billion budget shortfall is forecast for the following year.

Deukmejian said the state could deplete its reserves and face a deficit in the 1990-91 budget and lose its cherished triple-A bond rating - forcing the state to pay higher interest rates - if the Legislature does not quickly implement his proposal.

''We have already had expressions of concern from the bond rating houses on Wall Street with respect to the fiscal situation. The longer that we delay taking constructive action, the more danger there is that they might indeed lower bond ratings,'' Deukmejian said at a Capitol news conference.

The Democrat-controlled Legislature already was scheduled to return to the Capitol Monday to be sworn in and elect party leaders. However, many lawmakers prefer to wait until GOP Gov.-elect Pete Wilson takes office Jan. 7 to hammer out a budget plan instead of negotiating a controversial and politically damaging solution with a lame duck governor.

Deukmejian has no authority to keep lawmakers in Sacramento if they decide they don't want to take action during the special session, an Assembly rules expert said.

OTTAWA (NOV. 28) UPI - A United Nations' resolution ordering Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait will authorize the use of force in the Persian Gulf but will probably not set a timetable for military action, External Affairs Minister Joe Clark said Thursday.

The U.S.-sponsored resolution is still being discussed by the 15 countries on the Security Council and will be voted on Thursday.

''What will likely be there is the authority to enforce the resolution. That authority will not vest immediately ... but sometime in January,'' Clark told reporters outside Parliament.

Clark said the resolution would contain no ultimatums because they would be ''counter-productive,'' but contained language ''designed explicity to provide a pause of good will in which (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein can consider his options.''

Sanctions alone have not forced Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait, Clark said, adding the world must face the fact that Hussein places greater importance on keeping its territorial gains than in allowing its citizens to resume normal life.

Clark said the resolution would likely not contain specific warnings of what would happen at the end of the pause, but would be a clear message the world is serious about enforcing all Security Council resolutions and would have the authority and means to do so.

The minister's comments, which came during a debate by politicians on the Persian Gulf crisis and whether Canada should support force against Iraq, indicated the Security Council may be leaning toward a softened version of earlier resolution drafts.

The United States reportedly wants the resolution to give Iraq one final opportunity to pull out of Kuwait by mid-January or face war.

But Clark told Parliament that such deadlines, implying an ultimatum, ''could be counterproductive and artificial. That is not what is proposed,'' he said.

Clark said Hussein does not understand the size of the problem he created by invading Kuwait Aug. 2.

''He thinks the world is bluffing. He does not seem to understand the strength of resolve to see justice done,'' Clark said.

Praising the response of a ''renewed'' United Nations to the crisis, Clark said the institution has been ''unbending in its respect for international order.''

He suggested one consequence would be a ''new sense of urgency'' in resolving other problems in the Middle East and gulf region.

Clark also said gulf area countries have indicated there would be no reprisals against Iraq if Hussein withdraws from Kuwait. ''There is a willingness in the region to live with Iraq, warily, to be sure.''

NEW YORK (NOV. 28) UPI - The U.S. attorney's office in Brooklyn has been given the green light to prosecute reputed mob boss John Gotti in the killing of Paul Castellano, a broadcast report said Wednesday.

WNBC-TV reported that Attorney General Dick Thornburgh was persuaded by arguments that Gotti hatched the scheme to kill Castellano from his hangout in Ozone Park, Queens, an area under the jurisdiction of the Brooklyn U.S. attorney's office.

Castellano, the reputed head of the Gambino crime family, was shot to death in December 1985 outside a midtown Manhattan restaurant.

Prosecutors believe Gotti ascended to the Gambino family throne after Castellano's death.

Federal prosecutors in Manhattan, where the killing took place, had reportedly been battling with the U.S. attorney's office in Brooklyn over who would handle the high-profile case, which would represent the third attempt to prosecute the ''teflon don'' for his alleged mob activities since 1986.

The station also reported that a convicted mobster, Salvatore Reale, is cooperating with federal prosecutors in the case.

Reale, who allegedly ran rackets for Gotti at Kennedy International Airport, was sentenced in May to eight years in prison for violating his probation for trying to enter Mexico with $4 million in cash.

At the time of his arrest in Mexico, Reale, a former private investigator, had been on probation on extortion charges stemming from the airport rackets.

A tape recording that is part of the evidence ammassed against Gotti has the reputed don saying of Reale, ''That bum ... he never forgot he's half a cop.''

Gotti's lawyer, Bruce Cutler, seemed unfazed by the prospect of a new indictment against his client.

''We're ready for these false charges we've been ready for quite some time,'' he said.

WNBC reported Gotti could be indicted as early as Christmas, and said Brooklyn U.S. Attorney Andrew Maloney would personally handle the case.

SOUTH BEND, IN (NOV. 28) UPI - Raghib Ismail, a multi-purpose player who sparked Notre Dame's offense, received the Walter Camp Award Wednesday as college football's player of the year.

Ismail, nicknamed ''Rocket'' for his speed, was college football's most dangerous player as a flanker, kick returner and running back. The Wilkes-Barre, Pa., resident rushed for 535 yards and three touchdowns on 67 carries. He also had 32 catches for 699 yards and two touchdowns, 151 yards on 10 punt returns, and 328 kickoff return yards.

Virginia quarterback Sean Moore finished second with Brigham Young quarterback Ty Detmer third and Colorado rusher Eric Bieniemy fourth in voting by major college football coaches and sports information directors.

The Walter Camp Football Foundation presents the award, started in 1967, and named for Yale's first football coach.

''It's quite a shock,'' Ismail, a junior, said. ''I really never thought I would be considered for such a prestigous award. This is another instrument to keep me trying to better myself and achieve my goals.''

The only two other Irish players to win the award were tight end Ken MacAfee in 1977 and receiver Tim Brown, who earned the Camp and Heisman Trophy awards in 1987. This year's Heisman, voted upon by sports writers, will be presented Saturday by the Downtown Athletic Club in New York.

Winning the Camp is no guarantee of Heisman success, even for a player like Ismail, whose school has produced seven previous Heisman winners. Indiana rusher Anthony Thompson won last year's Walter Camp Award, but Houston quarterback Andre Ware won the Heisman.

''There's nothing I can do about what's going to happen Saturday,'' Ismail said. ''The best man will win. That will be that. I've talked to Coach (Lou) Holtz and Tim Brown and they said you can't do anything but what you've done on the field. I know they have a great tradition here. Maybe I can be included in that category. At least I've had fun being considered.''

The announcement came four days after sixth-ranked Notre Dame ended the regular season by beating Southern California. The Irish, 9-2, are set to face top-ranked Colorado in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day. The only Irish losses came in games where Ismail was sidelined most of the time by a thigh bruise.

''I'm thrilled and excited for Rocket, but I was not surprised,'' Holtz said. ''A player like him comes along not once a year but maybe once a decade. There are a lot of great players I've seen but none with a greater impact than Rocket.''

Ismail, who plans to remain at Notre Dame for his senior season instead of jumping to the NFL, first learned of the honor from a telephone answering machine message by John Heisler, Notre Dame's sports information director.

''He told me he had something important to tell me about the Walter Camp award '' Ismail said. ''I thought maybe I had come in in the top three. When I found out, I was like, 'wow.'''

Ismail thanked his teammates, his brother Quadry who plays football at Syracuse and his mother, whose advice helped her shy 21-year-old son cope with the added attention and pressure.

''An award such as this cannot be won by one man,'' Ismail said. ''People always see the glamour side. At times I felt overburdened and called my mother and brother for advice. Knowing they were behind me helped keep me going. My mother said (attention) comes with the territory and they wouldn't give me the atention if I didn't deserve it.

''She said I just should be polite and be myself and everything will turn out for the best.''

SEATTLE (NOV. 28) UPI - So long, Spuds Mackenzie. Bye-bye beer-sipping bathing beauties.

If a proposal debated Wednesday before the Washington State Liquor Control Board is adopted, advertising by major alcohol distributors could become a lot tamer in the state.

Washington doctors are seeking restrictions on the content of liquor ads on grounds the alcohol promotion contributes to drunken driving and overconsumption by young people.

Beer advertisers say the proposed content restrictions represent an unconstitutional infringement of the their First Amendment rights to free speech.

Both sides came to a public hearing called by the Liquor Control Board armed with videocassettes, posters, and clippings of beer advertisements. Dozens of lawyers, expert witnesses, and industry executives flew in from around the country.

The three-member Liquor Control Board, which normally labors in obscurity, found itself the center of attention in a controversy with national implications.

At the urging of the Washington State Medical Association, lawyers with the Liquor Control Board drafted rules to curb alcohol advertising aimed at youth.

If the rules are adopted, it would be illegal to depict ''as amusing, either overconsumption or a state of intoxication.'' Also off-limits would be the use of characters associated with children and relating sexual prowess or professional achievement to alcohol assumption.

The proposed penalty for violation of the advertising restrictions is an up-to-one-year ban on distribution in the state of the offending company's products.

The medical association says Washington would be the first state in the union to restrict the content of alcohol advertising if the proposed rules are adopted and enforced.

Members of the liquor board gave no indication how they felt about the new restrictions. Board Chairwoman Paula O'Connor said a decision would be announced in January.

Representatives of beer companies attacked the proposed rules, saying there was no credible research to prove a link between advertising and underage drinking.

''Beer advertising does not cause alcohol abuse any more than automobile advertising causes speeding or soft drink advertising causes tooth decay,'' said Stephen Burrows, Anheuser-Bush vice president for consumer awareness and education.

Supporters of the restrictions on alcohol ads maintained that a review of beer ads clearly showed the companies were targeting young people. Dr. Abraham Bergman, director of pediatrics at Seattle's Harborview Medical Center, said beer ads manipulate themes that resonate with youth.

He cited frequent depictions of scantily clad women suggesting heightened sexual prowess. Bergman said the use of throbbing rock beats in the background of many television ads also shows the advertisers are aiming at young people. He said people between 15 and 30 years old are most apt to die in alcohol-related accidents and termed ''immoral'' advertisers targeting that group.

Robert Shear, a North Carolinan who consults on alcohol and drug problems, said the sorts of promotions beer companies run among college- age groups ''amounts to little more than criminal solicitations.''

But Dick Wiley, a former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission speaking on behalf of the American Advertising Federation, called the rules ''censorship'' and said they would in effect ban all alcohol advertising.

Americans have relied on ''more speech, not less as the best way to arrive at the truth,'' Wiley said. He said the advertising industry had done that with campaigns such as Budweiser's ''Know When to Say When'' and Miller's ''Think When You Drink.''

The Washington State Medical Association maintains it is on solid legal ground advocating alcohol advertising restrictions. Bergman said the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled commercial advertising is not the same as protected individual free speech. He also noted that under the 21st Amendment to the Constitution which repealed Prohibition, ''states have the right to control all aspects of alcohol commerce.''

FOZ DO IGUACU, Brazil (NOV. 28) UPI - An agreement Wednesday between Argentina and Brazil to join a regional nuclear non-proliferation treaty is loaded with preconditions based more on business than war.

And though Latin diplomats are optimistic, the agreement must be approved by the International Atomic Energy Commission, which is still far from certain.

Argentina and Brazil, the only two Latin American nations with enough nuclear technology to build an atomic bomb, have long unnerved the United States and some European nations by refusing to sign the International Nuclear Non-Proloferation Treaty that requires regular inspections of nuclear facilities by the IAEC in Vienna.

Most facilities in Argentina are already open to international inspection but a plant that produces enriched uranium, which can be used to make atomic weapons, is closed to international engineers.

Now Brazilian President Fernando Collor de Mello and Argentine President Carlos Menem have agreed to allow inspections of all nuclear facilities and join a regional non-proliferation treaty. But the Latin presidents have one condition: that they do the inspections: Brazil would inspect Argentine plants and other nuclear installations and Argentina would watch the Brazilian atomic program.

The Argentine foreign minister said international nuclear safeguarding groups will agree to the revisions.

Both Hans Blix, director of the IAEC, and Stempel Paris, head of the commission that governs the regional non-proliferation treaty, attended Wednesday's signing in Brazil.

According to Argentine Foreign Minister Domingo Cavallo, both men told President Menem and Collor that it is likely the accords, and the conditions demanded by the two South American countries, will be approved by their organizations.

The minister said the Argentine government is ''totally decided and far along the road'' to ratifying the Tlatelolco Treaty, the regional nuclear non-proliferation agreement, with the condition of mutual inspections.

Brazil has already ratified the treaty but refuses to enforce its conditions unless Argentina does the same.

But the precedents for reciprocal inspections could give some international experts second thoughts.

A 1985 agreement to bilateral nuclear inspections by Brazil and Argentina signed at the jungle port of Foz do Iguacu was not as rigorous as many may have hoped.

For example, Argentine inspections in Brazil, limited to certain facilities, turned up no evidence of a secret Air Force base well in the Brazilian Amazon jungle that Collor recently admitted was for testing an atomic bomb.

Perhaps in part because of those revelations, Collor's remarks at the signing were decidely more definite about enforcing the regional nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

''We have nothing to hide,'' Collor told a news conference Wednesday.

The caution shown in remarks by Menem highlighted the tension between international demands to safeguard nuclear technology and the right of developing countries to investigate, sell and safeguard home-grown technology.

''We are searching for mechanisms which, on the one hand, put in evidence that our nuclear programs are for exlusively peaceful ends, and at the same time respect industrial property and other technological advances,'' Menem told news media.

Argentina is one of the few developing countries with a nuclear program advanced enough to sell atomic technology to other developing and underdeveloped countries, a multi-billion dollar industry dominated by European countries and the United States.

NORTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (NOV. 29) UPI - Despite laying off nearly 600 employees this fall, the Electric Boat division of General Dynamics Corp. has put out a call for 500 new trade workers at its Quonset Point shipyard.

Richard A. Boudreau, a spokesman for the shipyard, said Monday that the jobs will pay the most experienced workers more than $12 an hour. There are openings for pipefitters, sheet metal workers, machinists and shipfitters.

Boudreau said there is no inconsistency between the layoffs this fall and the hiring plans because the layoffs were an attempt to streamline management. Skilled trade workers will always be needed to fulfill contracts, he said.

At the time EB announced the layoffs, it also said it expected to hire 200 more skilled trade workers. Boudreau said it turned out that Electric Boat needed more trade workers than it initially thought.

Most of the layoffs this fall occurred at EB headquarters in Groton, Conn. About 100 were at Quonset Point, where 4,300 people work.

Electric Boat makes submarines for the Navy. It makes the sub hulls in Rhode Island.

Parent General Dynamics is a St. Louis-based aerospace and defense contractor.

NORFOLK, Va. (NOV. 28) UPI - Richard Hirschfeld, a lawyer who is a close associate of former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali, was indicted Wednesday on federal tax and conspiracy charges.

The indictment, filed in U.S. District Court, follows an investigation involving the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service. If convicted on all counts Hirschfeld could be sentenced up to 16 years in prison and fined $700,000.

Hirschfeld, who was previously banned for life from practicing before the Securities and Exchange Commission, declined to comment when reached at his office late Wednesday.

Hirschfeld is a high-profile attorney with a variety of business interests who has accompanied Ali during appearances on Capitol Hill and trips to the Middle East.

The former heavyweight champion, who has retained Hirschfeld in his business dealings, shares a horse farm with the attorney outside Charlottesville, where Hirschfeld lives.

Hirschfeld also has gained attention because he was called to testify in 1988 before Congress about secretly taped talks he had with deposed Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos in 1987.

The indictment returned by a federal grand jury charges Hirschfeld with conspiracy to defraud the IRS through a scheme to create a phony lawsuit settlement in order to generate a false deduction of $2.1 million.

The second count charges Hirschfeld with conspiring to defraud the SEC through a public offering of Robotronix Corp. stock. Robotronix, an electronic mail firm, was incorporated in February 1983 in Virginia.

The third and fourth counts allege Hirschfeld filed false tax returns in 1984 and 1983. The charges allege he underreported income and made false deductions.

The charges, according to prosecutors, stem from an alleged conspiracy that began in November 1983. A fraudulent tax deduction of about $2.1 million was allegedly created for Hirschfeld by using overvalued stock in a settlement of a lawsuit filed against him.

Hirschfeld allegedly worked out the false deduction in connection with a lawsuit filed by Robert Chastain in Utah. The indictment states Chastain is a resident of Utah and Virginia.

The indictment also covers a series of complicated stock deals linked to several firms, in which Hirschfeld is alleged to have tried to conceal the money involved.

Hirschfeld has generated controversy in his dealings with Ali. Some news organizations have hinted that he may have imitated Ali over the phone to help him with various transactions.

Ali suffers from Parkinson's syndrome, which slurs his speech. Hirschfeld has strongly denied imitating Ali.

LOS ANGELES (NOV. 28) UPI - Giancarlo Parretti, fresh from his successful acquisition of the MGM/UA studio, may make a last-minute effort to outbid Matsushita Electric Industrial's $6.6 billion offer for MCA Inc., sources said Wednesday.

Spokesmen for the Italian financier and MCA declined to comment on a possible competing bid, but a knowledgeable source confirmed that Parretti has approached MCA with an expression of interest.

However, an entertainment analyst said Wednesday that Parretti is a long shot at best to top Matsushita's bid, which consists of $6.13 billion in cash and about $500 million in stock for MCA's WWOR-TV station.

''I don't think that this can be taken seriously as an offer from an investor's point of view,'' said Jeff Logsdon of Seidler Amdec Securities in Los Angeles. ''All you have so far is a possible expression of interest.''

Matsushita's buyout offer was accepted by MCA on Monday after more than two months of negotiations, but some shareholders were disappointed the price was not higher than the final $66-a-share cash bid. Some analysts had initially expected the price couldreach as high as $90.

No competing bids for MCA - the entertainment giant that was for years eyed by Wall Street as a takeover target - have been made since it announced in late September that it was considering a buyout.

But Parretti may have a difficult time convincing the MCA board of directors that he can come up with more than $6.6 billion. He has been widely viewed as an investor who was just barely able to pull off the $1.36 billion MGM/UA deal which was repeatedly delayed and restructured in the eight months since it was first announced.

In a recent filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Parretti said that $625 million of the MGM/UA purchase price had been financed through the sale of rights to the studio's library.

The financial community remains highly skeptical of the success of the renamed MGM-Pathe studio because the rights deals have severely restricted the company's potential cash flow.

Analysts say that MCA's management apparently believed the deal with Matsushita, the world's largest consumer electronics producer, would enable it to compete effectively at a global level with other expanded entertainment companies, such as Time Warner Inc. and Sony Corp.

MCA stock gained 12.5 cents Wednesday to $65.875 a share on the New York Stock Exchange - just under the Matsushita buyout price - on volume of slightly more than 1 million shares.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - The U.S. trade deficit in electronics narrowed in the first nine months this year as exports of U.S. electronics products surged and imports grew modestly, the Electronic Industries Association said Wednesday.

U.S. electronics exports grew 13 percent to nearly $54 billion for the first nine months of 1990 from $47.8 billion in the same period of 1989, the trade group said.

Imports of foreign electronics products in the same period reached approximately $58 billion, 2 percent higher than the $57 billion registered in the 1989 nine months.

The resulting electronics trade deficit of nearly $4 billion was down 58 percent from $9.5 billion in the first three quarters of 1989.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (NOV. 28) UPI - The Lebanese government, apparently intending to speed up the establishment of a militia-free Beirut, set next Monday as the final date for a complete army deployment in the capital.

''The cabinet decided that Monday morning will be the final date for the deployment of the army in greater Beirut,'' Information Minister Edmond Rizk said in a statement after a government session.

The announcement appeared designed to pressure Samir Geagea' Christian militia into speeding up the withdrawal of gunmen and equipment from mainly Christian east Beirut.

Moslem militia groups have already announced the disbanding of their military presence in Beirut in compliance with a Nov. 19 government deadline to eliminate militias and restore government authorities.

But Geagea's group, one of the heavily armed militia groups in Lebanon, has appeared to be slowing down the disbanding in east Beirut.

Earlier Wednesday, the Christian militia withdrew yet another ammunition-laden convoy from east Beirut and reiterated a vow to back the government peace efforts.

A statement by the Christian Lebanese Forces militia said the organization pulled 70 trucks loaded with 380 tons of ammunition and equipment from the neighborhood of Ashrafiyeh to the Kesrouwan district north of the city.

The militia has withdrawn about 1,240 tons of hardware from east Beirut, the militia statement said.

Several officials have accused Geagea of ''procrastination'' but the militia chief in a statement defended his stance.

''I pledge that the Lebanese Forces will facilitate the establishment of Greater Beirut,'' Geagea said in a statement broadcast on the Christian-operated Voice of Free Lebanon radio station.

Geagea criticized what he called token military withdrawals from Beirut by rival militia groups. ''We can pull out two military trucks and a number of jeeps as the others have done, but we are serious.''

Prime Minister Selim Hoss said in a statement that a speedy establishment of ''Greater Beirut'' was facing ''difficulties,'' but he did not elaborate.

Mohammed Baidoun, a member of the Shiite Amal militia Politburo, said he believed the Christian pullout was being slowed down because of hanging political problems.

''The Lebanese Forces is pushing to show itself as the sole representative of the Christians in Lebanon. They want a big share in the cabinet,'' Baidoun said.

The government has vowed to form a new cabinet once the militia withdrawals from Beirut were completed.

Moslem militia groups, namely Amal, the pro-Iranian Hezbollah and the Druze Progressive Socialist Party, declared that they have carried out a complete disbanding of their presence in Beirut.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - Juanita Leonard, wife of Sugar Ray Leonard, says it was outside interference from advisers that eventually led to the breakup of their 10-year marriage.

Juanita Leonard, in an interview Wednesday with WRC-TV, said people seemed to be taking advantage of her husband and it caused problems for their marriage.

''I don't think it was so much that they though they owned him, as opposed to that they saw him as a vehicle, an opportunity,'' she said.

The Leonards began divorce proceedings earlier this month. Sugar Ray Leonard, who began his professional boxing career in 1979, currently holds the World Boxing Council's super middle-weight title.

Juanita Leonard said that there were other stresses on her marriage to Leonard. She indicated there had been another woman in her husband's life, but she didn't ''think he actually wanted a divorce at that point. ''

She said Leonard tended to be stubborn and was easier to live with when he was in training for a fight.

''When Ray was in training, things were a lot easier for me because he was a different kind of person. He was in his own world. He dedicated himself,'' she said.

''He was easier to get along with. He was just a lot easier when he was in training.''

Juanita Leonard said that despite the difficulties from outside pressure on their marriage she felt ''very secure with the fact that regardless of what might have happened, or what could happen, that Ray was coming home.''

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (NOV. 28) UPI - H&R Block Inc. Wednesday reported a second-quarter loss of $2.4 million, wider than the $166,000 loss recorded in the same period a year ago.

Revenues for the quarter ended Oct. 31 rose to $166.5 million from $149.6 million in the year-earlier fiscal 1990 period.

For the latest six months, Block said it lost $7.7 million, compared to $4.4 million in the comparable period last year. Revenues reached $307.8 million from $281.8 million.

Block said its pre-tax loss in the company's worldwide tax operations widened to $20.5 million in the latest quarter from $15.8 million a year ago. Tax operations lost $45.3 million during the six months, wider than $37.3 million the previous year.

The company attributed the tax division's losses primarily to increased depreciation associated with the nationwide rollout of ''Rapid Refund,'' its electronic filing product. Additional systems development and communications costs are expected as the program is expanded during the coming tax season, according to Block.

Pre-tax earnings at CompuServe Inc., Block's computer communications, information and software subsidiary, were $11.7 milion during second quarter, up from $9.7 million a year ago.

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Henry R. Bloch said the company was pleased with improvements in investment income and earnings in most of its non-tax divisions, particularly CompuServe.

Block is evaluating options and plans at Path Management Industries Inc., which reported pre-tax losses for the quarter and six months.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 28) UPI - The case against the so-called Keating Five senators suffered a setback Wednesday when the former chief savings and loan regulator conceded that only one of the lawmakers ''did something wrong'' during a 1987 meeting central to influence-peddling allegations.

In the seventh day of hearings before the Senate ethics committee, Edwin Gray, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board from May 1983 to June 1987, singled out Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., as the sole senator attending an April 2, 1987, meeting who acted improperly.

Gray, a key witness in the case against the senators, said the other three senators present at that meeting, Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., John Glenn, D-Ohio, and John McCain, R-Ariz., acted ethically at the meeting.

The hearings are to determine whether the five senators exerted unacceptable pressure on Gray and other bank regulators to benefit indicted former S&L operator Charles Keating Jr., who contributed $1.3 million to the senators' re-election campaigns and other favorite causes.

Earlier in the day, lawyers representing DeConcini and Cranston attacked Gray's credibility, painting him as a public relations specialist mired in his own ethics problems and carrying a grudge against the senators.

Gray testified Tuesday he felt ''pressured and awkward'' at the April 2 meeting, which was held in DeConcini's office with aides excluded from attending - a step Gray said was to provide the senators ''deniability'' for improper actions.

Gray accused DeConcini of offering a deal on behalf of Keating under which the bank board would withdraw a regulation limiting risky direct investments by thrifts in exchange for having Keating's California-based Lincoln Savings and Loan, which failed in 1989, make more home loans.

Under questioning from the committee's vice chairman, Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., Gray admitted that he objected only to DeConcini's conduct at the meeting.

''As an actor, as someone who did something at the meeting, the only one who you felt did something wrong, from your point of view, was Sen. DeConcini?'' asked Rudman.

''Right,'' Gray responded.

Gray said the others would have been acting improperly if DeConcini were ''speaking for'' them at the session, but he said the other three neither embraced nor rejected DeConcini's alleged offer. Riegle was not present at the meeting.

That meeting and one held on April 9, 1987, with officials directly responsible for the Lincoln probe form the backbone of claims the five senators improperly pressed the regulators to assist Keating, who now faces criminal racketeering charges in California.

James Hamilton, DeConcini's lawyer, asked Gray whether he knew of any existing laws or Senate rules broken by DeConcini's alleged deal.

''I don't,'' said Gray, but added ''in my mind, in my heart, I know that as a basic instinct'' the offer was improper.

''This was a show of force, pure and simple,'' Gray said, on behalf of Keating described as ''a political benefactor and friend'' of the senators.

Hamilton asked why Gray, if so outraged, never reported it to the Justice Department or ethics committee.

''I didn't see anything criminal about this. You would only report to the Department of Justice if it were a criminal matter ... I didn't know there was a Senate ethics committee, with all due respect to you gentlemen.''

Gray added that ''there was a lot of (S&L) money chasing a lot of politicians'' at the time and had Congress listened to him ''we might not have this disaster'' - the collapse of the S&L industry and subsequent $500 billion taxpayer bailout.

YAKIMA, Wash. (NOV. 28) UPI - A group of Washington apple growers Wednesday filed a lawsuit against CBS Inc. and the National Resources Defense Council, charging that a ''60 Minutes'' television show segment on the chemical Alar caused devastating financial damage to the apple industry.

The suit filed in Yakima County Superior Court by 11 growers seeks a minimum of $500,000 in damages for losses stemming from the February 1989 broadcast by ''60 Minutes'' on Alar.

The broadcast highlighted a report by the NRDC which claimed that Alar, a preservative used on apples to enhance their appearance and prolong their shelf life, posed a serious cancer risk. The risk was especially high for children, the report said, because they consume so many apple products in the form of juice and sauce.

Following the broadcast, sales of apples plummeted, with growers losing $8 or more per box.

Desmond O'Rourke, an economist with Washington State University, said the direct losses to Washington apples growers were about $130 million for the 1988-89 growing season, or about 15 percent of a crop with an original estimated value of about $875 million.

He said indirect losses, including money lost to suppliers, was between $250 million and $300 million.

The plaintiffs in the suit, which also cites about 50 unnamed co- defendants, charged the NRDC report contained ''false, misleading and scientifically unreliable statements'' that resulted in a sharp drop in apple prices.

''The conduct of the defendants ... constitutes unfair or deceptive acts or practices in the conduct of any trade or commerce,'' the suit said.

The suit also claims ''60 Minutes'' producers knew the NRDC findings were controversial but decided to proceed with the broadcast.

Officials with CBS and the NRDC were not available for comment.

Grady Auvil, one of the plaintiffs and a grower who introduced the Granny Smith apple to Washington state, said CBS and the NRDC were motivated by sensationalism in producing the broadcast. He said they knew Alar was being phased out.

BROWNING, Mont. (NOV. 28) UPI - Several cars of a freight train were blown off the tracks Wednesday as a blizzard with winds gusting to 90 mph raked northern Montana, stranding snowplows and highway patrolmen in the drifting snow.

No one was hurt when several cars of the Burlington Northern freight were blown off the tracks, said Sue Grimm of the Glacier County Sheriffs Department in Cut Bank.

''Snowplows are stuck, highway patrolmen are stuck,'' she said.

There was no estimate of the number of people stranded in the storm, as the National Weather Service reported ''very large snow drifts and near-zero visibility.''

Grimm said the hardest hit area was from East Glacier to Browning on the Blackfeet Indian Reservation about 40 miles south of the Canadian border, where up to 2 feet of snowfall was reported.

''People should not venture outdoors,'' the Weather Service said in a blizzard warning.

(NOV. 28) UPI - As many as 13 of the 15 U-N Security Council members are

At the same time, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater is rejecting a report by the International Atomic Energy Agency, which said that Iraq is NOT diverting reactor fuels to nuclear weapons. Fitzwater says the agency is worng and that Baghdad will have a nuclear device within six months.

Evidence gathered by the State Department indicates that economic sanctions are beginning to take their toll on Iraq. But the government says the bite is NOT deep enough to force Saddam Hussein's troops from Kuwait. State Department spokesman Richard Boucher says the export of Iraqi oil has been cut off, depriving Iraq of its main source of income... and that there is a shortage of tires, spare parts and chemicals. But he says there's NO proof the embargo will work. As he puts it- ''the ruling elite are the last to be affected. Saddam still seems to believe he can play for time. ''

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan is blaming much of the current U-S economic slump on rising oil prices and threats of a Persian Gulf war. Greenspan told the House Banking Committee that rising oil prices are slowing economic growth and the threat of war has cast a cloud of uncertainty over consumer confidence. When asked whether the United States should fight in the Gulf to protect jobs, Greenspan replied- ''that's NOT an INappropriate view.''

The wife of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry has moved out of the house she shared with him. A spokeswoman for Effi Barry says the mayor's wife and son have ''re-located'' and that the matter is ''a very personal one.'' Observers have said that Barry's 10-week trial on drug possession charges strained the 12-year marriage, particularly as witness after witness testified about Barry's womanizing. The three-term mayor, who leaves office in January, lost his bid for an at-large seat on the City Council.

The National Weather Service forecast for winter is here... and it says temperatures from December through February will be colder than normal east of the Mississippi River. But the mercury is expected to rise slightly higher than average from the Plains states... west to the Pacific Coast. The chilly forecast for the East is based on warmer Pacific Ocean water that will ''exaggerate'' the jet steam... pushing the air mass farther North and East... in turn, drawing colder Arctic air south.

A federal study shows that more people in the United States died in 1988 than in any one year on record. Deaths due to murder, AIDS and influenza rose... while mortality from heart disease, stroke and cancer declined. The study by the Centers for Disease Control says there was a 20-percent increase in the death rate for AIDS during the one-year period. Blacks had higher rates for most of the leading causes of death. The homicide death rate for blacks was six times that for whites and the AIDS death rate for blacks was three times that for whites. However, deaths by suicide and chronic obstructive lung disease were more prevalent among whites.

The U-S Army Corps of Engineers says rumors that the Mississippi River is bubbling along the New Madrid Fault are just a lot of hot air. Spokesman Ken Kruchowski says he received several calls in the past two days from people saying the river is bubbling as a precursor to the quake, but that there is NO such thing going on. The rumors are fueling near-hysteria in the Midwest because of a prediction that there is a 50-50 chance for a severe earthquake in the central United States on, or about, December 3rd.

Kistler called the results ''extremely positive.''

The governor of the nation's richest state today ordered the Legislature to meet in a special session next week to consider one BILLION dollars in emergency spending cuts and transfers. California Governor George Deukmejian says if the Legislature doesn't quickly implement his austerity plan, the state could deplete its reserves, face a budget shortfall and lose its cherished triple-A bond rating.

California state officials say the state's landmark law requiring the owners of asault weapons to register their firearms by January 1st is being largely ignored. Officials say fewer than three percent of the estimated 200-thousand to 300-thousand assault weapons in the state have been registered. California became the first state in the nation to ban sales of the military style guns last January. The National Rifle Association says gun owners are refusing to register their assault weapons as an act of civil disobedience to protest the law.

OVERLAND PARK, KS (NOV. 28) UPI - The NCAA is expected to announce a decision Thursday on whether it will modify its postseason ban against the University of Nevada-Las Vegas basketball team.

UNLV has scheduled a news conference for Thursday 3:00 p.m. EST, the same time the NCAA will announce its decision.

The Runnin' Rebels, who won the national championship last April with a resounding victory over Duke, had their chance to defend their title denied in July when the NCAA's Committee On Infractions banned them from the 1991 tournament.

The NCAA's decision was the culmination of a 13-year legal battle with Coach Jerry Tarkanian, which went all the way to the Supreme Court. The penalty was said to be for violations committed 15 years ago, when the NCAA ordered Tarkanian suspended for ''recruiting and organizational violations.''

During the summer, school officials presented a written appeal on the ruling and in early October they appeared before the NCAA Council for an oral presentation. The NCAA decided to rehear the appeal on Oct. 28, and that time Tarkanian and UNLV officials presented four compromises that would allow the Rebels to defend their title.

One option would be to ban the team from playing in the 1992 tournament. The second was to ban just Tarkanian and not the team from the tourney - something that Tarkanian had already volunteered - and the final two options were multi-layered, involving restrictions on recruitment and a monitoring of the school's basketball program.

The Runnin' Rebels won the school's first NCAA championship in dramatic fashion last April, overwhelming Duke 103-73 in the most lopsided championship game in history.

With four starters, Larry Johnson, Stacey Augmon, Anderson Hunt and Greg Anthony returning for the 1990-91 season a repeat title seemed likely until the NCAA's ruling.

UNLV could also face further sanctions as the NCAA is investigating possible violations in the recruiting of Lloyd Daniels, who never played for the school.

(NOV. 28) UPI - The U-N Security Council today unanimously voted to condemn Iraqi atrocities against Kuwait and place Kuwait's civil records in U-N custody. The council voted 15 quote- ''condemns the attempts by Iraq to alter the demographic composition'' of Kuwait and to destory the country's civil records. The vote followed two days of accounts from Kuwaiti refugees about the systematic destruction of the Kuwaiti society, killings, rapes and looting.

The Security Council is expected to pass a resolution sanctioning the use of force against Iraq when it votes this week. As many as 13 of the Security Council's 15 member nations are expected to approve the resolution. NONE of the five permanent members... the United States, Britain, France, the Soviet Union and China... have indicated they will veto it. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater predicted passage, saying- ''Obviously, we have worked on this, talking to various countries and we believe it will pass.''

A group of apple growers in Washington state are suing C-B-S Incorporated and the National Resources Defense Council over last year's Alar scare. In a lawsuit filed today in Yakima County Superior Court, 11 growers charge that a ''60 Minutes'' television show segment on the chemical preservative Alar caused devastating financial damage to the apple industry. The suit seeks a minimum of 500-thousand dollars in damages for losses. The broadcast highlighted a report by the N-R-D-C which claimed that Alar, which is used to enhance the appearance and prolong the shelf life of apples, posed a serious cancer risk.

Unseasonably warm weather swept the Great Lakes and the Ohio Valley and moved into the Northeast today. The mild temperatures set or tied records in 46 cities before turning cooler. Elsewhere, rain pounded the South and soggy Washington state. A freeze warning was posted for the hill country of southern Texas and for much of Tennessee for tonight. And floods contributed to the death of an Indiana man as flood waters from the Little Calumet River went on a rampage in the northwestern part of the state. Hundreds of people fled their homes.

In Cairo, the discovery of a fungus growing on priceless artifacts today forced Egyptian authorities to close the tomb of Egyptian Pharaoh Tutankhamen Toot-ahnk-AH'-muhn. Officials say that Tutankhamen's 35- hundred-year-old tomb in southern Egypt will be closed to visitors at least ''until the end of July'' for renovations. The tomb's interior also will be treated against bacteria and fungi. Officials say fungi started growing on the artifacts within the burial chamber and a committee of experts will discuss ways to prevent it from damaging the tomb and its ancient treasure.

LOS ANGELES (NOV. 28) UPI - Rob Pilatus, half of the scandal-rocked pop music duo Milli Vanilli, was arrested for sexual battery Tuesday, police said.

Pilatus, 26, was arrested at 5:30 a.m. at his home in the exclusive Bel-Air section of Los Angeles. He was released after posting $10,485 bond, Sgt. David Rossi said.

Sexual battery, depending on the specifics of the crime, can be prosecuted either as a felony or a misdemeanor. Rossi said detectives will ask the District Attorney's Office to file felony charges against Pilatus, which would carry a maximum 4-year jail term upon conviction.

California law defines sexual battery as touching ''an intimate part of another person while that person is unlawfully restrained.''

The victim was a 25-year-old woman, Rossi said.

Pilatus and fellow German, Fab Morvan, were stripped of the Grammy award the duo won when it was announced by their manager that the pair had not sung on their album, ''Girl You Know It's True,'' which sold 7 million copies and led to their award as the best new group of 1989.

A neighbor told the Santa Monica Outlook that she saw police escorting Pilatus and a young, blond woman from his house early Tuesday morning. Later in the day, Pilatus, Morvan and two other men left the house in a black jeep with Pilatus saying, ''Too much publicity.''

Milli Vanilli admitted lip-synching at concerts and even at the Grammy awards show last March. At a news conference, they said they had been seduced by fame and fortune and ''made a pact with the devil.''

PARIS (NOV. 28) UPI - A truck driver transporting Old Master paintings worth more than $5 million took a break at a bar, leaving the ignition keys on the dashboard, and thieves drove off with the loot, police said Wednesday.

The thieves abandoned most of their haul hours later, officers said.

A total of 50 canvases by Watteau, Fragonard and Rubens and others from Flemish, Dutch and French schools were aboard the truck when the driver and the porters working with him stopped at the bar in the center of Paris shortly before midnight Tuesday, police said.

''They stopped for a glass and after a while they noticed the truck no longer was outside,'' said Christopher Hirel, a bartender at the General Lafayette, a popular watering hole that stays open into the early hours.

''When they realized what was happening they raced into the street,'' Hirel told France's Antenne-2 television. ''But the truck had disappeared into thin air.''

The driver acknowledged that he had left the ignition keys on the dash, police said.

Late Wednesday, police sources said officers had found the truck abandoned in Paris with most of its precious cargo still inside. A preliminary police inspection found the main item missing was a collection of plate glass works signed by the early 20th-century master Emile Galle, the sources said.

Hirel said the driver and his team were regular clients at the General Lafayette, an old-style Parisian brasserie with a zinc-topped bar, sawdust on the floor and a green and white awning sheltering tables on the sidewalk.

The truck had collected the artworks from the luxurious Crillon Hotel on the vast Place de la Concorde, where they had been displayed at an exhibit titled ''Art Nouveau _ Art Deco.''

The driver and porters were taking the paintings to Bagnolet in the suburbs of Paris en route for Strasbourg, Eastern France, where they were to be auctioned on Thursday.

An investigator said the thieves probably were ''amateurs,'' and noted that the paintings were ''difficult to trade.''

The inquiry was being conducted by the Brigade for the Repression of Banditry, a specialized police detection unit.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (NOV. 28) UPI - Citing insufficient evidence, prosecutors declined Wednesday to charge Axl Rose of the heavy metal band Guns 'N Roses for allegedly bashing a neighbor over her head with a wine bottle.

In lieu of the criminal charges, prosecutors will arrange an informal hearing at which both Rose and the woman will meet with a representative of the district attorney in an attempt to ensure that no future confrontations occur.

The hearing was not immediately scheduled, Sandi Gibbons, a spokeswoman for the office, said.

Rose, 28, the lead singer of the band, was arrested Oct. 30 at his West Hollywood condominium for allegedly hitting the neighbor, Gabriela Kantor, 37, over the head with the bottle of wine.

He was booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon and was released a short time later after posting $5,000 bail.

Sheriff's deputies said Kantor and Rose had been involved in an ongoing dispute about loudly played music in his unit.

Rose contended he had repeatedly complained to the building's homeowners association about Kantor's own loud music-playing. Rose also claimed that Kantor behaves like an overzealous fan.

Since the incident, Rose has reportedly decided to sell his condo and move into a single-family home.

Investigators said Rose had been arguing with Kantor in the 12th- story hallway of the building when he grabbed the woman's car keys and threw them out his sliding glass door to the ground below. He then allegedly took the wine from Kantor, poured out the bottle's contents and struck her on the head, investigators said.

Rose said the argument began when he heard Kantor yelling, went into the hallway and told her to ''shut up.''

He said she retaliated by swinging the wine bottle at him and throwing her keys into his apartment. The singer said he then closed his door and threw the keys over the balcony.

''She was pounding on the door, trying to get in,'' he said at the time. ''If she has any bruises, it was because she was throwing herself against the door. She was doing it to herself.''

''It's really weird,'' he added. ''She cranks my music all the time.''

Earlier this year, sheriff's deputies went to Rose's condo after receiving complaints about loud music. Immediately after the incident, Rose filed a harassment complaint against the Sheriff's Department.

PHOENIX (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Microtest was recently named to the 1990 Inc. 500 list of America's top 500 fastest-growing privately held companies. Microtest ranked number 273 on the eighth annual list, published in the December issue of Inc. magazine. Only three other Phoenix companies made the list and Microtest was ranked the highest of all of them. Also on the list are two Tempe-based companies and a company based in Tucson.

Over the past six years, Microtest, a privately-held company, has experienced rapid growth and expects to report 1990 revenues in excess of $10 million. Last year, the company reported $4 million in revenues. According to the Inc. 500 list the company has increased sales by 1,249 percent in the four-year period measured from 1985 to 1989.

Founded in 1984 on the premise that Local Area Networks (LANs) permit users to be more reliable and cost-effective, Microtest Inc. has evolved and today markets over 40 diagnostic and connectivity products for industry-standard LANs. Since the introduction of Cable Scanner in 1988, Microtest's products have captured national recognition in the industry, including winning several Product of the Year awards for 1989 and 1990 in LAN Magazine.

To be eligible for selection to the 1990 Inc. 500, a company must be independent and privately held. Furthermore, companies had to show at least $100,000 but no more than $25 million in sales for 1985 and had to register a sales increase between 1985 and 1989.

"Thanks to the Inc. 500 list, Microtest is now nationally recognized as a significant business growth leader in the United States," said David Bolles, Microtest president and founder. "Currently, we employ over seventy people in the Phoenix area, and we hope to double that number by next year at this time."

According to Inc., "Other businesses typically think about serving a market, but Inc. 500 companies seem to think about creating a market. They set out to do something no one else is doing." As a group, the companies on this year's list boosted their collective revenues from $563 million in 1985 to $9.6 billion last year. The companies created 56,858 new jobs.

Microtest Inc., founded in 1984, designes, manufactures, and markets innovative solutions for users of computer networks and electrical communications systems. Microtest has pioneered several firsts in network diagnostics and connectivity products, which increase the reliability, productivity and convenience of local area networks.

DALLAS (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Ed Haggar Sr. announced that Joe M. Haggar III has been named president and chief executive officer of Haggar Apparel Co. at the opening of the firm's national sales meeting here yesterday.

Dallas-based Haggar is the nation's largest manufacturer of men's slacks, sport coats, suits and ready-to-wear suit separates.

Ed Haggar, currently chairman of the board, stated that president and Chief Executive Officer Joe M. Haggar Jr., will assume duties as chairman of the board. Ed Haggar will become honorary chairman of the board. All changes are effective April 2, the start of the company's fiscal third quarter 1991.

Joe Haggar III will still maintain his present duties as president of Haggar Menswear at this time. He was executive vice president of merchandising and sales of Haggar Menswear before assuming his current position in 1985.

Joe Haggar Jr., who will be 66 in February, has served as Haggar's president since 1971 and chief executive officer since 1985. At the announcement of his successor, Joe Haggar Jr. stated the decision reflects Haggar's desire to continue its development from a ''main-stream'' apparel manufacturer to one which produces clothing with more casual, updated styling to reach a broader base while continuing to serve its traditional customers.

Both Ed Haggar Sr. and Joe Haggar Jr. expressed thanks to customers, suppliers and especially Haggar's many loyal associates for their support and cooperation in the past. They both felt that the strong relationships Joe Haggar III has developed with these contacts over the years will help him lead Haggar to further growth and continued profitability in the future.

Joe Haggar III, who will be 39 when he assumes his new positions, joined the company's management training program in 1973. He worked in data processing, production control, manufacturing and sales.

He later trained in the Dallas corporate headquarters and in two manufacturing plants. In 1976, he was named Dallas service center manager, later serving as national brand manager and vice president of Division II, directing three Haggar brands.

A member of the Salesmanship Club of Dallas and the Young Presidents Organization, Joe Haggar III serves on the board of the Texas Business Hall of Fame. A graduate of the University of Notre Dame, he played varsity football for the school for three years.

PORTLAND, OR (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Louisiana-Pacific Corp. (NYSE:LPX) announced Thursday that the record decline in the homebuilding market and sharply lower prices for building products have forced the company to curtail production at many plants for varying periods of time during the fourth quarter.

Some of those curtailments may continue into the first quarter of 1991.

As a result of the cutbacks and continued declines in the pulp segment, sales and earnings will be lower than most Wall Street forecasts. The company said that fourth quarter earnings could be near or below break-even levels.

The company said that the curtailments and temporary shutdowns are part of an industry-wide pattern brought on by significant price drops in lumber, oriented strand board and plywood since the third quarter.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, CA (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - In a plenary session Thursday at the annual meeting of the Radiological Society of North America (RSNA), Dr. Robert Gould, Professor of Radiology, University of California, San Francisco presented recent results showing the use of Ultrafast CT for early detection and ruling out of coronary artery disease.

According to Dr. Gould, ''The increased sensitivity for detection of coronary artery disease is a result of the unique use of electron-beam technology that captures images 5 to 10 times faster than all other CT scanners, and thus freezes motion of the beating heart.''

Imatron Inc. (NASDAQ:IMAT) is the developer and exclusive supplier of electron-beam scanners that are currently in use at 27 hospitals in the United States, Europe, Japan, and Asia.

The Imatron Ultrafast CT screening examination is performed in just a few minutes and does not require the patient to be injected with iodinated contrast media. In an RSNA press release on Monday Nov. 26, Dr. Jerome Breen stated: ''Ultrafast CT appeared to be able to rule out significant coronary artery disease in 100 percent of the cases we studied.'' Dr. Breen presented the results of studies performed at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. involving a group of 100 patients. According to Dr. Breen, ''Ultrafast CT is exquisitely sensitive at detecting the presence of calcium in coronary arteries, a sign of atherosclerotic disease.''

Imatron Inc. designs, manufactures, and markets CT products for medical diagnostic imaging, industrial applications, and baggage screening. Imatron products include the electron-beam Ultrafast CT scanner, which captures high speed images of the heart as well as radiological chest and body scans free of motion-induced artifacts.

SAN FRANCISCO (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - John R. Beckett, who most recently has served as president, chief executive and chairman of Transamerica Corp., has been appointed a member of the board of trustees of Western Investment Real Estate Trust (ASE:WIR).

Beckett's appointment is effective Jan. 1, 1991. He replaces Chester R. MacPhee Sr., who will become trustee emeritus.

In announcing the appointment, O.A. Talmage, president and chief executive officer of WIRET, said: ''It is a distinct pleasure to welcome John Beckett to our board. His years of experience in real estate and business will make him an invaluable member of our team.''

Prior to joining Transamerica as a director in 1959, Beckett was first vice president and director of Blyth & Co. Inc., a nationwide investment underwriting firm, assistant to the president of Seattle Gas Co., senior financial analyst with the Securities and Exchange Commission, financial analyst with Duff and Phelps and valuation analyst with Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

In addition, he is a retired director of American President Companies Ltd., Bank of America N.T. & S.A., BankAmerica Corp., Texas Eastern Corp., Kaiser Tech Ltd. and The Clorox Co., and during his Transamerica years was a member and then chairman of the U.S. State Department's Advisory Committee on International Business Problems (1968-1974).

His many business accomplishments were recognized in 1979 when Financial World magazine name him one of the nation's 10 most outstanding chief executives.

Beckett is a San Francisco native and earned both bachelor's and master's degrees in economics at Stanford University. In 1980, he was awarded an honorary doctorate in business administration from the University of Santa Clara. He resides in Atherton.

Western Investment Real Estate Trust is a self-administered equity real estate investment trust based in San Francisco which invests in a diversified portfolio of income-producing properties consisting primarily of shopping centers and commercial buildings in northern and central California and northern Nevada.

Founded in 1962, the Trust has investments in 58 income-producing properties, including 35 supermarkets and shopping centers.

REDMOND, WA (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Digital Systems has introduced Voicelink predictive dialing technology in Japan through an agreement with Kawasaki Steel Corp., the country's third largest producer of steel, and C. Itoh Techno-Science Co. Ltd. (CTC), part of the leading international trading corporation, C. Itoh & Co. The announcement was made in Tokyo Nov. 9 and the system made its debut at the Telemarketing Fair Tokyo '90 on Nov. 13-14.

The introduction culminates a year of intensive Voicelink customization and joint development in preparation for the premier of Voicelink predictive dialing technology in Japan.

"This event marks just the beginning of a partnership and one of many new breakthroughs ahead as we work with Kawasaki and CTC to develop new applications and services to meet the needs of Japanese business," said Michael Darland, president and chief executive officer of Digital Systems.

In addition to offering the system for direct sale, CTC is also establishing a telemarketing service bureau, giving Japanese companies the option to purchase a system outright or to use the services of a Voicelink calling center. A similar center operated by Digital Systems as part of its U.S. operations quickly grew from seven to 325 workstations.

Under the agreement, Kawasaki Steel, which is noted for technological excellence, will modify the system for use in Japan and manufacture the system with components supplied by Digital Systems. CTC, considered a leading system integrator in Japan, will market, distribute and service the system and handle any necessary customization.

Voicelink with Intelligent Dialing gives business immediate and economic access to customers by phone, while minimizing the labor expense associated with manual dialing. Leading U.S. companies in banking, finance, telecommunications, retail, healthcare and many other industries already use the system for high-volume phone contact related to telemarketing, collections customer service, fund raising and market research.

Kawasaki and CTC, both part of Japan's Dai-Ichi Kang Yo Bank Group (DKB Group) Japan's third largest bank, are targeting Voicelink to the outbound telemarketing and financial services industries for use in collections, sales, customer services and other innovative communications programs.

"Beyond the dramatic productivity and payback of Voicelink, we believe it is our commitment to customers that makes us successful in the marketplace," added Darland. "We know Kawasaki and C. Itoh are dedicated to providing the same quality of service that will lead to more exciting ventures ahead."

CINCINNATI (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - The United States Shoe Corp. Thursday reported results of operations for the fiscal third quarter ended Nov. 3.

Consolidated net sales totaled $674,951,000 compared to $646,670,000 in the third quarter of 1989, an increase of 4 percent. Net earnings were $9,230,000, a decrease of 49 percent from $18,233,000 in the like period a year ago. Earnings per share were 20 cents compared to 41 cents in the 1989 third quarter. Earnings for the quarter include a net gain of approximately $5.5 million, or 12 cents per share, which resulted from the termination of a footwear license agreement and the sale of certain related assets, offset slightly by charges related to the sale of a small shoe division.

For the nine months ended Nov. 3, U.S. Shoe had consolidated net sales of $2,013,128,000, up 12 percent from $1,798,860,000 in the first nine months of 1989. Net earnings were $28,515,000 compared to $25,987,000 in the like period last year, an increase of 10 percent. Earnings per share were 63 cents up from 58 cents for the first nine months of 1989.

Each of the company's three major business segments was negatively affected by the economic slowdown in the third quarter. The Women's Apparel Retailing Group, LensCrafters Optical Retailing Group and Footwear Group all recorded reduced earnings for the quarter compared to the like period last year.

Third quarter sales in the Women's Apparel Retailing Group increased 9 percent compared to the like period in 1989. Comparable store sales were up 5 percent over last year. Operating earnings declined 40 percent vs. the third quarter a year ago.

Casual Corner and Petite Sophisticate registered comparable store sales increases during the quarter, but a sluggish retail sales environment required increased markdowns that resulted in earnings declines. August Max Woman continued to improve, recording a slight profit for the quarter. Ups 'N Downs experienced both sluggish sales and higher levels of markdowns that combined to increase the division's losses compared to last year.

In the LensCrafters Optical Retailing Group, third quarter sales increased 7 percent, but comparable store sales declined 6 percent. Operating earnings decreased by 97 percent. LensCrafters operated 420 optical superstores at the end of the third quarter, compared to 330 at the same time last year.

LensCrafters also has begun a streamlining of its national field management and home office organizations that will increase efficiency and will reduce the division's fixed cost structure. The streamlining, which will be completed during the fourth quarter, will reduce the layers of field management and decrease the home office support staff.

SAN FRANCISCO (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Homestake Mining Company (NYSE:HM) reported Thursday that its subsidiary, Homestake Gold of Australia Limited (HGAL), has announced a rights offering to raise approximately $65 million.

The issue will provide capital to permit further investment in current gold mining and exploration activities, possible future acquisition of gold mining properties or operations and reduction in bank borrowings.

The rights offering, underwritten by J.B. Were & Son, will be offered to shareholders of record on Dec. 21, 1990 and will continue through Jan. 23, 1991.

Homestake currently holds 80 percent of HGAL's outstanding shares and intends to subscribe to that percentage (approximately $52 million) of the offering.

Directors of HGAL said the acquisition and expansion program in Kalgoorlie and the opening of Fortnum, the company's first wholly-owned gold mine in Australia, have set the framework for future growth and profitability in Australia.

The issue will further strengthen HGAL's capital structure and provide additional financial flexibility to pursue the development and expansion in the company's activities.

Homestake Mining Company is an international gold mining company holding significant interests in the United States, Australia, Canada and Chile.

SAN FRANCISCO (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - At the Microsoft Multimedia Developers Conference in San Jose Wednesday, MacroMind Inc., the leading developer of multimedia software, announced two new products: the Windows Player Development Kit and the Windows Player License Pack for both Microsoft Windows 3.0 and Windows with multimedia extensions.

The Development Kit will enable developers to convert MacroMind Director interactive multimedia documents created on the Macintosh for playback under both Microsoft Windows 3.0 and Windows with multimedia extensions. The License Pack will allow users to view interactive MacroMind Director documents under both Windows 3.0 and Windows with multimedia extensions.

In March, 1990, Microsoft announced that they were licensing MacroMind Director's player technology to be built into Windows with multimedia extensions. This will enable non-interactive documents created in MacroMind Director to be played back on PCs running Windows with multimedia extensions.

MacroMind's new products complement Microsoft's offering by providing conversion and playback capabilities for documents which include interactivity and external device control under Windows with multimedia extensions and by also providing support for the broad base of Windows 3.0 users.

By using both MacroMind Director and the Development Kit, developers can create fully interactive productions for the Macintosh and PC, including sales and marketing presentations, technical visualizations, corporate communications materials, commercial multimedia titles and interactive courseware.

''This announcement is further evidence of MacroMind's commitment to cross-platform multimedia standards,'' said Tim Mott, MacroMind's president and CEO. Now multimedia developers have the ability to leverage their investment in time and data to the full range of Windows viewers.

MacroMind's MacroMedia systems level technology has been licensed by industry leaders such as Microsoft and Fujitsu. MacroMind products are distributed by Ingram-Micro D and Merisel, Inc. to computer resellers. A privately held company, MacroMind is backed by The Cole Gilburne Fund and Kleiner Perkins Caulfield & Byers.

DALLAS (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - BANK ONE, TEXAS Thursday purchased certain assets and assumed all deposits and certain other liabilities of Bank of Arlington as part of BANK ONE's continuing program of statewide expansion.

The bank was closed Thursday afternoon by the Banking Commissioner of Texas, which appointed the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) as receiver.

The bank will open its doors at the usual time Friday morning, announced Harvey R. Mitchell, chairman and chief executive officer of BANK ONE, TEXAS.

Bank of Arlington, which is located at 1600 E. Pioneer Parkway in East Arlington, reported total deposits of $59.5 million at Sept. 30, 1990. It is the sixth new BANK ONE branch addition in the Mid-Cities area this year.

Customers of the bank will have no interruption in service and should continue to use their checks and make deposits as before. All deposits were transferred intact to the new BANK ONE office and remain insured to the applicable limit by the FDIC.

Smith said customers of Bank of Arlington should continue to bank at 1600 E. Pioneer and existing BANK ONE customers should continue to conduct business at BANK ONE locations until they receive notice that the Bank of Arlington office has been converted to BANK ONE's operations system.

BANK ONE, TEXAS' previous acquisitions this year include Bright Banc Savings Association, American Bank of Arlington, The Everman National Bank, Trinity National Bank, First State Federal Savings Association, United Bank of Waco, Northside Bank, Capitol City Federal Savings Association and Empire Federal Savings Bank of America.

BANK ONE, TEXAS, NA, with more than 140 offices statewide, reported assets of $13.6 billion and deposits of $11.9 billion at Sept. 30, 1990.

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Bethlehem Resources Corp. (NASDAQ:BTHM) is pleased to announce that agreement in principle for production financing of the Goldstream Mine near Revelstoke has been reached subject to regulatory approval.

The mine is held on a 50-50 basis with Goldnev Resources Inc.

Financing of up to $7 million for the mine's re-activation will be provided by Nippon Mining Co. Ltd. and Sumitomo Corp. In addition to the production re-start capital, Nippon Mining will purchase all copper concentrate production of the mine for 6 years under an agreement that also makes provision for advance payments to reduce the mine's working capital requirements.

Nippon and Sumitomo will have the non-cumulative privilege of converting up to 25 percent of Bethlehem's share of the loan to Bethlehem stock each year at the greater of 70 percent of the average closing price of the shares during the 30-day period prior to notice of conversion and a minimum fixed price of 37 cents.

As operator, Bethlehem will commence rehabilitation work immediately upon formal closing of the transaction, which is planned to take place as soon as possible. Re-activation of the production facility is expected to occur within three or four months after closing of the financing agreement. The first shipment of concentrates should take place two months after re-activation.

The Goldstream Mine currently has reserves of 1.86 million tonnes, grading 4.81 percent copper and 3.06 percent zinc, which will provide mill feed for approximately five years at the planned milling rate of 1100 tonnes per day.

The resumed operation will produce approximately 65,000 tonnes of copper concentrates, containing about 35 million pounds of copper, and 7,000 tonnes of zinc concentrates, containing about 7 million pounds of zinc, per annum.

SALT LAKE CITY (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - First Security Corp. (OTC/NASDAQ:FSCO) and Pacific First Financial Corp., parent of Pacific First Bank, Thursday announced the closing of the sale of Pacific First's Utah operations (formerly the Utah operations of American Savings & Loan).

Governmnet regulators have approved the $3.25 million cash transaction.

Effective Dec. 15, all former American Savings customers in Utah who are Pacific First customers will become First Security customers. The sale involves 40,000 customer accounts with deposits of about $240 million.

First Security currently operates 98 offices in 55 communities throughout Utah. The acquisition will bring the bank's statewide network to 101 offices.

Pacific First acquired American Savings' Utah operations from the Resolution Trust Co. in June 1990 as part of a larger sale that involved Willamette Savings Bank branches in Oregon. The Oregon branches now are part of the Pacific First Bank network.

The agreement for First Security to purchase the Pacific First Utah operations was announced in July.

Pacific First has 153 banking locations in Washington, Oregon, California and Nevada. The bank is a wholly owned subsidiary of Royal Trustco Ltd. of Toronto.

First Security is the largest financial services organization headquartered in the Intermountian West. It is the oldest continuously operating multistate bank holding company in the United States. It operates 188 full-service banking offices in Utah, Idaho, Oregon and Wyoming.

Other subsidiaries include a leasing company, two insurance companies, an investment management firm and a discount brokerage operation.

NAPA, CALIF (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - ARIEL VINEYARDS Thursday announced the release of PROSPERO, their driest sparkling wine release to date.

When making the announcement, company President Larry Leigon said, ''Even the most skeptical will realize that ARIEL has again reached a new level in the production and taste of nonalcoholic wines.''

PROSPERO is described by ARIEL as extremely sophisticated. National Sales Director Craig Rosser said, ''PROSPERO will be appreciated for the subtle nuances that come from sitting 'en tirage' for six years.''

ARIEL purchased new oak barrels which, according to ARIEL Winemaker Barry Gnekow, ''give PROSPERO a slight cream and nutty nuance and the toasty character of French vanilla.''

PROSPERO is vintage dated 1983 and will be the most expensive retail product ARIEL VINEYARDS has released. ARIEL has announced that there will be only 500 cases of their PROSPERO entry produced at this bottling.

ARIEL VINEYARDS produced the only premium wine without alcohol to have won a gold medal against wines with alcohol.

WEST CONSHOHOCKEN, PA. (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - U.S. Bioscience Inc. (AMEX:UBS) Thursday announced it has been granted an exclusive license to a patent held by the U.S. government for the use of trimetrexate to treat Pneumocystis carinii pneumonia and toxoplasmosis, infections that are life-threatening in patients with AIDS.

Pneumocystis carinii pneumonia is the most common opportunistic infection in AIDS patients. At least one episode of this form of pneumonia is estimated to occur in 60 percent to 70 percent of patients.

Philip Schein, M.D., chairman and president of U.S. Bioscience, said that there is an important medical need for new therapies for patients with AIDS who fail current treatments. Trimetrexate represents a potentially valuable addition to the array of agents used in the management of AIDS and a new focus of product development for the company.

In 1991 U.S. Bioscience plans to file a New Drug Application with the U.S. Food & Drug Administration for the treatment of refractory and recurrent Pneumocystis carinii pneumonia in AIDS patients.

Trimetrexate has been under development as an anticancer agent for several years. Laboratory studies have subsequently shown that the drug is a potent inhibitor of an enzyme found in the Pneumocystis protozoan and that it can readily penetrate the organism. Leucovorin can be used to selectively reduce the side effects of trimetrexate, which are largely in the form of myelosuppression without reversal of the antipneumocystis effect, since the organism does not possess the cellular uptake for this rescue agent.

The initial demonstrations of trimetrexate's clinical efficacy for Pneumocystis were reported in 1987 by Dr. Carmen Allegra and coworkers at the National Institutes of Health (New England Journal of Medicine 317:978). More than 650 patients have since been treated with the drug under an NIH AIDS Drug Development Program Treatment IND for patients intolerant to first-line therapy or patients with refractory and resistant infection.

U.S. Bioscience is a pharmeceutical company specializing in the development and commercialization of drugs to increase the survival and productivity of patients with cancer and allied diseases. The company's portfolio includes an array of compounds, some of which are in late stages of development - one in Phase-II clinical trials, two in Phase-III clinical trials, and another with a NDA pending with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - On the heels of a successful opening of its initial office in London, Brobeck Hale and Dorr International, the first joint venture partnership in the United States of two major independent law firms Thursday announced the opening of its office in New York.

Formed in July of this year to provide legal services to businesses and financial institutions in the United States and Europe, the firm draws upon the high technology, emerging companies and venture capital expertise of California-based Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison and Boston-based Hale and Dorr.

According to a recent Merrill Lynch survey, the two firms ranked 2nd and 3rd among U.S. law firms during the last five years in the completion of initial public offerings for high technology companies.

Richard Plumridge, a former partner of Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison, has been appointed managing partner of Brobeck Hale and Dorr International in New York. The practice offers corporate expertise to public and private businesses, with particular emphasis in the computer, semiconductor, medical, telecommunications and biotechnology industries.

Brobeck Hale and Dorr International was formed on July 18, 1990. The joint venture partnership is the first time major U.S. law firms have formed a separate firm, owned and staffed by the founding firms. Initially, the New York office of Brobeck Hale and Dorr International is staffed with partners and associates from Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison and Hale and Dorr.

Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison, founded under its current name in 1925, has approximately 400 lawyers and offices in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Palo Alto San Diego and Newport Beach, Calif.

Hale and Dorr, with more than 300 attorneys, is headquartered in Boston, with additional offices in Manchester, New Hampshire and Washington, D.C., and began practicing under its current name in 1918.

DENVER (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - U.S. Gold Corp. (NASDAQ:USGL) announced Thursday its senior secured lender has agreed in principle to the proposed Homestake Mining Co. of California-U.S. Gold joint venture at Tonkin Springs, subject to execution of definitive agreements and other conditions.

The proposed joint venture will give Homestake a 51 percent ownership interest in Tonkin Springs as well as operatorship with certain commitments and responsibilities for initial funding. U.S. Gold will retain a 49 percent interest.

The proposed transaction requires Homestake to provide limited cash to be used to settle amounts owed by U.S. Gold to creditors. If settlement offers are accepted by creditors, the proposed joint venture can be finalized.

''This proposed transaction is a major step towards resolving our near term liquidity crisis,'' said William W. Reid, president of U.S. Gold. ''In addition, the project will benefit from extensive exploration of our excellent land position at Tonkin Springs as well as a program to continue development of our important biotechnology. We look forward to working with such a quality partner as Homestake Mining.''

Homestate also will be granted, subject to approval by the shareholders of U.S. Gold, two options whereby Homestake could increase its ownership interest in Tonkin Springs to 100 percent by payments to U.S. Gold totaling $20 million plus granting to the company a 2 percent Net Smelter Return royalty interest.

U.S. Gold is a Denver-based gold mining company which owns the Tonkin Springs gold mine in Nevada and holds gold properties in other western states. The company is listed on the NASDAQ National Market.

LAUREL, MS (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Sanderson Farms Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:SAFM) Thursday reported results for its fiscal year ended Oct. 31, 1990.

Net sales for the year were $175,837,000, compared with $184,267,000 in fiscal 1989. Net income was $9,127,000, or $1.01 per share, compared with $15,261,000, or $1.68 per share, in the previous year.

For the fourth quarter ended Oct. 31, 1990, net sales totaled $44,469,000, compared with net sales of $46,006,000 in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1989. Net income was $2,287,000, or 26 cents per share, compared with $3,277,000, or 36 cents per share, in the 1989 period.

Joe F. Sanderson Jr., president and chief executive officer of Sanderson Farms commented: ''Throughout the year, our sales and profit comparisons were affected by lower selling prices for poultry products. As measured by a simple average of the daily Georgia dock price, market prices for poultry were approximately 10 percent lower in fiscal 1990 than in fiscal 1989. The decline in selling prices was partially offset by lower feed costs and gains in prepared food sales.''

Sanderson Farms Inc. is engaged in the production, processing, marketing and distribution of fresh and frozen chicken and other prepared food items.

ATLANTA (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Advanced Telecommunications Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS:ATEL)(ATC) Thursday announced that they have been granted approval by the South Carolina Public Service Commission to provide intrastate long distance telecommunications services to South Carolina residents and businesses.

The move expands the regional long distance company's territory to eight Sunbelt states, from the Carolinas through Texas.

''The addition of South Carolina to our service area marks ATC's commitment to internal growth and market expansion,'' said Stephen E. Raville, ATC president and chief executive officer. ''We currently have several large customers based in the Carolinas. This move will enable us to increase the number of enhanced services we can offer both the business and residential communities in South Carolina,'' Raville said.

Initially, ATC Long Distance will offer 1+ dialing service, outbound WATS, calling card and international calling, adding an inbound 800 service, multi-location calling plan, residential service and ATC's flat-rate American Business Plan in early December 1990.

ATC Long Distance serves more than 300,000 business and residential customers in eight southern states. Atlanta-based ATC operates a nationwide digital fiber optic network providing a full range of telecommunications services including 1+ dialing, WATS, inbound 800 services, international calling, video teleconferencing, operator services, calling card and private channel service capable of voice, video and data transmission.

ATC also offers voice mail and voice messaging services through ATC MessageCentre. The company's common stock is traded on the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol ATEL. For more information on ATC Long Distance service, call 1-800/330-2255.

LOS ANGELES (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Winners Circle Inc. (NASDAQ:WNRS), which does business as High Five Sportswear, Thursday announced its entrance into definitive agreements to form a new custom design and garment manufacturing entity that will operate in the corporate and promotional marketplace.

Winners Circle has acquired the design, marketing and sales services of Ian C. Bell and Ugo Capasso, two individuals with extensive backgrounds in the garment and promotional industries.

The new venture with Bell and Capasso will now permit Winners Circle to enhance its capability to provide customers with an entire line of clothing that is custom designed for their specific purposes. Thus, Winners will now be able to address the increasingly specialized needs of its customers by providing them with one or more garments designed to accommodate the specific requirements of their promotional and advertising programs.

Bell and Capasso, formerly competitors of Winners Circle, previously conducted a custom design and sales business for the corporate and promotional industry under the name ''U&I Designs,'' which will continue to be used by the new venture.

Bell and Capasso have successfully marketed their custom designed products to such well known firms as Pirelli Armstrong Tire Co., Mitsubishi Electronics, the Sands Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas, Caesars World Merchandising and the Calgary Flames hockey organization.

Winners Circle's core business involves the design, manufacture and sale of garments, including jackets, sweatshirts, sweatpants and T-shirts that carry the logo, slogans or other promotional messages of customers, such as Paramount Home Video, the Disney Cos., Wells Fargo Bank, Motown Records, the Los Angeles Lakers, General Rent A Car, Warner Bros., BASF Corp. and a variety of ski companies, who use the company's products to enhance their images, sell their products and increase employee performance and morale.

CHICAGO (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - AM International Inc. Thursday announced it has entered into an amended Revolving Credit Agreement with its current nine-member banking group, led by The First National Bank of Chicago.

The amended agreement provides a credit facility of $50 million and is secured by certain domestic assets of the company.

AM said that with the completion of the amendment, the outstanding borrowings under the agreement will be reclassified from short-term to long-term debt on the company's balance sheet.

Company Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Merle H. Banta said, ''We are pleased with the efforts of the nine participatnts in our lending group and their concurrence in this amended agreement. The extended negotiations of the amendment process caused apprehension among customers, vendors, employees and shareholders, but is indicative of the serious problems facing the U.S. banking industry. This is a difficult period for lenders. We are pleased with their continuing support.

''We anticipate improved profitability and cash flow in fiscal 1991. At the present time, our domestic short-term investments are in excess of the outstanding working capital borrowings under this agreement. The funds available under the working capital credit line will be used to finance internal growth and seasonal needs,'' he said.

AM International, with world headquarters in Chicago, sells and services a wide range of design, display, reproduction and finishing products and supplies to the worldwide graphics industry.

The company conducts its business through three divisions, 17 subsidiaries and a dealer organization located in over 100 countries. AM International's annual revenues are about $900 million.

AM International's common and preferred shares are traded on the New York, Pacific and Midwest Stock Exchanges under the ticker symbol ''AM.'' The company's warrants are traded on the American Stock Exchange under the ticker symbol ''AML.WS.''

BERKELEY, CALIF. (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - General Parametrics Corp. (NASDAQ:GPAR), Thursday announced its sales, profits and dividends for its fourth quarter ended Oct. 31.

Fourth quarter sales were $4,142,000 with net income of $458,000, or 6 cents per share. In the fourth quarter of the prior year, sales were $6,332,000 and net income was $1,051,000, or 13 cents per share.

Sales for the year ended Oct. 31, 1990 were $14,148,000, compared to $24,209,000 for the comparable period one year earlier. Fiscal year 1990 net income was $467,000, or 6 cents per share, compared to fiscal year 1989 net income of $3,027,000, or 38 cents per share.

The company's cash, cash equivalents and short-term investments were $19,735,000, or $2.49 per share, on Oct. 31, 1990 compared to $19,657,000, or $2.45 per share, on Oct. 31, 1989. The increase occurred even though the company paid three shareholder dividends, of 6 cents per share each, amounting to $1,417,000 during this period.

The company also announced that, based on the level of sales and earnings, its board of directors has declared a fourth quarter cash dividend of 6 cents per share, to shareholders of record as of Dec. 7, payable Dec. 21.

During the fourth quarter, the company introduced SpectraStar 400, a new series of color printers. The SpectraStar 400 color printer produces impressive color hardcopy and overhead transparencies at 300 dot-per-inch resolution.

SpectraStar creates brilliant color output and offers users a wide range of options and features that allow them to add capabilities as their needs grow. Limited deliveries of Models 410 and 420 began in the fourth quarter. The company plans to begin shipping its Postscript compatible Model 430 in the first quarter of fiscal 1991. Additional new printer models are expected to be introduced later in fiscal 1991.

General Parametrics, founded in 1981, is a leading producer of desktop presentation hardware and software products for the corporate and governmental workplace. Its complete line of desktop presentation products work with both the IBM and Apple Macintosh systems.

WOODCLIFF LAKE, N.J. (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - BMW's 1991 525i sports sedan, equipped with a new 24-valve engine and improved automatic and manual transmission choices, debuts Thursday at a press conference at The Pasadena Hilton in Pasadena, Calif. hosted by Karl Gerlinger, president and chief executive officer of BMW of North America Inc.

''The 525i is our best-selling model and we've enhanced the 1991 version with a powerful new drive train and refinements throughout,'' said Gerlinger. ''This automobile represents an exciting and intelligent choice for buyers in the sports sedan segment.''

BMW's 525i is the most economical 5-Series model, in a line that includes the more luxurious and high-powered 535i and an ultra-high-performance model, the M5.

The new 2.5-liter, in-line six-cylinder engine is virtually maintenance free, and delivers 21 more horsepower than the 1990 525i with a slight improvement in fuel efficiency.

The new engine's mechanical layout (six cylinders in-line) and displacement (2.5 liters) are the only elements that haven't changed for 1991. Major engine refinements include the addition of dual overhead camshafts, four-valves-per-cylinder, and hydraulic valve lifters.

Compared to its predecessor, an engine that developed 168 horsepower, the 1991 version delivers 189 horsepower. The torque rating has been increased by 10 percent.

Four-valve-per-cylinder engines are not new at BMW; the company's experience with them goes back almost 25 years, primarily in the realm of motorsports and limited production, high-performance vehicles. The 525i engine, however, is BMW's first six-cylinder engine with four-valves-per-cylinder that is designed for volume production.

Another key feature of the new 525i engine is the unique thermoplastic intake manifold. Cast of fiberglass-reinforced polyamide, this advanced new component has numerous advantages, including improving the flow of the engine's fuel-air mixture, lighter weight than a comparable aluminum manifold, less energy consumption in its production and a fully recyclable design.

ZAANDAM, THE NETHERLANDS (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Koninklijke Ahold nv, one of Europe's largest food retailers and one of the top ten supermarket operators in the US, today reported improved results for the fiscal third quarter (12 weeks) and nine months (40 weeks) ended October 7, 1990.

Net earnings for the 12-week period ended October 7, 1990, amounted to Dfl 56.7 million (1989: Dfl 46.8 million), a 21.2 percent rise as compared to the corresponding period of 1989. This increase is attributable to continued growth in operating results and to lower net interest expense. Net earnings were reduced by about Dfl 5 million as a result of the lower exchange rate of the dollar (on average Dfl 1.79 compared to Dfl 2.17).

Sales to third parties in The Netherlands amounted to Dfl 2,149.7 million or a 5.7 percent rise. Excluding the sales of the AC Restaurants which were sold in the fourth quarter of 1989, sales growth in The Netherlands amounted to 7.5 percent. Sales in the United States totaled $1,026.2 million, representing a 9.3 percent rise.

Consolidated sales in guilders amounted to Dfl 3,983.8 million, almost equal to their 1989 level. The lower exchange rate of the dollar in this quarter reduced the increase in consolidated sales in guilders by 7.5 percent.

In The Netherlands, Albert Heijn once again managed to strengthen its market position. In the United States, BI-LO, First National Supermarkets and Giant Food Stores realized significant sales increases.

Ahold's shares trade on the Amsterdam Stock Exchange and may be accessed on the Reuters Equities 2000 service under the symbol AHLN.AS and on Quotron under the symbol AHOLN.EU. They also trade in ADR form in the US (symbol 3KAHLY on the electronic OTC Bulletin Board).

CHICAGO (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - AM International Inc. Thursday reported improved operating results in the fiscal 1991 first quarter ended Oct. 27, 1990.

For the first three months of fiscal 1991, revenues were up 11.4 percent to $214.7 million vs. $192.8 million for the prior year period. Operating income was $7.6 million during the first quarter of fiscal 1991 compared to $7.9 million last year, which included $10.0 million of one-time patent licensing income. Net income to common shareholders in the quarter was breakeven vs. $1.8 million, or four cents per share, last year, including the patent licensing income.

Company Chairman, President, and CEO Merle H. Banta said, "We are pleased with the improved performance in the first quarter. Operating income was ahead of last year by $9.7 million, excluding the one-time patent licensing payment. Despite the recessionary conditions which are prevailing in certain segments of the graphics industry, we expect improved profitability and cash flow in fiscal 1991," Banta said.

"Our backlog and orders remain strong," he added. "The backlog is up 27 percent from the first quarter of last year and orders are running 11 percent higher than a year ago. Although economic conditions are not encouraging, we remain cautiously optimistic that we will meet our fiscal 1991 goals."

AM International, with world headquarters in Chicago, sells and services a wide range of design, display, reproduction, and finishing products and supplies to the worldwide graphics industry.

The company conducts its business through three divisions, 17 subsidiaries and a dealer organization located in over 100 countries. AM International's annual revenues are about $900 million.

RIVERSIDE, CA (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Fleetwood Enterprises Inc. Thursday announced lower sales and earnings for the second quarter and first half which ended Oct. 28, 1990.

Fleetwood, the nation's leading producer of recreational vehicles and manufactured housing, reported that net income declined 50 percent to $6,612,000, or 30 cents per share, compared with $13,177,000, or 57 cents a share, in the comparable quarter last year.

Net earnings for the first six months of fiscal 1991 fell 40 percent to $17,396,000, or 78 cents per share, down from $28,797,000, or $1.25 per share, in last year's first half.

The earnings decline in the second quarter was largely attributed to lower recreational vehicle sales caused by the weakening economy and the uncertainty surrounding the Middle East situation. Earnings were also impacted by narrower RV profit margins caused by competitive market conditions and a shift in sales mix to lower-priced products.

Revenues for the quarter were down 7 percent to $349.4 million compared with $375.6 million a year ago. An all-time record sales performance by the company's manufactured housing group was more than offset by the decline in recreational vehicle sales. For the first six months, total revenues of $738.7 million were off 4 percent from last year's $770.4 million.

Recreational vehicle revenues in the second quarter were $189.4 million, down 17 percent from $228.2 million recorded last year.
Motor home sales slipped 23 percent to $119.9 million while travel trailers fell 19 percent to $59.3 million.

Sales for the folding trailer division, acquired in December 1989, were $10.2 million. RV sales for the first six months of this year were $425.5 million, down 11 percent from $479.7 million in the first two quarters of the prior year. Current-year revenues included $18.8 million in sales from the folding trailer division.

On a more positive note, Fleetwood's manufactured housing group posted sales of $151.2 million in the second quarter, the highest quarterly sales in the company's history and 11 percent above the $136.6 million recorded last year.

MINNEAPOLIS, MN (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Tricord Systems Inc. Thursday announced it has secured over $8 million in venture capital that will be used to help the company extend its position as a leader in the network computing market.

The recent financing brings the total equity investment in Tricord to $17 million. Participants in the latest round of financing included new and existing Tricord investors. Among the investors are IAI Venture Capital of Minneapolis; St. Paul Venture Capital of St. Paul, Minn.; Vanguard Associates of Palo Alto, Calif.; Centennial Funds of Denver, Colo.; Acorn Ventures of Houston, Texas; and Needham & Co. of New York.

Analysts such as Forrester Research of Cambridge, Mass., have praised Tricord's open architecture, scalability, and superior performance, while publications such as PC Week have rated Tricord's PowerFrame as one of the price/performance leaders in the rapidly emerging super-server market.

Tricord distributes its network computers through domestic and international Value Added Resellers and Systems Integrators. PowerFrame servers have been shipping since April, 1990 through its reseller channel to organizations throughout the world. Customers include corporations which are consolidating multiple network servers and those that are moving mainframe applications to PC-based systems.

Tricord's servers combine low-cost, off-the-shelf microcomputer technology, and mainframe performance to deliver true distributed computing. The PowerFrame family of products is based on a client/server architecture that allows customers to take full advantage of the latest generation of networked applications.

Tricord Systems Inc. is a privately held company headquartered in Minneapolis, Minn. It was founded to design, manufacture, and market a new generation of network servers, based on industry standards, to meet the increasing performance and reliability requirements of LANs and client/server computing.

CHESTNUT HILL, MASS. (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - The Neiman Marcus Group Inc. (NYSE:NMG) Thursday reported higher revenues and lower net earnings for the first quarter of its 1991 fiscal year.

For the 13 weeks ended Nov. 3, 1990, revenues were $426.1 million, up 6.8 percent from $399.1 million in the year earlier period. Operating earnings declined 4.0 percent to $30.7 million from $32.0 million the previous year.

The company had net earnings of $10.3 million in the current year's quarter, down 13.6 percent from $11.9 million last year. After preferred dividends, net earnings applicable to common shareholders were 13 cents a share in the current year quarter, compared to 18 cents in the previous year.

Richard A. Smith, chairman and chief executive officer said, ''Operating results in the current year's quarter were reduced by the economic softness which is affecting retail sales. Comparable revenues in the quarter were virtually unchanged from a year ago, a result that was well below our expectations.''

The company reported that its Neiman Marcus division, which accounted for nearly 70 percent of total revenues, had higher revenues and operating earnings in the current year quarter. ''Despite the sluggish retail environment, Neiman Marcus stores were able to record a slight increase in operating earnings compared to a year earlier.

''Our mail order businesses also had higher operating earnings in the current year quarter due to improved performance of Horchow Mail Order, which had a small profit this year compared to an operating loss in last year's quarter,'' Smith said.

''Bergdorf Goodman had higher revenues in the quarter, although the gain was less than anticipated, and operating earnings declined significantly from a year ago. Gross margins were reduced by increased markdown activity required to maintain inventory currency standards,'' Smith reported.

Net interest charges in the current quarter were $9.1 million, compared to $8.2 million a year ago. ''Higher interest charges will reduce net earnings throughout the year,'' Smith said, ''reflecting higher borrowings to support our continuing store remodeling and new store expansion programs.''

The Neiman Marcus Group is a leading specialty retailer which includes Neiman Marcus, Bergdorf Goodman and Contempo Casuals.

ZURICH, SWITZERLAND (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - American International Group Inc. (NYSE:AIG) Thursday listed its common stock on the Stock Exchanges of Zurich, Basle and Geneva.

AIG earlier this year listed on the Paris Bourse, and has been listed on the London Stock Exchange since 1988. Its other listings are on the New York Stock Exchange and the Tokyo Stock Exchange.

In a presentation to the Zurich financial community today held in conjunction with the listing, M.R. Greenberg, AIG chairman and chief executive officer, noted, ''We view the listing of AIG shares in Switzerland as a way, not only to broaden the international shareholding base of AIG, but equally importantly to strengthen our ties with the financial community in Europe.

''As the leading U.S.-based international insurance organization, we intend to build on our very solid base and long experience in Europe to establish an even more significant business presence here in the decade ahead.''

AIG is represented in Switzerland by three wholly-owned entities: UeberseeBank AG, a private banking institution founded in 1965 and offering portfolio management and investment advisory services to an international clientele; Ticino Societa d'Assicurazioni sulla Vita, founded in 1982 and the only Swiss life insurance company headquartered in the Italian region of Switzerland; and a branch of American Home Assurance Co., which conducts general property-casualty insurance operations.

AIG is the leading U.S.-based international insurance organization and the largest underwriter of commercial and industrial insurance in the United States. Its member companies write property, casualty, marine, life and financial services insurance in more than 130 countries and jurisdictions, and are also engaged in a range of financial services businesses.

APPLETON, WI (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Air Wisconsin Thursday announced that it has ordered eight Dash 8 regional airliners from Boeing Canada, de Havilland Division.

The five 37-passenger Dash 8 Series 100s and three 50-passenger Series 300s are slated for delivery between June and September 1991.

Air Wisconsin, operating as United Express, is one of the largest independent regional airlines in the United States. The company serves 30 markets in 11 states with its main hub at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport. Regional markets are also served from Washington's Dulles International Airport.

The new Dash 8's will replace the carrier's F-27 aircraft in the Dulles markets. Air Wisconsin currently operates five F-27s in Dulles service.

In announcing the aircraft order, William J. Andres, Air Wisconsin president and chief executive officer, stated that the new Dash 8's will offer ''enhanced customer comfort and convenience, along with improved reliability and operating economics.

Air Wisconsin has operated de Havilland aircraft in the past, including both the Twin Otter and Dash 7.

Air Wisconsin earlier this week announced the signing of a new five year United Express contract with United Airlines. The new pact replaces the carrier's existing agreement which was to expire in June 1991.

NILES, ILL. (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Midwesco Filter Resources, Inc. Thursday announced higher sales for the third quarter ended October 31.

Earnings declined, a result of planned expenses; gross profit margins were within a range consistent for the company.

Net sales for the quarter ended October 31 were $5,502,000, up six percent from the year earlier $5,187,000.

Income from operations was $459,000, down 32 percent from $675,000 in the year earlier quarter. Net income was $310,000, or 11 cents a share, compared to $419,000, or 15 cents a share on a pro forma basis.

Net income for this year's quarter, at $310,000, or 11 cents a share, compares to $522,000, or 27 cents a share on a historic basis. The company reports both historic and pro forma results for the prior fiscal year because it believes pro forma more closely compares with MFRI's present capital structure. There were 2,810,000 shares outstanding in this year's quarter. Historic per share figures are calculated with the 1,950,000 shares outstanding when Midwesco Filter was part of a private company.

For the nine months, net sales rose to $16,755,000, up nine percent from $15,361,000. Income from operations was $1,585,000, down 15 percent from $1,866,000 in the year earlier period.

Net income was $1,057,000, or 38 cents a share. This compares, on a pro forma basis, to $1,157,000, or 41 cents a share.

This year's nine month net income of $1,057,000, or 38 cents a share, compares to net income on a historic basis of $1,480,000, or 76 cents a share, with 1,950,000 shares outstanding.

With locations in Niles, Illinois and Winchester, Virginia, MFRI is a vertically integrated manufacturer and marketer of filter bags, including its proprietary Seamless TubeTM filter bag, as well as related parts, accessories and services. The company's products and services are used primarily by operators of utility and industrial coal-fired boilers, incinerators and cogeneration plants and by producers of metals, cement, chemical and other industrial products.

OSHKOSH, WI (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - OshKosh B'Gosh Inc. (NASDAQ: GOSHA) announced plans to lease a sewing facility in Choloma, Honduras, in a move that reflects the company's intensified global strategy as well as changing U.S. labor trends.

This will be the first production venture outside the United States for OshKosh B'Gosh, noted Michael Wachtel, senior vice president of operations for the clothing manufacturer. OshKosh B'Gosh has no plans to close or scale back any of its domestic plants, Wachtel emphasized.

"This move reflects both the company's expanded international vision as well as a tightening labor market in the United States, which has made it increasingly difficult for us to find workers for our sewing plants here," Wachtel explained.

Wachtel pointed to a U.S. Commerce Department "Industrial Outlook 1990" report on the apparel industry, which stated that the industry faces a growing labor shortage because of demographic trends, tighter immigration policies that prevent an influx of additional workers and higher wages offered by other industries that are luring workers away from the apparel industry. "The Honduras facility adds another dimension to our sourcing, which we need to remain competitive," Wachtel said.

OshKosh B'Gosh will make clothing there under the "807" tariff program in which U.S. manufacturers export cut apparel parts to overseas plants for assembly, then re-import them as finished products. Duty is charged only on the value added overseas. The plant will employ between 200 and 300 people. OshKosh B'Gosh is currently interviewing in Honduras for management positions.

The Honduras operation will apply the same level of production technology that is used at the company's U.S. plants and the products made there will be of the same high quality that has come to mean OshKosh B'Gosh in the consumer's mind.

The company has not made a final decision on what will be made at the Honduras plant. The facility is still under construction, and Wachtel estimated that it will take a year before the plant is geared up and producing at capacity. Terms of the lease agreement were not disclosed.

OshKosh B'Gosh Inc., headquartered in Oshkosh, is an internationally recognized manufacturer of children's wear, adult sportswear and workwear. The company employs 6,300 people and operates 17 manufacturing facilities in Wisconsin, Kentucky, and Tennessee.

JACKSONVILLE, FL (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - AT&T Universal Card Services Thursday announced the grand opening of its world headquarters center in Jacksonville, Fla.

The center's 1,700 customer associates use a wide range of AT&T's business communications systems and services designed to provide fast and accurate customer service to more than 6.8 million card members in the U.S.

At the heart of the center's private Integrated Services Digital Network (ISDN) are three DEFINITYR Communications Systems Generic 2. From the instant a call is received, the network goes to work ensuring that each customer's request is handled promptly.

All calls are processed through AT&T's Worldwide Intelligent Network. Incoming toll-free customer calls are carried on AT&T MEGACOMR 800 service.

If all lines are busy when a call comes in, a feature called Look-Ahead Interflow (see attached backgrounder) enables the switch to check the status of the other two PBXs using the ''D'' channel of the ISDN Primary Rate Interface (PRI). If--and only if--conditions at another switch are better, the call is transferred.

The information that accompanies incoming calls across AT&T's ISDN network, including Dialed Number Identification Service (DNIS) and Automatic Number Identification (ANI), if available, is transferred along with the call.

The call and accompanying information are passed through the DEFINITY system to an AT&T ISDN Gateway, linking the switch to the center's AT&T System 7000 processors. There, the telephone number is matched against the cardmember database.

The matching customer file is transferred to an associate's screen, along with the call, so the associate can begin handling the customer's request immediately.

When a customer associate needs to return a customer's call, it is carried on AT&T's MEGACOM WATS outbound offering, ensuring quick and reliable service.

Customers calling for account information receive it automatically from one of the center's (number) AT&T CONVERSANT(r) Voice Information Systems. These interactive voice response units automate incoming telephone calls and give customers easy access to transaction processing and information retrieval.

DALLAS (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Richmond Capital Corp. announced Thursday that it has signed a letter of intent to acquire the stock and assets of Spherical Sound Inc., and all of its subsidiaries and divisions, including Quakeawake Inc.

Spherical Sound Inc. is spearheaded by Ken Caillat, president, a well known record producer/engineer who has worked with major recording acts such as Pink Floyd, Fleetwood Mac, etc. Grammy award winning Caillat developed the three dimensional sound microphone system called Spherical Sound, which has already been used by Michael Jackson and Pink Floyd. The system's technology was patented and is being marketed.

In addition to Spherical Sound, Caillat invented, with David Elliot, the revolutionary earthquake detector called Quakeawake. This detector is patented and has been featured extensively on television news programs and most recently was shown on FNN's high tech segment on Nov. 28.

The unit, which can give up to 30 seconds early warning of an impending earthquake, is being installed by many school districts and households throughout the country. As was shown by NBC's ''The Big One'' there are 39 states within the United States that have major earthquake potential.

There are other products in development which will be announced in the future.

The joint companies' financial officer will be Lee Merriwether, an acknowledged financial consultant who has in the recent past worked for Merrill Lynch, etc.

Consummation of the aquisition is subject to the execution of definitive agreements and the approval of the directors and shareholders of both Richmond Capital Corp. and Spherical Sound Inc.

NASHVILLE, TN (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Jerome S. Tannenbaum, chairman and chief executive officer of REN Corporation - USA (NASDAQ/NMS:RENL), Thursday announced that James W. Egan has been named president, chief operating officer and a director of the company.

Egan was previously executive vice president and chief financial officer of REN.

''Jim Egan was hired by REN because of his extensive operating and financial experience,'' stated Dr. Tannenbaum. ''Prior to joining REN in September, he was president and chairman of Preway Inc., a publicly held company.

''His new responsibilities at REN will include managing the finance and day-to-day operations of the company. This will allow me to concentrate on long-range strategies, liaison with the medical community, government relations and new business development,'' continued Dr. Tannenbaum.

''Since our first dialysis clinic opened in 1986, we have experienced rapid growth and are now the fourth largest provider of dialysis services in the nation. We believe that our dialysis centers are among the finest in the world in terms of patient care, longevity and medical systems. We are confident that Jim Egan can grow and manage our financial and operating systems in the same manner,'' concluded Dr. Tannenbaum.

Before joining REN, Egan served as president and chairman of Preway Inc., a manufacturer and marketer of consumer products. Prior to joining Preway, Egan was vice president-finance, treasurer and a director of General Housewares Corp., a manufacturer of houseware products. His responsibilities at General Housewares included all financial accounting, tax, legal, audit, public reporting and planning activities. Egan is a Certified Public Accountant.

REN Corporation - USA is engaged primarily in providing renal dialysis services to patients suffering from chronic kidney failure. Dialysis services are provided principally at the company's 27 freestanding outpatient REN Centers located in ten states.

The company also provides outpatient dialysis services to patients in their homes and inpatient dialysis services through contracts with 20 hospitals. In addition, the company performs blood, tissue and urine testing services for its REN Centers, as well as for independent physicians and industry, at its three clinical laboratories.

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, NC (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - In the event that an earthquake occurs -- as a climatologist has predicted -- next week along the New Madrid fault in Missouri, Northern Telecom is prepared to help its telephone company customers restore service.

The company has delivered more than $2 million of telephone switching equipment to a standby location in the region.

The Northern Telecom switching equipment is being stored in Tulsa, Okla., and in the event of an earthquake, would be deployed to areas most directly affected. According to experts, Oklahoma is not expected to experience significant damage if the prediction holds true.

This preparatory effort is particularly important, though, in areas that may incur direct damage, such as Southeast Missouri and Northeast Arkansas.

''Our customer service philosophy is to help the telephone companies when they need it - and even when they might need it,'' said Les Mesh, vice president for customer service for Northern Telecom's Southwest region. ''Because Northern Telecom has provided equipment and expertise in many disaster recovery efforts, we've learned that it's best to be well-prepared.''

In the event that an earthquake occurs, Northern Telecom will work with its telephone company customers to determine the critical areas where phone service needs to be restored immediately. Emergency services such as police, fire, rescue and medical will take priority.

Northern Telecom has a reputation for responding quickly and effectively in providing emergency telephone service to disaster-stricken regions. In March 1989 the company supplied two DMS-10 switching systems to Valdez, Alaska, doubling the local telephone company's capacity in a matter of days to accommodate the demand for telephone service during cleanup of the oil spill.

Northern Telecom is the leading global supplier of fully digital telecommunications switching systems, providing products and services to telephone operating companies, corporations, governments, universities and other institutions worldwide. Northern Telecom, with 1989 revenues of $6.1 billion, employs more than 49,000 people around the world.

MORRISTOWN, NJ (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Tom L. Powers, president of AT&T's Cellular Systems business unit, will retire after 33 years of service, the company announced Thursday.

Jim Brewington, regional vice president of AT&T Network System's Western Region, has been named to succeed Powers. Brewington -- who began his AT&T career in June, 1968, and has held various positions in the areas of account management, product planning, engineering and installation -- will report to Bill Marx, president of AT&T Network Systems.

''Tom Powers has had a long and distinguished career at AT&T,'' said Bill Marx. ''His experience with cellular goes back to 1962, when he was among the group of AT&T Bell Laboratories researchers who built the first experimental cellular system. Under his leadership at AT&T Network Systems, our cellular systems business has grown to a position of market leadership in the United States, and won its first contracts abroad.''

SHREVEPORT, LA (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Arkla Inc. (NYSE:ALG) Thursday announced that its merger with Diversified Energies Inc. (NYSE:DEI) has been completed.

Minnegasco, the 650,000 customer gas distribution company headquartered in Minneapolis, is now a division of Arkla. Other subsidiaries of DEI are now subsidiaries of Arkla.

With the completion of the merger, DEI stockholders automatically became stockholders of Arkla.

As previously announced, Minnegasco and other DEI subsidiaries, E.F. Johnson Inc., EnScan Inc., and Minneapolis Energy Center Inc. will continue to maintain their headquarters in Minneapolis.

Albert Etchelecu, former chairman, president and chief executive officer of DEI, will serve as vice dhairman of the Board of Arkla and continue as chairman and chief executive officer of Minnegasco, with general management responsibility for the radio communication businesses as well.

Mack McLarty will continue as chairman, president and chief executive officer of Arkla Inc. In addition to Etchelecu, Joe E. Chenoweth, Pierson M. Grieve, and Daniel Yankelovich, previously members of the DEI board of directors, have become directors of Arkla Inc.

''This is a major accomplishment for Arkla,'' said McLarty. ''We believe that this merger has produced one of the strongest gas companies in the nation.''

Arkla is now a company with $5 billion in assets, $3 billion in annual revenues and 10,000 employees. The addition of Minnegasco will increase the number of Arkla's distribution customers to approximately 2.6 million, third largest among U.S. natural gas companies.

With the addition of Dyco, DEI's exploration and production company, Arkla will have over 900 billion cubic feet of gas reserves, ranking it among the nation's leaders. Arkla Pipeline Group is ranked sixth among U.S. pipelines.

Arkla is traded on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol ALG.

WORCESTER, MA (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - The board of directors of Peoples Bancorp of Worcester Inc. (NASDAQ:PEBW), the holding company for Peoples Savings Bank, Thursday voted its regular quarterly dividend of 31 cents per share on the company's common stock.

The dividend is payable on or about Jan. 18, 1991, to shareholders of record on Jan. 2, 1991.

''Despite today's difficult economic environment, Peoples remains one of the few New England banking institutions which has neither reduced nor eliminated its dividend,'' said Woodbury C. Titcomb, president and chief executive officer. ''We are pleased that the strength and soundness of Peoples allows us to maintain our record of providing favorable returns to shareholders.''

Following 15 consecutive quarters of dividend increases, Peoples announced, on Aug. 30, 1990, a new policy of considering dividend increases on an annualized basis. Subject to continued satisfactory financial performance, Peoples expects to maintain its regular quarterly dividend of 31 cents per share, or an annualized rate of $1.24.

Through its principal subsidiary, Peoples Savings Bank, the company provides a wide range of retail and commercial banking services to a broad customer base throughout 28 offices located in central Massachussetts.

CLEVELAND, OH (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Ameritrust Corporation announced today that a new division is being formed within its Trust and Investment Management Group to meet the financial needs of high net worth individuals and emerging affluent customers. The Personal Financial Services division combines personal trust with private banking, retirement products and securities services.

Heading this group is David M. Zarnoch, who has been promoted to executive vice president -- Personal Financial Services. He will report to Frank I. Harding, III, president and CEO -- Trust and Investment Management Group.

Historically, these areas have been structured along separate product lines, some reporting through non-trust areas. The new group brings them together with a strong focus on the non-traditional banking needs of this customer group. Specifically, working with Investment Management, it will provide a full array of services including trust administration, portfolio management, financial and retirement planning, tax services, brokerage services for equities and fixed income products, and sophisticated credit services. In addition, working with the Consumer Banking Group, it will continue to offer the full range of traditional bank products. The initial marketing efforts will focus on northern Ohio.

Zarnoch began his career with the company in 1973 as assistant economist, rising to the position of vice president and economist. Subsequently, he moved into the commercial bank holding several positions before being named senior vice president responsible for Merchant Banking. He holds a bachelor of arts degree in economics from Bethany College and a Ph.D. in economics from West Virginia University.

ANAHEIM, CALIF. (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Responding to the cable industry's desire to develop alternative revenue streams, Video Jukebox Network (VJN)(NASDAQ:JUKE) has begun entering into partnerships with cable operators to market audiotext programs to subscribers.

VJN and participating cable opertors will market these targeted interactive 900 telephone programs via unused commercial inventory time on satellite delivered basic caable networks, company President/Chief Executive Officer Andrew H. Orgel told a panel here Thursday at the 1990 Western Cable Show.

Current affiliates of The Jukebox Network will be offered the first opportunity to participate in the new business opportunity. After the initial affiliation phase reserved for Jukebox affiliates, the service will be offered to the industry at large.

The 22 charter affiliates with over 1.2 million subscribers now participating in the program include: TCI Cable, Miami; Wade Cablevision, Philadelphia; Cooke Cablevision, Tuscon, Az.; Metrovision of Prince George's County, Md.; Bardan Cablevision, Detroit; United Cable, Baltimore, and Van Nuys, Calif.; Cox Cable of Middle Georgia; Adelphia Cable, Miami; U.S. Cable of Paterson, N.J.; Gilbert Cable, Newark, N.J.; Bay Cablevision, Richmond, Calif.; Multivision Cable, Lanham, Md.; Paragon Cable, Portland, Ore. and Minneapolis; Warner Cable, Bakersfield, Calif. and Cincinnati; and Comcast Cable, Fullerton, Santa Ana, and San Bernadino, Calif.

''The video/audio retailing business is exploding throughout the United States '' Orgel said. ''It is potentially a far bigger business than that limited only to home shopping services and pay-per-view. The irony is that the cable operator who carries audiotext advertising and related programming doesn't share in the revenue.

''This is an opportunity to use VJN's significant experience in interactive telephone applications to develop a new revenue stream for the cable industry.''

Video Jukebox Network Inc. is an interactive television company that currently operates 121 units of The Jukebox Network, the leading interactive television network in the country. The Jukebox Network is available in 30 states and reaches over 10 million households.

ATLANTA (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Automobile Protection Corporation, 1/8NASDAQ: APCOU (Units), APCOW (Warrants), APCO (Common)3/8 Thursday announced record revenues for the fourth quarter and fiscal year ended Aug. 31 and record fourth quarter net income.

For the three months ended August 31, 1990, revenues reached $5,833,453, an increase of 79 percent from revenues of $3,267,538 in the comparable quarter last year. Net income reached $234,600, or $.04 per share, in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 compared to a net loss of $49,798, or $.01 per share, in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1989. Revenues for fiscal 1990 increased 50 percent to $16,399,380 from $10,908,006 in the prior fiscal year. Net income rose to $203,651, or $.04 per share, from $189,300, or $.04 per share, in the prior year.

Larry I. Dorfman, president of APCO, commented, ''Reporting our sixth year of record revenues is extremely gratifying, and demonstrates APCO's expanding market share of the extended vehicle service agreement industry. APCO's extended vehicle service agreements and related dealership management programs continue to be in demand as they offer auto dealers a proven means to significantly enhance dealership profits.'' Dorfman continued, ''A higher level of profitability in the fourth quarter reflects the return on the investment the company made over the prior twelve months in facilities, personnel, and the acquisition of subsidiaries to enhance and support our growth. We believe revenue and profitability growth will proceed on record pace over the coming year and beyond, as we continue to add new auto dealerships to our customer base and expand our services to our existing customers throughout the country.''

Automobile Protection Corporation is a leading administrator and marketer of products and services to automobile dealers, distributors and leasing companies which are designed to enhance customer satisfaction, revenues and profitability. APCO's core business is the marketing and management of extended vehicle service agreements. APCO also develops and markets sales management software; provides on-site aftermarket consulting; and offers integrated computer information systems for overall dealership management.

BOSTON (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - At its meeting Thursday, the board of BayBanks Inc. gave approval to a plan to consolidate virtually all the company's Massachusetts banking business into one institution under the BayBank name.

The bank will be headquartered in Boston, with major banking offices in Boston Burlington, Dedham, and Springfield. Upon completion of the consolidation in mid-1991, the bank will have assets of approximately $10,000,000,000.

BayBank Harvard Trust Co., headquartered in Cambridge, will be retained to specialize in Private Banking and service to not-for-profit organizations. BayBank First Easthampton, N.A., and BayBank Connecticut, N.A. in Hartford, also will operate separately.

The present board of BayBanks Inc. will also serve as the board of the new bank. In that connection, BayBanks announced today the election of three new directors: Samuel J. Gerson of Newton, chairman and chief executive officer of Filene's Basement; Arlene Arruda McNamee of New Bedford, vice president of Richards & Davis; and Joseph H. Torras of Shelburne, president and chairman of Preco Corp. The new board members currently serve (in the order named) on the boards of BayBank Middlesex, Burlington; BayBank South, Dedham; and BayBank Valley Trust Co., Springfield.

Regional boards throughout the state will continue as an important aspect of the company's traditional governance structure.

It is contemplated that the three principal officers of the parent company, William H. Crozier Jr., chairman and chief executive officer, Richard F. Pollard, vice chairman, and William T. Sandalls Jr., vice chairman, would hold similar positions in the new bank. Giles E. Mosher Jr., currently president of BayBank Middlesex, would be president of the bank. Thomas M. Whitney, president of BayBank Boston, N.A., Trumbull C. Curtiss, president of BayBank South, and Richard A. Stebbins, president of BayBank Valley Trust Co., would be named regional presidents.

In his comments about the plan, Crozier stated, ''This step represents a natural evolution in the long history of BayBanks. The company has gone through cycles of expansion and consolidation according to the dictates of the times. This latest move, following on the heels of a major growth surge in the 1980s, will build a strong platform for growth in the 1990s and into the 21st Century,'' he added.

BOSTON (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - The trustees of Bradley Real Estate Trust (AMEX:BTR) Thursday declared a quarterly dividend of $.15 per share payable on December 21 to shareholders of record, Dec. 10, 1990.

This compares with a $.20 dividend in the previous quarter. The reduced dividend reflects the trustees' belief that the retention of capital is the most prudent course to follow given current economic conditions. It will also allow the trust to better address its long-term objectives, including renovations, tenant improvements and other expenditures associated with the leasing and marketing programs at the trust's properties.

The trust's shopping centers are 95 percent leased and continue to experience the benefits of recent renovation programs with several quality new tenants. Additionally, the diversity of tenancies provides the trust with a strong base of quality tenants.

Bradley Real Estate Trust is the oldest continuously qualified REIT in the United States and owns seven shopping centers and mixed used properties in the Midwest and Northeast.

CONCORD, NH (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - New Hampshire Savings Bank Corp. (NASDAQ:NHSB) announced Thursday that John J. O'Brien Jr. has been elected president and chief operating officer of the company.

Mr. O'Brien serves as president and chief executive officer of New Hampshire Savings Bank, the company's principal affiliate bank.

Lawrence Connell, chairman and chief executive officer of the company, said, ''Mr. O'Brien's election reflects the reorganization of New Hampshire Savings Bank Corp. following the merger of the company's two largest affiliate banks, New Hampshire Savings Bank and New Hampshire Savings Bank South, and anticipates the merger of the company's two remaining affiliate banks, Rockingham County Trust Co. and Seabrook Bank and Trust Co., into this lead bank to form one banking institution.''

Between 1985 and 1989, Mr. O'Brien served as president and chief executive officer of First Federal Bank, FSB of Nashua, N.H. Under his leadership the bank became a competitive and profitable consumer and commercial mortgage lender. In 1988, Mr. O'Brien negotiated the sale of First Federal Bank to New Hampshire Savings Bank Corp. then guided New Hampshire Savings Bank South, as the bank was renamed, through a consolidation process which significantly reduced annual operating expenses.

In 1990, Mr. O'Brien became president and chief executive officer of Randolph Savings Bank of Randolph, Mass. Mr. O'Brien began his banking career with Consumer Savings Bank of Westboro, Mass. in 1970, rising from controller to senior vice president before joining First Federal Bank. A graduate of the College of the Holy Cross, and a certified public accountant, he served as senior accountant with Deloitte and Touche in New York and as an accountant with two manufacturing firms in Massachusetts before entering banking.

Mr. O'Brien, who is 51, lives in Nashua with his wife and two children. The company also announced that Alan G. Jeffery and Frederick B. Kfoury Jr. have been elected to the board of directors. Mr. Jeffery, president of Whitney Screw Corp. of Nashua, N.H., served as vice chairman of New Hampshire Savings Bank South of Nashua until its merger with New Hampshire Savings Bank of Concord in November 1990.

Mr. Kfoury, president, chief executive officer and chief operating officer of Central Paper Products Co. Inc. of Manchester, N.H., joined the board of directors of New Hampshire Savings Bank in 1989. Both Messrs. Jeffery and Kfoury also serve on the board of directors of New Hampshire Savings Bank, the company's lead bank.

The company announced that its common stock will not be listed for quotation on the NASDAQ system as of Dec. 11, 1990. The company's net worth does not meet the standards required by the National Association of Securities Dealers. Bid and asked quotations on the company's common stock can be obtained from brokers through the National Quotation Bureau's ''Pink Sheets,'' an information service providing quotations for more than 10,000 over-the-counter securities issues.

New Hampshire Savings Bank Corp., headquartered in Concord, N.H., is the fourth largest bank holding company in the state with assets of $1.24 billion and deposits insured by the FDIC to the maximum extent permitted by law, serving individuals, corporations and municipalities throughout central anad southern New Hampshire.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Frank B. Hall & Co. Inc. (NYSE:FBH), one of the world's largest insurance brokers, announced Thursday the establishment of a joint venture with former Alexander Howden Ltd. Deputy Chairman Bernard Steinart and others to be called ''Leslie & Godwin Insurance Brokers Limited'' (LGIB).

The joint venture will specialize in energy and marine insurance as well as North American property and casualty business.

LGIB will be a subsidiary of Leslie & Godwin Ltd., Hall's wholly-owned subsidiary based in the U.K. LGIB will combine a new team of 36 specialists in energy and North American wholesale insurance together with existing operations of Leslie & Godwin Marine Holdings, North American and Energy Resources. Approximately 180 people will be based in London, with branch operations being set up in Canada and the United States.

According to Donald R. Bell, chairman and chief executive officer of Hall, ''The addition of this group of outstanding insurance professionals further strengthens Frank B. Hall's international network, and expands our ability to take advantage of the oportunities to be created in 1992 by the European Economic Community.''

Antony Pinsent, group chairman of Leslie & Godwin, said, ''The new company is dedicated to building an organization which places business in London and other world markets and will specifically sieze the opportunities created as Lloyd's moves towards composite syndicates and breaks down the traditional market barriers.''

Steinart will be chairman of LGIB. His team includes three former board directors of Alexander Howden Limited: Brian Ainsworth, Mike McDermott and Ian Waite.

Steinart commented, ''This is a prime opportunity to build a major energy broking company in advance of market changes. The company will benenfit from Leslie & Godwin's excellent reputation and will also take advantage of 1990s innovation, thinking and technology.''

Ian Waite is the principal market figure involved and was formerly chairman of Alexander Howden Marine and Energy. He is joined by Igor Best-Devereux, (previously Deputy chairman of Alexander Howden Marine and Energy), Richard Allerdyce, Mike Beard, Geoff Sloan, Neil Golder (former Managing Directors of Alexander Howden Marine and Energy), and Mark Kettle, (former Managing Director of Gallagher Plumer North America Limited).

The management team has been joined by many of their former colleagues, including Mike Johnson who will work with McDermott in the new Toronto operation.

The new team together with those operations of Leslie & Godwin headed up by Jim Monk, managing director of Energy Resources; Ian Jeffery, chairman of Marine Holdings; and Rob Gladdis, managing director of North America, will create one of the largest and most experienced broking teams in the market.

SYDNEY, Australia (NOV. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - In an address to the Securities Institute in Sydney Thursday, Managing Director of Westpac Banking Corp. (NYSE:WBK) Stuart Fowler said that ''Australia is facing a difficult environment in which to restart and reorient the economy, and we will have no other choice than to be more competitive.

''In the context of this difficult economic environment, the banking industry will have a major role to play,'' Fowler said. ''...Not as a mechanism for the distribution of social benefits (but in terms of providing) efficient distribution of financial services which will be essential if the economy is to be fully responsive to changes in international trade.''

While there are indications that economic recovery for Australia could commence by around the middle of 1991, ''Lasting improvement will, however, depend on significant change in the economy,'' Fowler said.

The Australian economy will need to respond to pressures for greater efficiency and to develop greater export capacity, particularly in the services area.

''Australia's success in pursuing this export-oriented strategy will, of course, depend on our ability to improve our productivity and, thereby, our competitiveness,'' Fowler said.

''In adjusting to the current economic environment, both domestically and internationally, Westpac is undertaking a thorough reassessment of its strategies and operations, including a more rigorous approach to achieving improved efficiency and productivity,'' Fowler said. ''Westpac will be focusing more on our core businesses and related activities where we are capable of achieving a competitive edge.

''It is very pleasing to note that the Capital Markets survey conducted by Australian Business magazine and Ernst and Young has found that Westpac leads performance in the industry by a significant margin,'' Fowler added.

Westpac Banking Corp. is an international financial services group headquartered in Australia, with operations extending offshore to 29 countries. In its home markets of Australia, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea and the South West Pacific, Westpac offers a full range of banking and financial services. Specialized services are provided through Westpac offices in Asia, Europe and the United States.

The company reports results of the third quarter of 1990 reflect the continuing growth of the company's telecommunications business. Growth has been slower than that previously experienced, due to increased market pressure particularly from AT&T, says Prime. This pressure resulted in significant price decreases by the company and increased customer attrition. Costs and expenses also increased, according to Prime. The company's location is 5 Triad Center, #600, Salt Lake City, UT 84180. Its telephone number is (801) 575-8222.

WASHINGTON (NOV 29) - The World Bank announced Thursday, for the second time, that it had approved loans totalling 450 million dollars to Brazil. This time, the bank meant it.

Exactly two weeks after the bank mistakenly announced the loans, it confirmed Thursday that it would now go ahead with the financial help to strengthen Brazil's private sector and scientific and technological research.

The previous announcement was made despite an apparent veto of the loans by Japan and the United States, which both wanted firmer guarantees that Brazil would resume debt repayments to major commercial lenders.

Sources said Thursday that the United States, whose President George Bush is scheduled to visit Brazil next week, had since lifted its objections.

The World Bank is advancing Brazil 300 million dollars for reinvestment in the private sector and 150 million dollars to help finance scientific and technological research.

Linked to the World Bank loan for the private sector is a 250-million dollar loan from the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB), also to help finance private investment.

WASHINGTON, (NOV 29) - The United States should avoid a recession next year, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) said Thursday.

In a study of the U.S. economy, the Paris-based OECD contradicted the majority opinion of leading U.S. economists by predicting continued, albeit modest growth well into next year.

And, the report suggests, the sluggish growth should help the United States cut its trade deficit because while "U.S. exports are projected to expand more rapidly than markets ... domestic demand is very soft."

According to the OECD, "The (U.S.) economy is growing only very slowly, relying almost wholly on net export growth to sustain demand."

The expected rise in U.S. exports was partly due, said the international agency, to the recent fall in the value of the dollar.

The OECD predicts a continued cautious approach by the Federal Reserve to money supply and interest rates and continued rising unemployment.

"With monetary policy having to remain relatively cautious, because of inflation dangers," said the report, "GNP (gross national product growth) may remain rather slow until the middle of 1991.

"Thereafter, consumption should begin to grow more in line with income, and GNP growth should begin to recover."

The OECD predicted that as unemployment rose above what it termed "its natural rate," or about five-and-a-half per cent, inflation pressures should ease.

"The recent increases in energy prices," it concludes, "are thus expected to be temporary, with consumer price inflation returning to about five per cent by the end of 1992."

LONDON, (NOV 29) - British and U.S. troops in the Gulf were placed on their highest alert since the August 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, the BBC said Thursday, quoting reports from the Gulf.

A report from the British domestic news agency Press Association's correspondent in the Gulf said forces had been placed on special alert for an Iraqi air strike.

The Yellow alert has been declared because of fears of Iraqi retaliation to the U.N. resolution supporting the use of force to liberate Kuwait, the report said.

All troops were ordered to carry their NBC (Nuclear, Biological, Chemical) protection suits and respirators with them at all times, the report said.

WASHINGTON (NOV 29) - U.S. President George Bush hailed Thursday's U.N. Security Council vote authorizing the use of force to dislodge Iraq from Kuwait as a "very powerful statement" but reiterated his hopes for a peaceful resolution of the crisis.

"The U.N. sent a very powerful statement that will be heard around the world ... and everybody ought to understand how strong it is and how important it is " he told reporters at the White House shortly after the U.N. vote.

"Everybody wants a peaceful resolution ... I hope we're closer to peace," he added, reiterating the U.S. view that the resolution threatening a military strike if Iraq does not withdraw from Kuwait by Janaury 15 will convince Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to back down on his claims over the tiny emirate.

"I think this would drive home the point to (Mr. Hussein) that he's got to get out of Kuwait," he said.

ARLINGTON, Virginia (NOV 29) - Japan has been invited to send engineers to work and train at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, Texas, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) said Thursday.

The U.S. space agency, in a brief statement issued at the end of a four-day meeting here with representatives of the Space Activities Commission of Japan (SAC), said the Japanese engineers would work at Johnson during mission preparation and operations activities for the Spacelab-J mission.

"This," said NASA, "will enable Japan to obtain additional flight operations experience prior to the Space Station era."

During this week's meetings, said NASA, the U.S. agency told Katsushita Ida, director general of the research and development bureay of Japan's Science and Technology Agency (STA), that "two Japanese candidates are invited to join the next NASA mission specialist training class, beginning in July 1992."

The U.S. space agency added: "It is NASA's intent to offer a space shuttle flight assignment to one or both of the Japanese mission specialist candidates in the years following the successful completion of the training program."

NASA and the STA are also "actively reviewing options for flying Japanese Experimental Module (JEM) hardware on a space shuttle in the mid-1990's."

BAGHDAD (NOV. 30) - Former president of Nicaragua Daniel Ortega met Thursday for the second time in two weeks with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein for talks on the Gulf crisis, the Iraqi News Agency said.

Mr. Ortega arrived here Wednesday from Amman on his second trip to Iraq this month. He had a first meeting with President Hussein on November 15.

INA said Mr. Hussein told the former Nicaraguan leader that Iraq wanted peace and respected any efforts for peace that were "devoid of aggressive aims." He said respect for international law should include recognition of the rights of the Palestinian people.

Mr. Ortega, Marxist leader of Nicaragua until his defeat in a free election earlier this year, denounced the "logic of threats and aggression" and said Iraq had the "support of the Nicaraguan people in the face of any aggression," according to INA.

Before arriving in Baghdad from Amman, Mr. Ortega said conditions were favorable for a negotiated settlement to the Gulf crisis and that he hoped to make a "contribution to bringing about peace."

TOKYO (NOV. 30) - Kokusai Denshin Denwa Co. (KDD) said Friday it has signed an agreement with North Korea to open a direct telecommunication circuit between the two countries via the Intelsat satellite.

The agreement was signed Thursday in Pyongyang between Japan's international telecommunications giant KDD and North Korea's Ministry of Post and Telecommunications, KDD officials said.

Under the agreement, three telephone cicuits and 10 telex circuits will be opened later in the year, they said.

KDD also agreed with North Korea to start international television transmisson service if necessary.

Japan and North Korea are currently linked by short wave radio or connections via China.

Observers said the agreement could boost discussions on establishing diplomatic ties between Tokyo and Pyongyang.

In a surprise turnabout, North Korean President Kim Il-Sung proposed to set up diplomatic ties with Tokyo in September in an apparent move to get capital and technology from Japan to boost its debt-ridden, stagnant economy.

Japan and North Korea have since held two rounds of preliminary official conctacts in Beijing with a third round scheduled for mid-December.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 30) - U.S. President George Bush called Thursday the United Nations adoption of a resolution backing military force against Iraq ''very good news'' and said he hoped now the world was ''closer to peace'' as a result.

''I think this will drive home the point to him (Iraqi President Saddam Hussein) that he's got to get out of Kuwait,'' Bush said.

The president told reporters he believed the resolution, which sanctions the use of force should Iraq not withdraw from Kuwait by January 15, was ''a very powerful statement''.

Asked if the world was closer to war, Bush said: ''Everybody wants a peaceful resolution ... I hope we're closer to peace.''

He ignored a question on whether he would order a special session of Congress to debate the Gulf crisis, merely saying the resolution was ''very good news, very good news''.

In a written statement later, he said the resolution ''underscores the unity and determination of the international commuity to end Iraq's illegal occupation of Kuwait''.

He said the United States would ''continue working with all countries for the express purpose of having the United Nations Security Council resolution fully implemented''.

''We continue to favour a peaceful settlement of this crisis at the same time, and as the Security Council demonstrates, there is growing resolve that Saddam's occupation of Kuwait not be allowed to stand and that all necessary means be employed to ensure this is the case,'' he added.

MANAGUA (NOV. 29) - Two Cuban doctors who took refuge in the Costa Rican Embassy here have been granted political asylum in that country and left Thursday for San Jose, officials said.

The physicians, identified as Gilberto Perez and Mario Reyes, entered the Costa Rican mission Friday, saying they felt persecuted by Cuban authorities.

The doctors were in Nicaragua as part of a Cuban medical team, and were to have returned to their island nation soon.

Nicaragua treated them as refugees and granted them the necessary documentation to leave for Costa Rica, a spokeswoman for the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry said.

LA PAZ (NOV. 30) - The presidents of the five Andes mountain states in South America began a two-day conference in the Bolivian capital Thursday to discuss joint action against drug trafficking and ways of improving economic ties.

The state chiefs of Colombia, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador and Venezuela - who together make up the Andean Group - are expected to agree on a plan to tighten controls on the use of light aircraft, particularly in the Amazon jungle regions.

Light aircraft are often flown by cocaine smugglers using illegal landing strips in the jungle regions which cover the territories of all five countries.

Some 80 per cent of all cocaine traded illegally worldwide comes from the Andes region, mostly from Colombia, Peru and Bolivia.

Also on the agenda is the future of the the Group's economic union, formed 21 years ago, which has not provided members with the hoped-for upturn in trade.

Peruvian President Alberto Fujimori and Bolivian President Jaime Paz have called on the Andean Group to consider a cooperation agreement with other economic groupings in Latin America.

LONDON (NOV 30) - Britain's opposition Labour Party convincingly won by-elections in Paisley North and South although they saw their share of the vote slip, results Friday showed.

Labour had been expected to defend their big majorities in both Scottish seats in the polling Thursday, two days after John Major was elected leader of the ruling Conservatives to replace Margaret Thatcher as prime minister.

Results gave Labour 44 percent and 46 percent in Paisley North and Paisley South respectively (against 53 and 57 percent in 1987).

The Scottish National Party garnered 29 and 28 percent respectively while the Conservatives won 15 and 13 percent.

The by-elections had been called following the deaths of the Labour members of parliament in the two constituencies.

BERLIN (NOV 30) - Germany's first free general election as a unified country since the rise of Adolf Hitler is based on a tried-and-tested system in use in West Germany for four decades.

The 656 deputies to the Bundestag, the powerful lower house of parliament, will be chosen by direct vote and proportional representation.

Each voter has two ballot sheets. One selects an MP by simple majority to 328 constituencies, the other chooses the remaining MPs according to a party list. Parties need at least five per cent of the vote in order to be alloted seats.

The five-percent threshold, which aims at preventing the creation of unstable splinter parties, is being applied separately in the former territory of East Germany, where 144 seats are being contested.

The federal supreme court ruled that it would unfair to the small parties that are specific to the fledgling eastern democracy to have to get a nationwide share in an electorate of 59.9 million.

The outgoing four-year Bundestag had 663 members, 144 of whom were East Germans who came to Bonn after the October 3 unification, when their assembly was dissolved.

The Christian Democratic Union (CDU) of Chancellor Helmut Kohl and its Bavarian partner, the Christian Social Union (CSU), had 305 seats, 71 in eastern Germany.

Its partner in the Bonn coalition, the Free Democratic Party (FDP) of Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, had 57 seats, of which nine are in the east.

The main opposition, the Social Democratic Party (SPD), had 226 seats, 33 from former East Germany.

The other groups in parliament are the Greens (49, of which seven from the east), and the once-ruling east German Communist Party, now renamed the Party of Democratic Socialism (PDS), which had 24 deputies, exclusively in the east.

The total was completed by two independents.

NEW YORK (NOV. 30) - The United States, the Soviet Union, France and Britain will make Iraqi President Saddam Hussein legally responsible for any use of chemical or biological weapons in an armed conflict in the Gulf, it was agreed here.

The four permanent members of the United Nations Security Council reached agreement on Saddam's liability following the special Council session to adopt a resolution authorising military force against Iraq, French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said.

In speeches to the Security Council Thursday, foreign ministers from the four countries had referred to the possibility of making Saddam legally responsible for any deployment of poison weapons.

Iraq has already used chemical weapons in its eight-year war against Iran, and also against Kurdish rebels on Iraqi territory.

NEW YORK, UNITED NATIONS, (NOV 29) - China Thursday justified its decision not to join the four other permanent members of the U.N. Security Council in endorsing the use-of-force resolution against Iraq by arguing that it is Beijing's policy to solve conflicts by peaceful means.

"The Chinese delegation," Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen said before the vote, "finds it difficult to vote in favor" of the resolution because it "goes against a consistent position of the Chinese Government, that is, to do everything possible to find a peaceful solution" in cases of conflict.

China abstained, with Cuba and Yemen voting against the resolution and the other 12 members in favor.

China did not exercise its veto power because the resolution demanded that Iraq comply with all the previous resolutions demanding an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait, and China voted in favor of those resolutions, Mr. Qian added.

Recalling Beijing's support for the earlier resolutions, he said "the Gulf crisis is the result of the Iraqi invasion and annexation of Kuwait and, so far, Iraq has not taken any practical measure on the key question of the withdrawal of its troops."

Mr. Qian warned that the United Nations must "answer to history and act with extreme caution to avoid any hasty action when it concerns a matter as important as the authorization of certain member states to take military action against another member state."

While the peaceful option might take longer, "its cost would be less and the consequences less severe that a solution requiring the use of force."

The international community, he said, should maintain and strengthen its political, diplomatic and economic pressure on Iraq, avoiding military means as long as there was a hope of preserving peace.

TOKYO (NOV. 30) - Japan's seasonally adjusted jobless rate stood at 2.2 percent in October, unchanged from September, the Management and Coordination Agency said.

It said the number of unemployed in October totaled 1.39 million, an increase of 20,000 or 1.5 percent from a year earlier, including 820,000 men and 570,000 women.

The number of employed totaled 63.26 million in October, up 1.32 million or 2.1 percent from year earlier, including 37.61 million men and 25.66 million women.

The Labor Ministry meanwhile said in a separate report published Friday that there were 142 job openings for every 100 job seekers in October.

LE HAVRE, FRANCE (NOV. 30) - A shipment of 700 metric tons of frozen Japanese sea scallops were being held up at this northern French port for tests on levels of the toxic PSP, port officials said on Thursday.

The scallops, packaged in sacks and cartons, filled 35 containers weighing 20 tons each and were being kept in refrigerated warehouses in the port, the officials said.

The tests would mean the shellfish would not be ready in time for Christmas sales, said Dr. Philippe David, head of the port's veterinary services.

Last spring, tests run on scallops from Japan had indicated the presence of toxins in amounts within European norms.

SEOUL (NOV. 30) - Expensive oil and sluggish exports gave South Korea an October current account trade deficit of more than half a billion dollars, the worst in eights years, the central Bank of Korea said Friday.

South Korea also ended up 10 million dollars in the red with the United States for October, the first trade deficit with its biggest trade partner since a 29 million dollar deficit in January 1983, the bank said.

The overall current account deficit was 579 million dollars, the largest since November 1982 when South Korea was in the red for 642 million dollars and the first after three months of surpluses, the central bank said.

The month put the annual deficit at 1.323 billion dollars for the first 10 months of 1990.

November figures threaten to be even worse. The national Yonhap news agency quoted a BOK official as saying the deficit would hover between one billion and 1.5 billion dollars, the worst since the central bank began compiling balance of payment statistics in 1950.

South Korea imported 636.6 million dollars worth of crude oil in October, an increase of 65.5 per cent over the same period last year. A high number of holidays in October hurt exports, the bank said.

HELSINKI (NOV. 29) - Finland's oil imports from the Soviet Union will drop about 30 percent this year because Moscow is not able to deliver the agreed amount, the Finnish state-run oil company, Neste, said here Thursday.

Neste had reached agreement earlier with the Soviet Union on a total 8.5 million tons of imported crude oil this year.

According to Neste's estimate, the Soviet deliveries will be about six million tons.

The vast majority of Finland's imported oil had come from the neighbouring Soviet Union, but Neste must now import at least 2.5 million tons from the West and Gulf area, the company said.

JOHANNESBURG (NOV. 29) - Cable News Network (CNN) may soon be beaming its 24-hour news coverage to South African audiences, a newspaper reported here Thursday.

Sidney Pike, CNN's president of international special projects, hopes to clinch a deal with the state-run South African Broadcasting Corporation (SABC), which controls all broadcasting in South Africa, the Johannesburg Star reported.

Mr. Pike said here that a "co-operative arrangement" had to be reached with the SABC and with South Africa's independent cable television network, M-NET, before South Africans could have CNN in their homes.

At present, the SABC uses CNN newscasts in their television news and broadcasts a lunch-hour news and business CNN special.

TOKYO (NOV. 29) - Direct investment abroad by Japanese firms fell 10 percent to 27.7 billion dollars in the first six months of the fiscal year starting April compared to the same period last year, Japan's finance ministry said Thursday.

The drop is the first on a half-year basis since 1986, when massive amounts of yen began flowing toward Europe, the United States and Asia. Japanese investment in Africa remains low, the ministry said.

The ministry said the fall was caused by the setting up of Japanese production plants in some countries reaching saturation point and a temporary halt in Japanese capital exports.

Japanese participation in foreign ventures slightly decreased by 200 million dollars to 17.67 billion dollars. Several projects were suspended due to financial difficulties linked to the fall of the Tokyo stock exchange.

The crisis in the U.S. junk bond market also contributed to the slowdown in Japanese investments in the United States.

If the trend continues, fiscal 1990, will show the first drop in overseas Japanese investment since 1982, even with the recent 6.2 billion dollar acquisition of MCA by Matsushita.

TOKYO (NOV. 29) - Australia Thursday urged Japan to open its rice market and to exercise leadership in international farm negotiations, Japanese officials said.

The appeal was made by Australian Primary Industries and Energy Minister John Kerin and his Department Secretary Geoff Miller during their meeting with Japan's Minister for Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries Tomio Yamamoto.

Mr. Kerin was quoted as saying that Japan as an economic superpower should use its leadership to achieve a successful outcome in the Uruguay Round of multilateral trade talks under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade to begin Monday in Brussels.

In his reply, Mr. Yamamoto said "Free trade is important but the situation of farming differs for each country. What is necessary is cooperation between farm product exporting countries and importing countries."

Mr. Miller, who conceded that the rice issue is a difficult problem, expessed hope that Japan will send a signal to quicken developments in farm negotiations.

The Australian officials are visiting Japan as part of a campaign to promote exports of Australian wools.

MANILA (NOV. 29) - U.S. and Philippine negotiators began meeting here Thursday to discuss American troop reduction levels in military bases in the country after 1991, Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus said.

He expressed hope that the two countries could reach a "basic agreement" by January on the future of Clark Air Base and Subic Naval Base, the two largest American military facilities overseas, whose lease runs out on September 16, 1991.

Washington is seeking a 10-12 year "transition period" during which the American military presence in this former colony would be progressively reduced, and has asked for some form of access to the military bases into the 21st century.

Manila wants "sovereign control" of Clark and four support facilities so the Philippine military could take over, and some parts could be transformed for commercial use, but offered a five to seven-year extension for Washington to phase out of Subic.

Mr. Manglapus said Thursday that the U.S. panel is asking "that even at the end of the phaseout they be allowed access to the ship repair facilities in Subic."

Subic, which guards vital sealanes and is the main logistics and repair facility of the Japan-based U.S. 7th fleet, is considered the more important of the two major bases.

The United States earlier this month announced that it was pulling out all its fighter jets from Clark, the headquarters of the U.S. 13th Air Force.

About 16,000 American servicemen are currently deployed at the Philippine bases.

The Philippine Senate, whose current composition opposes a foreign military presence after 1991, must ratify any treaty produced by the current talks.

Mr. Manglapus said the technical panels would also be discussing the issue of criminal jurisdiction over offenses committed by U.S. servicemen in the Philippines, and the question of nuclear weapons, whose presence is banned by the Philippine constitution.

Washington as a matter of policy neither confirms nor denies the presence of nuclear weapons on its bases overseas.

NAIROBI (NOV. 29) - Sweden is to grant Kenya 178.5 million Kenyan shillings (7.66 million U.S. dollars) to finance the country's health sector in 1991-92 financial year, the official Kenya News Agency (KNA) reported here Thursday.

Under an agreement signed here Wednesday, by Kenyan health permanent secretary Daniel Mbiti and Swedish International Development Agency (SIDA) director Carl Bertil Lostelius, the grant will finance maintenance of rural health facilities, environmental health programmes and primary health care.

The grant would also be used for purchasing essential drugs and assistance to African Medical Research Foundation's (AMREF) health behavior and education, and health planning and management units, KNA said.

Sweden has also increased its annual grant to Kenya from 168 million shillings (7.21 million dollars) to 214.2 million shillings (9.19 million dollars), the agency said.

PARIS (NOV. 29) - The French group Aerospatiale has been selected by the European Space Agency (ESA) to conduct preliminary studies for a European probe of Saturn's satellite Titan, the firm announced on Wednesday.

The Huyghens probe, named after the 17th century Dutch astronomer who first discovered the largest of Saturn's satellites, is scheduled to be launched in 1996, in a joint ESA-NASA mission.

Aerospatiale, in association with several other European firms, was chosen over British Aerospace to conduct the studies, to begin in January.

Huyghens will be carried by the U.S. space vessel Cassini and launched by the U.S. rocket Titan-IV-Centaur. It is expected to approach Titan in 2002 when it will be ejected from Cassini.

During its voyage through Titan's atmosphere, the probe will transmit measurements by eight instruments aboard, via Cassini which will be orbiting around Saturn.

SYDNEY (NOV. 29) - Government statisticians confirmed Thursday what the business community and thousands of unemployed workers have been saying for months -- that Australia is in recession.

But the announcement by the Bureau of Statistics of negative growth for the second successive quarter -- the technical definition of recession -- follows recent tentative signs of recovery.

Treasurer Paul Keating told a news conference the figures confirmed the economy was technically in recession, but the government had been forced to slow growth in demand to curb imports.

It was the "recession that Australia had to have," he said.

However the figures showed imports up by 8.4 percent while exports were flat.

He told journalists the government "believes the economy has now reached its low point" and the outlook for 1991 is far more encouraging.

"In terms of output it is entirely probable that the worst impact of this recession is in fact past."

The September quarter may have been the quarter which was hardest hit, Mr. Keating said.

The figures showed the economy contracted 1.6 percent in the September quarter following a revised 0.4 percent fall in the June quarter.

Analysts said the most worrying statistic for the government was the surge in imports which contributed in large measure to lowering real gross domestic product (GDP) by more than the most pessimistic expectations.

Market forecasts had ranged from a fall of 1.0 percent to a rise of 0.3 per cent in the September quarter.

Phil O'Sullivan, economist at Barclays de Zoete Wedd Australia, said: "The rise in imports must be of continuing concern to the government. It's inexplicable."

Said Jeff Schubert, economist at HongkongBank Australia: "The rise in imports means that the current account remains a worry and it's not going to go away."

BEIRUT (NOV. 29) - The Lebanese government has set Monday as a new deadline for its Greater Beirut plan to deploy the regular army in and around a militia-free capital, officials said Thursday.

"The army's deployment in Greater Beirut will be completed Monday," Information Minister Edmond Rizk said after a cabinet session late Wednesday.

The original deadline for Lebanese Army units backed by Syrian troops to be deployed throughout the region was November 19. But the move had been delayed because of objections from the main Christian militia, the Lebanese Forces (LF).

LF chief Samir Geagea reaffirmed Thursday that he was committed to the withdrawal of his fighters and arsenal. The pull-out from Christian east Beirut will be completed by the end of the week, he said.

The militia has since last Saturday withdrawn more than 1,000 tonnes of ammunition, according to the LF, and the delay in implementing the Greater Beirut plan was due to "purely to technical reasons."

The plan, covering a region of 350 square kilometres (140 square miles) in and around the capital, aims to reunify Beirut under government control after 15 years of bitter division into Christian and Moslem sectors.

Shiite Moslem and Druze militias have already announced their withdrawal from the mainly Moslem western sector of Beirut and its southern suburbs.

NEW DELHI (NOV. 29) - Indian troops Thursday pursued a sweep against separatist guerrillas in Assam, a day after New Delhi sacked the government of the northeastern state for failing to put down a growing insurgency.

Hundreds of army soldiers, backed by paramilitary forces, continued their hunt for members of the outlawed United Liberation Front of Assam (ULFA) who were said to have gone underground, reports said.

Security forces also took over all vital installations across the oil-rich state, ringed government offices and virtually sealed off possible escape routes to neighbouring Burma, newspapers here said.

ULFA militants reportedly fired at an army column that stormed a recently abandoned rebel camp, The Hindu newspaper said in a report from Assam, without specifying if there were any casualties.

The army had arrested at least 37 ULFA members by Wednesday evening. Authorities called out the army shortly after declaring the entire state of 22 million people a "disturbed area" late Tuesday.

Simultaneously, New Delhi suspended the Assam legislature, which was controlled by the regional Asom Gana Parishad (AGP), and outlawed the ULFA and the National Socialist Council of Nagaland (NSCN).

A federal government spokesman here accused the ULFA of running training camps in cooperation with Burmese guerrillas and the NSCN, which is campaigning for a tribal homeland in the neighbouring state of Nagaland.

To back up the army and prevent possible protests by AGP supporters, the state government banned assemblies of four or more people in Kamrup, Nagaon and Dibrugarh districts - all ULFA strongholds.

The army operation was aimed at "restoring law and order and ensuring that the people do not have to live in fear by ULFA cadres," the spokesman said.

The Assam government's sacking and subsequent security measures drew a mixed response from leading newspapers here, with some warning it could only worsen the situation in the province.

"The Assamese so far have only been deprived of the benefit of a good government. Now they will be victims of the process of alienation," The Tribune newspaper said.

It compared Assam to the troubled states of Punjab and Kashmir, both of which are also under federal rule.

TOKYO (NOV. 29) - Hitachi, Ltd. said Thursday its consolidated net profit rose 13 percent from a year earlier to 115 billion yen (830 million dollars) in the six months to September.

The country's top comprehensive electric machinery manufacturer said sales of its group covering 726 companies advanced 10 percent to 3,830 billion yen (27.8 billion dollars).

Sales of information systems and electroncs, consumer products and materials power scored double-digit gains. Sales grew at a slower pace for power and industrial systems.

Exports jumped 21 percent 948 billion yen (6.9 billion dollars), accounting for 25 percent of total sales.

For the year to March, the company forecast a net profit of 230 billion yen (1.7 billion dollars) on sales of 7,670 bllion yen (55.6 billion dollars).

LONDON (NOV. 29) - The winter meeting of the executive committee of the International Cocoa Organisation (ICCO) which is to take place in London on December 3-5 will deal mainly with routine business, an ICCO spokeswoman said here Thursday.

Angela Pryor said that the main issue would be the ICCO's accomodation. The lease on its current headquarters in Berners Street, London (a building it shares with the International Coffee Organisation) expires in May 1991.

Ms Pryor said the ICCO was currently negotiating with the leaseholder, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAFF), over the renewal of the lease.

If these negotiations were unsuccessful Ms Pryor said that ICCO would have to find a new headquarters.

The Dutch authorities have expressed an interest in the ICCO moving to the Netherlands, although few details had as yet been given, she said.

Apart from the accomodation discussion, the executive committee meeting will feature working groups on issues of stocks, research and promotion.

The ICCO suspended its market-support operations in February 1988 due to financial difficulties and internal divisions. Since then it has played a primarily administrative role and is currently expanding its research and information functions.

KARACHI (NOV. 29) - Pakistan Wednesday received 32 used Mirage jets out of 50 it bought from Australia, newspapers here reported Thursday.

The sale of the 50 used Mirage III fighters to Pakistan for 36 million Australian dollars (27 million U.S) prompted loud protest earlier this year from India, with which Pakistan has fought three wars in the past 43 years.

As war clouds loomed over the subcontinent last spring with an intensification of the Moslem separatist movement in the Indian-held part of the disputed Kashmir state, Australia said the shipment would be delayed in case hostilities broke out between the two neighbours.

India meanwhile is equipping its air force with the Soviet MiG-29 fighter bomber.

Newspapers quoting Australian High Commissioner G.J. Price said the remaining 18 aircraft will be delivered to Pakistan shortly.

The French-designed Mirages being sold to Pakistan were phased out of the Royal Australian Air Force (RAAF) and the diplomat said the sale contract also provides for the supply of spare parts.

The deal was part of Pakistan's efforts to beef up its air force. The arrival of the first batch of 32 planes was seen a significant development as it followed suspension of the delivery of 60 multi-role F-16 aircraft Washington had sold to Pakistan.

President George Bush's failure last month to certify to the U.S. Congress that Pakistan did not possess a nuclear device, led to the freeze in Washington's military and economic assistance to Islamabad.

Pakistan's armed forces traditionally rely on military supplies from the United States and the ban has caused strains in Islamabad-Washington relations.

LONDON (NOV. 29) - British military aircraft manufacturer British Aerospace is to cut 4,500 jobs and end production at two aircraft plants due to the worldwide squeeze on arms spending, according to reports in the British press Thursday.

Shares in British Aerospace lost seven pence to 524 pence on the reports Thursday.

According to the Independent, the job losses will be announced to the 26,000 workers at British Aerospace's six military aircraft sites on Monday.

Plants at Kingston, on the outskirts of London, and Preston, north-west England, are expected to be run down over a two to three year period with job losses mainly taking the form of natural wastage or voluntary redundancy.

British Aerospace has been severely hit by the post cold war arms decline in arms spending.

In June the Royal Air Force cancelled its order for 33 Tornado combat aircraft leading to the loss of 800 jobs at the Warton plant near Preston.

Recent weeks have seen speculation suggesting the 15-20 billion pound order for 48 Tornadoes from Saudi Arabia was in danger as the United States now seems likely to authorize increased arms sales to the kingdom.

Analysts have described the Gulf crisis as providing only slight support for the worldwide arms market, in which there is said to be large surpluses of both stocks and production.

British Aerospace was not commenting on the reports.

TOKYO (NOV. 29) - Eighteen major Japanese trading firms' exports on a contract basis dropped 0.9 percent from a year earlier but imports jumped 17.5 percent in October, an industry group said Thursday.

Their contracted exports totaled 813.5 billion yen (6.3 billion dollars) in October, while imports were valued at 1,076.4 billion yen (8.3 billion dollars), the Japan Foreign Trade Council said.

The 18 trading houses account for some 60 percent of Japan's total foreign trade.

Exports to China jumped 21.0 percent to 32.3 billion yen (248.5 million dollars), while imports from that country soared 86.3 percent to 42.3 billion yen (325.4 million dollars), the council said.

It said that exports to the Middle East dropped 2.4 percent to 28.9 billion yen (222.3 million dollars) but imports rose 50.7 percent mainly due to increased crude oil prices to 153.1 billion yen (1.2 billion dollars).

Exports to Southeast Asia went up 7.9 percent to 280.3 billion yen (2.2 billion dollars), while imports jumped 36.7 percent to 281.3 billion yen (2.2 billion dollars), the council formed by trading firms said.

LUXEMBURG (NOV. 29) - A huge international operation to track down "laundered" Colombian drug money has led to the seizure of some 55 million dollars in more than 100 bank accounts across Europe, the United States and in Panama, court sources here and in Paris said Thursday.

The operation was extended to at least 12 other countries after the arrest of three Colombians in Luxemburg last July, the sources said.

Since then, some 35 to 40 million dollars have been seized in different European banks, including a "small part" found in Luxemburg accounts, while another 15 million was frozen in accounts in the United States and Panama, according to the sources here.

The three Colombians arrested last summer are Franklin Jurado, a Luxemburg resident since 1987 who also maintained a residence in France, and Edgar Garcia Montillo and Ricardo Maheja Bustos, both of whom were on visit here at the time.

Judge Arrensdorff, the magistrate presiding over the affair in Luxemburg, said the three were suspected of involvement in the whitewashing operation. He said he was certain that Mr. Jurado was part of the Colombian Cali drug cartel and believed the two others were too.

He said he hoped to bring the affair to court in early 1991.

The investigation was triggered in France in 1989 when authorities ordered an audit of the records of the Banque Industrielle de Monaco after one of its senior figures committed suicide during a fraud investigation at the bank.

French customs agents then discovered suspicious accounts that had been opened by Mr. Jurado and other Colombians, the Paris sources said.

Frankfurt (NOV. 29) - Dresdner Bank, Germany's second biggest commercial financial institute, expects its overall earnings in 1990 to decline but still remaining robust amid the huge effort now being made to build up business in the former East Germany.

Dresdner Bank chairman Wolfgang Roeller called the effort being made in eastern Germany an ''unparalleled act of strength''.

The bank this year had built up a network of 107 branches serving 340,000 private customers and 13,000 corporate clients in the former East Germany, giving Dresdner a strong market share there.

''All in all, despite all the turbulence we expect 1990 to show good results again,'' Roeller said, even though the operating results were expected to be ''somewhat lower'' than those last year.

In the first ten months, the world group partial operating result - which does not include stock trading on the bank's own account - increased 3.3 per cent to 1.57 billion marks (1.05 billion dollars). The parent bank accounted for 964.1 million marks, up 12.1 percent on the same period of 1989.

The group's balance sheet after ten months totalled 280 billion marks, up 11.4 percent, with the parent bank's balance sheet rising 14 percent to 161.5 billion marks.

Besides the investment costs in the former East Germany, Roeller said earning results were affected by the stock market slump which had forced the bank to revise downwards the value of its share and bond holdings.

TUNIS (NOV. 29) - Tunisia's security services have dismantled an Islamic fundamentalist network operating in the police, the army and the Customs service, the weekly paper Realites reported Thursday.

It said 60 people had been rounded up in the past fortnight here in the capital and in the southern towns of Gabes and Gafsa, and arms and ammunition were seized.

Realites named the leader of the network as Mohamed Lahbib Lassoued, an electricity company engineer who was first detained during a 1987 crackdown on fundamentalists and freed a year later under a government amnesty.

The network is suspected of an attack on a bank van which netted 40,000 dinars (nearly 40,000 dollars).

A similar network of about 100 police and soldiers which planned to assassinate official figures and attack public buildings in a bid to overthrow the previous regime was unearthed in 1987.

CALAIS, France (NOV. 29) - While British and French workers shake hands at the junction of the cross-Channel tunnel on Saturday, the directors of the Eurotunnel company will be seeking a way out of the financial tunnel in which they find themselves.

After the conclusion in 1993 of the "project of the century", in which 100 kilometers (60 miles) of tunnel have already been dug by immense boring machines, the underground link will have cost 15.2 billion dollars, 48 per cent higher than initial estimates.

While Saturday's handshake in the service tunnel which lies between the two railroad tunnels represents a breakthrough, it is only an intermediate stage in the project, since the two other tunnels have yet to be completed.

Nonetheless, officials of the French-British Eurotunnel company are optimistic that the "Chunnel" will be making a profit by 1997, as planned.

Eurotunnel's latest capital increase, on the order of 1.13 billion dollars, which will end on December 3 and 4.2 billion dollars in additional credit obtained from the 215 banks backing the project should leave the company spare funds for unforeseen developments.

Eurotunnel general manager Alastair Morton expects the company to pay its first dividends to investors in 1997, two years before the original date of 1999, and expects the bonuses to come to around 58 million dollars.

"Let's be serious," one financial analyst said. "A miscalculation of ten per cent on operating results... and the bonuses will be postponed indefinitely."

The company's plans for attaining profitability are still unclear, since Eurotunnel directors, in order to avoid tipping off the competition, have been secretive about the prices they intend to charge.

"We are not saying that we will be less expensive than the others, but we are introducing a new competitive factor which should lower the overall market price," said one official.

Kathmandu (NOV. 29) - Japan is to give Nepal a grant of 29 million dollars for socio-economic projects under four agreements signed here Thursday by Japanese ambassador Kazuaki Arichi and acting Nepalese Finance Secretary Shashi Narayan Shah.

Japan is Nepal's biggest aid donor. Under the agreements, 10.07 million dollars will go to building a basic medical science building and other facilities at the Tribhuvan University teaching hospital.

Another 9.7 million dollars go to building water supply facilities in urban and semi-urban areas, 6.88 million for rebuilding six bridges in the Kathmandu Valley and 2.34 million for developing natural water fisheries.

WINDHOEK (NOV. 29) - Namibia and Germany on Thursday signed a document for 170 million rands (68 million dollars) in aid to begin flowing into the world's newest independent nation.

The agreement was signed by Namibia's Director General of the National Planning Committee, Zed Ngavire, and Germany's Director for Southern Africa in the Federal Ministry for Economic Co-operation, Rainer Barthelt.

Mr. Ngavire said 75 percent of the aid would be in the form of grants for social-orientated and self-help projects while some 42 million rands (16.8 million dollars) was in the form of soft loans where priority would be given to the protection of the country's territorial waters.

On Tuesday, five Spanish trawler skippers were arrested off the Namibian coast after they were caught fishing illegally in Namibia's 200-mile Exclusive Economic Zone.

Namibia became the world's newest independent nation when it gained independence from South Africa on March 21 this year.

LUXEMBOURG (NOV. 29) - Prices in the European Economic Community (EEC) rose by 6.3 percent during the last 12 months, and this was the highest level since 1985, mainly because of the Gulf crisis, the EEC Eurostat statistical office reported on Thursday.

Since the beginning of the Gulf crisis, prices have risen by two percent in three months. In October the average inflation rate in the 12 EEC countries was 0.7 percent.

ISLAMABAD (NOV. 29) - A blast in Pakistan's main gas field has brought many factories to a halt and dealt a serious blow to the country's new government and the economy, already hit by the effects of the Gulf crisis.

Industry sources said Thursday that more than 300 mills and factories were closed in Punjab's industrial city of Faisalabad following the blast late Wednesday in the Sui gas fields, 400 kilometres (250 miles) east of Quetta in the southwestern province of Baluchistan.

Another 173 factories, including three sugar mills, a fertilizer plant, a cement factory and 150 textile processing and printing combines, were affected in Karachi where 7,000 workers were laid off, they said.

Officials said three people were killed fighting the fire which broke out after the blast at a purification plant while some 70 workers were injured.

Unofficial figures put the toll at five dead.

Officials said an inquiry has been ordered into the blast which was the first in the gas field's 40-year history. Pending the outcome of the probe they said they could not rule out the possibility of sabotage.

A Sui Gas Co. directive recommended that Karachi Steel Mills, Electric Supply Corp. and dozens of textile mills switch over to oil as gas supplies were expected to remain cut for some time.

Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif, who took office earlier this month, sent a delegation led by Petroleum and Natural Resources Minister Chaudhry Nisar Ali Khan to assess the damage caused to the gas field and armed with orders to undertake repair work immediately.

JOHANNESBURG (NOV. 29) - A Bulgarian trade mission arrived in South Africa on Thursday for top-level meetings to organize bilateral trade, a spokeswoman for the mission said.

She said her country was looking for new technology to replace its outdated systems.

She added that countries which set up joint ventures with Bulgaria would have access to formerly closed markets.

The seven-member mission was hoping for agreements in the fields of pharmaceutical and chemical products, mining equipment, telecommunications, electronics, computers and household appliances.

Other areas include light and heavy engineering equipment, agriculture, minerals and geology.

The mission leaves South Africa on December 2.

BRUSSELS (NOV. 29) - Ministers of 107 industrial and developing nations are to meet here next Monday for a crucial attempt to set a more liberal and orderly course for world trade into the 21st century as the global economy appears headed for uncharted territory.

Senior Western economists and trade experts say it is still impossible to measure to what extent the future shape of world economic, financial and trading relations will be affected by recent dramatic changes in the geopolitical outlook.

The end to four decades of East-West political, military and economic confrontation, brought on by the collapse of communism in eastern Europe, and other signs of change make it still more urgent to consolidate "the rule of law" in global economic relations, they say.

The week-long Brussels ministerial conference has been called to conclude four years of complex negotiations, known as the Uruguay Round, to free up trade which has been the locomotive of growth in the West since World War II.

The proclaimed aim is to secure world-wide growth, jobs and prosperity by updating and strengthening the rules and disciplines embodied in the 42-year old General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and extending them to new areas such as the fast-expanding service sector.

However, with only a few days to go to the agreed December 7 deadline, the outcome remains in doubt, senior trade negotiators concede.

A major clash over agricultural trade reform involving the trade superpowers - the United States, the European Economic Community (EEC) and Japan - has brought the enterprise to the brink of collapse in the run-up to the Brussels ministerial session.

The focus on farm issues has tended to obscure the importance of other basic problems underlying the talks, senior trade negotiators agree.

Roughly half the volume of world trade, which totalled a record 3,100 billion dollars last year is in one way or another affected by import curbs.

Brussels (NOV. 29) - Consumer prices in the 12-nation European Community (E.C.) shot up 0.7 percent in October from September to reach an average annual inflation rate of 6.3 percent, the Office of Statistics said here Thursday.

The inflation rates in October ranged between Denmark (2.7 percent), the Netherlands (2.9 percent) and Germany (3.3 percent) at the lower end of the scale to Portugal (14.4 percent) and Greece (22.3 percent) at the top of the list, the E.C. said.

E.C. Financial Commissioner Henning Christophersen noted that in the three months since the Gulf crisis started, prices had risen by two percent.

''This is a clear warning. We must keep a close watch so that we can control inflation and keep our economy in good order,'' Christophersen said.

He noted that in the United States and Japan, prices had increased by even more, 2.4 percent, since the Gulf crisis.

PHNOM PENH (NOV. 29) - Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen said Thursday his army was ready to counter any military offensive by the Khmer Rouge notably against the temple of Angkor Wat.

The premier said his government continued to respect the principle of military self-restraint called for in past agreements and had no intention of launching any offensives against the guerrillas, who control territory along the western and northwestern borders with Thailand.

But he said the Phnom Penh army was ready to counter-attack if assaulted by the Khmer Rouge. "We believe that our army has the ability to protect the population," he added.

He was responding to reporters' questions about his government's readiness to deal with Khmer Rouge attacks, specifically on the 12th century Angkor Wat and other temples in northwest Cambodia.

Khmer Rouge sources in Thailand said Monday that guerrillas were preparing to attack the provincial capital of Siem Reap, a few kilometres (miles) from the famous Angkor temple complexes.

They said the attacks would be launched if an international conference on Cambodia ends without a peaceful solution.

The Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge are the most powerful guerrilla force in the resistance. They ruled the country from 1975 until Vietnam ousted them in early 1979.

Tokyo (NOV. 29) - Finance industry experts say recent mergers of Japanese banks are the sign of a further wave of consolidation in the banking sector - in particular among less competitive smaller local banks.

The Japanese banking industry is now confronted with the task of reorganising to cope with the upcoming deregulation of the financial markets.

Banks, also faced with investment requirements for computerised retail banking service and increasing fund-raising costs, face a ''cold winter'' of tougher competition, a major Tokyo-based city bank official warns.

Recent merger annoucement by two smaller city banks - Kyowa Bank and Saitama Bank - reflects part of the trend in the banking industry to consolidate, say finance industry sources.

Kyowa Bank, the country's tenth largest, and Saitama Bank, ranked eleventh, in their November 13 announcement said their merger next April would make them the eighth biggest bank in terms of outstanding deposits of 23 trillion yen (177 billion dollars).

Last April, two top Japanese commercial banks - Mitsui Bank and Taiyo Kobe Bank - merged to form Mitsui Taiyo Kobe Bank which became the largest bank in Japan and the second biggest in the world with assets of 63.34 trillion yen (498 billion dollars).

Competition among Japanese banks will to get severer due to the growing pace of deregulation in which banks will be forced to offer higher deposit rates, adding to the cost of funds, experts add.

PARIS (NOV. 29) - French Finance Minister Pierre Beregovoy said on Thursday that he favoured a "strengthened" definition of the Ecu and "greater" use of the Ecu in markets.

He told the Eurocap 90 conference here that it "is better progressively to accentuate the credibility of the Ecu than to have to decree it brutally on the first day of the third stage" of economic and monetary union (Emu).

The Emu programme is due to result in creation of an independent European central bank and a single currency within the European Economic Community (EEC).

The new Prime Minister of Britain, John Major, in his previous post as Chancellor of the Exchequer, drafted a proposal for a so-called hard Ecu to be developed alongside national currencies and backed by a central fund, arguing that if it won general acceptance in competition with existing currencies, it could develop into a dominant means of exchange.

Mr. Beregovoy said that the principle of the second stage of Emu, which is due to begin on January 1, 1994, was "simple on the face of it" because "there is no transfer of sovereignty" as ultimate responsibility for decisions remained with national authorities.

He said that the aim of the second stage was to bring about convergence of the "economic performances" within the EEC, particularly through a reduction of budget deficits in some member countries, and to manage a "common" economic and monetary policy. This would bring about generalised and lasting exchange agreements on the "progressive" route to fixed exchange rates.

Mr. Beregevoy stressed the need for "systematic co-ordination of monetary policies within a new monetary institution to be created in the context of the second stage", meaning the European system of central banks which would precede the European central bank.

He repeated that the independence of this body "cannot be seen without a form of inter-dependence with strong economic government".

The success of economic and monetary union was "conditioned by the existence of an economic authority".

Helsinki (NOV. 29) - Soviet oil exports to Finland will diminish about 30 percent this year as the country is unable to meet the agreed delivery agreements, the Finnish state-owned oil company Neste said here Thursday.

Neste and the Soviet Union had earlier agreed on deliveries of 8.5 million tonnes of crude oil this year. Now Neste estimates the deliveries will reach about 6 million tons.

Finland has traditionally imported most of its oil from the Soviet Union. Last year Soviet oil accounted for 90 percent of Finnish consumption, but now Finland must buy two to three million tons of oil from Western markets and the Gulf area, Neste said.

IRI President Franco Nobili said the group's subsidiary, Autostrade International, was putting together the project with a Frankfurt-based civil engineering firm, Philip Holzmann.

"We are especially interested in building a link between Halle and Magdeburg," a stretch that would be about 150 kilometers (95 miles) long, he told a press conference.

Bonn (NOV. 29) - It will be up to the European Community (E.C.) to make a move towards solving the farm subsidy cut dispute in the ''Uruguay Round'' of trade liberalisation talks if a new agreement is to be reached, a top German official said here Thursday.

Lorenz Schomerus, the Bonn Economics Ministry chief negotiator in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (Gatt) talks, said he hoped next week's final ministerial round would set a ''clear political direction'' so that details of a new world trade treaty could be hammered out at the experts level by next February.

The Gatt final conference takes place December 3 to 7 in Brussels.

Schomerus said the E.C. will have to move toward the U.S. position regarding cuts in farm subsidies.

''It is difficult to imagine that there will be any results without the E.C. changing position,'' Schomerus said.

He was referring to the deadlock over farm subsidies, in which the E.C. has proposed a 30 percent cut by 1996, far below the 75 percent demanded by the U.S. and other major food exporting nations.

Schomerus said that a lot was at stake for the E.C. in the world trade talks. Whereas agriculture makes up only 2.2 percent of the Community's economic might, the services sector, which also is to be liberalised under the new accord, accounts for nearly 50 percent.

MOSCOW (NOV 29) - A united Nations Security Council resolution setting Iraq a January 15 deadline to pull out of Kuwait will be one more chance to avoid war a Soviet spokesman said here Thursday.

Yuri Gremitskih, deputy foreign ministry spokesman, said: ''The world community will not exercise any additional pressure on Iraq during the goodwill pause.'' This was provided Baghdad was not to blame for any worsening of the situation.

The resolution, scheduled to be put to the vote later Thursday in New York, is expected to threaten the use of force for only the second time in the history of Security Council peacemaking.

With the Americans anticipating at least 11 votes in favour out of the 15 that can be cast, U.S. Secretary of State James Baker spent Wednesday evening and Thursday morning in last-minute consultations with other Security Council members.

Both Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen and Cuban Foreign Minister Isidoro Malcierca were non-committal at their meetings with Baker. The Cubans, who are normally given a cold shoulder by the Americans, unexpectedly requested changes to the draft resolution.

The Cubans had originally been expected to pronounce a flat no.

''We are currently in the process of consultations to get a resolution that will receive wide support,'' said Malcierca.

One Security Council member, Yemen, has already promised to vote no. U.S. diplomats said Cuba might still vote no, while China and Malaysia might abstain. However Malaysia was shifting in the direction of assent, the diplomats said.

MOSCOW (NOV. 29) - The privatisation of land was at the centre of heated debate in the Russian congress for the third successive day Thursday, an AFP correspondent reported.

A wide difference of opinion between supporters and opponents of privatisation was evident, and one leading personality even warned against "colonisation" of the country.

Soviet deputy Vassili Starodubtsev, the president of the Soviet peasants' union who is strongly opposed to privatisation of land, said that "despite the promises of some people, private agriculture is incapable of resolving the problems of providing food".

He said that privatisation would amount to "the blessing, the legalisation of the road towards widespread speculation in land".

Stressing that peasants did not have any money with which to buy land, he estimated that privatisation would benefit only the "shadow economy" and "foreign capital".

He added that "land around big cities and industrial centres will be bought by foreigners who will then have accomplished the quiet colonisation of the country".

Deputy Yuri Chernichenko, a journalist known for his outspoken support for liberalisation of the economy, said that the food aid which was to arrive from aboard represented "shame" for the Soviet economy.

He then quoted from several recent opinion polls carried out in the Soviet Union, and particularly in Tver, formerly Kalinin north of Moscow, and in Saratov on the banks of the Volga, showing that a big majority of people favoured privatisation of land.

The Prime Minister of Russia Ivan Silaev, told the Russian congress on Tuesday that up to 20 per cent of farm workers were inclined to launch themselves into private enterprise, but that they had doubts about the stability of the legal situation applying to private property.

Mr. Silaev was due on Friday to draw the conclusion of the debate before the congress, and the Soviet assembly was due to vote on the matter towards mid-day.

Mr. Silaev told journalists that the main opposition to agrarian reform came from "former officials and current managers of collective farms".

JERUSALEM (NOV. 29) - A total of 1,707 Jewish immigrants from the Soviet Union and Ethiopia have arrived in Israel in the past 24 hours with 3,000 more expected by Saturday, sources close to the Integration Ministry said Thursday.

The Soviet Jews outnumbered the other immigrants with 1,600 coming from Moscow against 107 arriving from Addis Ababa.

The sources stressed that a total of 30,000 Jewish immigrants -- most of them from the Soviet Union -- have settled in Israel in November, in the largest number of newcomers for a single month this year.

In October, 26,000 immigrants from the Soviet Union arrived in Israel -- 4,000 more than in September.

Around 150,000 Soviet Jews have settled in Israel since January and officials expect some 300,000 to arrive in 1991.

HANOI (NOV. 29) - The Vietnamese government has authorised establishment of a Vietnamese-Japanese joint venture to produce turpentine for export over 10 years, the official Nhan Dan newspaper said Thursday.

The venture links up a forestry company from Quang Ninh province in Vietnam's northeast with Tokyo company MENKA-KAISHA Ltd., Nhan Dan said.

Production is expected to start in 1991, said the newspaper, the official organ of the Vietnamese Communist Party, without giving further details.

Meanwhile, the Japanese-Vietnamese Chamber of Commerce and the Vietnamese

WASHINGTON (NOV 29) - The United States is ready to offer humanitarian aid to the Soviet Union as Germany is doing, but has yet to receive any request for such aid, officials said Thursday.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "We do want to be helpful," adding, "there has been no request at this point."

Mr. Fitzwater referred to the "very generous response" on Germany's part to Soviet requests, noting "we would be willing to help if we can."

President George Bush said last week in Paris at a meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev that he was "open" to the idea of U.S. humanitarian aid to the Soviet Union if it was truly necessary and requested.

Asked whether the U.S. believed such aid necessary now in light of food shortages in the Soviet Union, Mr. Fitzwater said the judgement was not for the U.S. to make given that no request for aid had been received.

The United States legally can supply the Soviet Union with humanitarian aid including food and medicine. All other forms of assistance are forbidden by the Jackson-Vanik ammendment which cannot be lifted until the Soviet Union adopts a more liberal emigration policy.

Such legislation is stalled in the Soviet parliament.

PARIS (NOV. 29) - The Paris Bourse managed a small gain on Thursday, as the CAC-40 stock price index finished 0.56 percent higher on the day, thanks to the firmness of a few key issues such as Peugeot, Michelin and Thomson-CSF.

The Bourse was weak at the start of the day in dull trading, which operators said was due to a total absence of news affecting the market.

Wall Street's recent irregularity had no influence on the Bourse.

Volume finally reached 1.3 billion francs (260 million dollars) for the session thanks to substantial exchanges of a few major issues.

Peugeot rose by 1.7 percent to 538 francs, with 240,000 shares changing hands. Michelin jumped 6.4 percent on 402,000 shares, and Thomson-CSF 3.8 per cent on 575,000.

KUALA LUMPUR (NOV 29) - Bank Negara, Malaysia's central bank, said Thursday it will seek a waiver from the takeover and mergers panel from making a mandatory general offer for shares in Bank of Commerce that it does not already own.

Bank Negara will own a 42.3 percent stake in the bank through a share-swap arrangement arising from sale of its 78.5 percent stake in another commercial bank, United Asian Bank (UAB), to Bank of Commerce.

The central bank acquired the UAB stake, which represented its entire shareholding in the bank, in 1986 as a result of its efforts to rescue UAB from bad loan losses.

The sale to Bank of Commerce was necessary to complete the rescue, bank Negara said.

The agreement, signed Thursday, provides for Bank of Commerce to issue 79,847,655 new shares of one dollar (37 U.S. cents) each in exchange for the 359,314,448 UAB shares of one dollar each.

LONDON (NOV. 29) - Zinc fell to a new contract low in after-hours kerb trading on the London Metal Exchange (LME) Thursday.

Three-month zinc was quoted at 1,228 dollars per ton on the kerb against 1,238 at the official close and 1,244 dollars Wednesday.

The fall confounded those analysts who had predicted that the market had bottomed out. Other analysts suggested that the fundamentals of growing production and declining demand would take the metal down as far as 1,150 dollars.

Copper recovered from the two-and-a-half-year low recorded Wednesday. On the kerb it was quoted at 1,284 pounds per ton against 1,280 pounds on the afternoon ring and 1,264 Wednesday.

Analysts said copper firmed because recent selling had been overdone.

TEHERAN (NOV 29) - Iranian President Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani on Thursday said his country supported United Nations resolutions on the Gulf crisis, hours before a crucial Security Council vote on the use of force against Iraq.

Mr. Rafansjani, cited by official Teheran Radio, said however that Iran wished to see a "peaceful settlement" to the crisis triggered by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on August 2.

The Iranian president, who was receiving visiting Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Petrovski, reaffirmed Iran's position for an "unconditional Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait."

He also warned that war in the Gulf "would not be to anyone advantage."

Mr. Petrovski delivered a message to Mr. Rafsanjani from his Soviet counterpart Mikhail Gorbachev dealing with "the latest developments in the Gulf, Moscow's position on (Thursday's) Security Council meeting and the recent visit to Moscow by Iraqi Foreign Minister Tareq Aziz," the radio said.

The Soviet envoy arrived here Wednesday on what he said was a final attempt by the Soviet Union to explore the prospects for a peaceful settlement of the Gulf crisis with regional states.

Mr. Petrovski, who earlier this month toured several Arab countries on one of two Soviet missions to the region, warned that the "danger of war was serious."

He also expressed hope that the United States, which is leading a 350,000-strong multinational force deployed in the Gulf region, will pull out its troops from the area at the end of the conflict.

The U.N. Security Council was Thursday to vote on a resolution authorising the use of force to end Iraq's nearly four-month-old occupation of Kuwait.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) - A dues cheque of 186 million dollars was handed over to the United Nations Thursday by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker.

U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani said Baker, who was to chair a Security Council meeting later in the day, handed over the money to Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

The money is part of the regular U.S. contribution to the U.N. budget. Despite the payment, the United States still owes the world organisation more money than any other country. Based on the latest dues figures, the U.S. arrears are nearly 300 million dollars.

BAGHDAD (NOV. 29) - President Saddam Hussein on Thursday ruled out his country's acceptance of a United Nations vote expected to authorise the use of force against Iraq to secure its evacuation from Kuwait.

"Iraq will not bend before the storm," said Mr. Hussein, reiterating his country's refusal to evacuate Kuwait, which Iraq invaded on August 2 and subsequently annexed.

Speaking to a conference on Arab youth, Mr. Hussein said: "If war were imposed on Iraq, the Iraqis will fight in a way that will honour Arabs and Moslems."

"The Iraqi people ... are determined not to bend before any form or source of injustice," said Mr. Hussein.

He also questioned why U.N. resolutions on the Palestinian issue had not been implemented and why the U.N. failed to declare an economic embargo against Israel similar to the one it imposed on Iraq after its invasion of Kuwait.

Earlier, Iraq's official newspaper Ath-Thawra described the U.S.-sponsored U.N. vote -- which Washington is confident will pass -- as a "declaration of war" and said Iraq rejected it.

CAPE TOWN (NOV. 29) - A meeting of South Africa's black leaders concluded Thursday that ''the vicious system of apartheid'' was the root cause of factional violence in the country.

A joint statement issued after a six-hour meeting called by Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu said the characterisation of township violence as ''black-on-black'' was a ''racist ploy''.

''We believe that a third force, including at least elements of the government's security forces, are stoking violence to sabotage the initiatives for a democratic society,'' the statement said.

The black liberation movement, the African National Congress (Anc), and its largest rival, the Pan Africanist Congress (Pac), were both represented at the meeting - the Anc by its Deputy President, Nelson Mandela - as were three of South Africa's tribal homelands.

The leader of the Zulu Inkatha Freedom Party (Ifp), Mangosuthu Buthelezi, refused to attend.

Major differences came to light at the meeting, including the Pac's rejection of constitutional negotiations with the white minority government, which has engaged the Anc in peace talks.

Nevertheless, Tutu said he was amazed at the spirit that prevailed.

''They didn't scratch each other's eyes out and they were sitting within striking distance of each other.

''We're dealing with things that are far too serious. We are not playing marbles. There is the possibility of our leaders working together,'' he said.

JOHANNESBURG (NOV 29) - A South African court Thursday ordered a white supremacist-controlled town council to reopen two swimming pools it shut rather than admit blacks after a law reserving public amenities for whites only was abolished earlier this year.

The court rejected the Springs town council's contention that it had closed the pools for economic reasons, and found that its action had in fact been motivated by conservative politics.

The council had acted with ''indecent haste'' to close the pools following the scrapping of the Separate Amenities Act, which fell away in October this year.

The application for the pools to be reopened was brought by Michael Hart, a white resident of Springs, some 25 kilometres south-east of Johannesburg.

The council was ordered to pay his legal fees.

The Separate Amenities Act was introduced in 1953 and until recently was considered a pillar of apartheid, the white government's policies of racial segregation.

It became one of the first victims of State President Frederik de Klerk's reform policies.

BRUSSELS (NOV. 29) - Political union among European Economic Community (EEC) nations should include a joint military role, Italy suggested in a document to be discussed at an EEC summit next month in Rome.

Italy, which holds the presidency of the EEC until Decmeber 31, said in the document that Community members should also have an automatic commitment to help each other.

Diplomatic sources said the Italian ideas were clearly inspired by the Gulf crisis, because the document said the Community should be able to respond to a request from the United Nations for military intervention.

EEC leaders are to meet at a conference in Rome next month to start work on a lengthy process towards a treaty for political union. But the Italian suggestions go beyond anything discussed so far.

The document also suhhests the treaty should provide for joint arms control and the export of arms. In the non-military arena, it advocates a common EEC citizenship.

A British source said the document represented Italy's "vision" of the final outcome of the political union debate, and was not practical in the short term. Britain is foremost among EEC critics of political union.

In London on Wednesday, the secretary-general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO), Manfred Woerner, said that no EEC defence initiative could replace the Atlantic Alliance.

He warned in a speech that if the EEC decided to go it alone on defence, its North American allies would take this as a clear signal that their military help was no longer needed or wanted, and would withdraw their troops.

PARIS (NOV 29) - Deputies of the so-called Group of Seven (G7) of leading industrialised countries met in the United States on Tuesday and Wednesday to study conditions for a forthcoming meeting of the seven finance ministers, a well-informed source said here on Thursday.

But scheduling problems, and the effect of the Gulf crisis and of a general election in Germany on Sunday, mean that a meeting is very unlikely to be held before the end of the year, the source said.

The main concern of finance ministers is that the dollar's weakness could turn into a collapse, although the Gulf crisis is a "a major supporting factor for the dollar" and removes the immediate danger of a dollar debacle, the source said.

The G7 countries are the United States, Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada.

French Economics and Finance Minister Pierre Beregovoy has called publicly, on several occasions, for a G7 meeting.

He said on Monday that "The decisions made in 1987 at the Louvre meeting, which roughly laid down the trend of the parities of the European currencies, the yen and the dollar, are far behind us, and . . . no longer correspond exactly to the reality observed on the markets".

The dollar's current weakness prevents the U.S. Federal Reserve from loosening monetary policy, which would be a natural move to combat the incipient recession of the American economy. Monetary sources say the Fed plans to promote a further decline of the Federal funds rate and allow a reduction of required bank reserves. But there is no question of going any farther than that, for the time being, by lowering the discount rate.

If G7 wants to allow monetary loosening in the United States without risking setting off a dollar plunge, it must prevent an increase in German interest rates.

The Seven must also keep an eye on the trend of relationships between the yen and the main European currencies. After dropping considerably after the start of 1989, the yen made up part of the lost ground this year, to European officials' satisfaction.

JOHANNESBURG (NOV. 29) - The South African government Thursday declared a black squatter camp an ''unrest area'' and imposed a dusk-to-dawn curfew following the discovery of the bodies of nine black men axed to death in factional fighting.

The bodies were found by police Thursday morning in the Zonkisizwe shack area in the township of Katlehong, south-east of Johannesburg, where fighting between opposing political factions has claimed some 69 lives in several weeks of fighting.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok said the extraordinary measures - police are given wider powers in unrest areas - were aimed at ''hooligans and criminal elements who prey on law-abiding citizens''.

ACCRA (NOV. 29) - West African support for a non-guerrilla interim government of Liberia ebbed Thursday, with the chairman of the Economic Community of West African States (Ecowas), Dawda Jawara, calling for an accomodation with the main rebel faction.

He said the composition of an interim government would have to be discussed by all parties. Ecowas has already sponsored one interim government headed by academic Amos Sawyer, and Jawara's remarks appeared to mean he no longer regarded this as effective.

In a British Broadcasting Corporation (Bbc) interview, Jawara said Sawyer's group and rebel leader Charles Taylor would have to ''get together as soon as possible to try and accommodate each other in an interim government''.

There had been confusion Wednesday after remnants loyal to the late president, Samuel Doe, and two rebel factions in the 11-month Liberian civil war signed a three-way ceasefire agreement.

A communique referred to a future interim government and Taylor said there was none. Sawyer said he was still the interim president, a claim backed by the small rebel group led by Prince Yormie Johnson.

Jawara said the West African peacekeeping force in Liberia will monitor the ceasefire.

BAGHDAD (NOV 29) - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein said Thursday his country will fight back if attacked by U.S. troops and their allied forces in the Gulf.

He lashed out at the United Nations Security Council, saying it had become ''an obedient apparatus'' that implements U.S.-inspired hesolutions.

''In the event of war, we will fight in a way that will raise the heads of all Arabs and all Moslems,'' Saddam said in a speech during a meeting with a delegation from the Fifth Seminar of the Arab Youth Solidarity currently visiting Baghdad.

The meeting was attended by Saadi Mehdi Saleh, speaker of the National Assembly (Parliament), Baghdad Radio said.

As Saddam spoke, the U.N. Security Council convened in a crucial session Thursday night to vote for a draft resolution sanctioning the use of military force against Iraq over its invasion of Kuwait on August 2.

''The Security Council is no longer a Security Council. It has become an obedient apparatus that carries out U.S.-inspired resolutions,'' Saddam said.

He charged that the Security Council used in the past to call for peace talks among conflicting states to avoid war. ''But now it is giving priority to war over dialogue,'' he said.

The Iraqi President asked why U.N. resolutions on the Palestine question, adopted in the 1940s, have not been carried out until now.

Saddam repeated his call for the withdrawal of the U.S.-dominated 300,000-strong multinational force deployed in the Gulf following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

''Our principles at this stage call for social justice among the Arabs and the withdrawal of foreign (forces) so that the Arabs can live in the region, solve their problems by themselves and establish relations with foreign (states) on the basis of justice, fairness, equality and mutual respect,'' he said.

JERUSALEM (NOV. 29) - The Israeli military administration has extended by three months a closure order on four of the five Palestinian universities in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, sources close to the Defense Minstry said Thursday.

The Al-Najah, Bir Zeit universities as well as the Islamic universities of Hebron and Gaza were shut soon after the outbreak of the anti-Israeli uprising in the territories in December 1987.

The Israeli military authorities claimed that the universities were used to plan anti-Israeli operations.

Around 15,000 students are enrolled in these establishements and continue to receive some form of teaching despite the Israeli closer orders, Palestinian sources said.

The only Palestinian university currently open in the territories is the Bethlehem campus.

BAMAKO (NOV 29) - Liberia's main rebel leader Charles Taylor, who signed a ceasefire here Wednesday with two other warring factions, has toughened his rhetoric against Amos Sawyer, who was sworn in as interim leader a week ago in the Liberian capital, Monrovia.

Mr. Taylor, who has proclaimed himself president of Liberia and set up his own administration, said Thursday following the two-day summit here of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) that it was time for the Liberia people to return to the war-wracked country to chose a new Liberian government.

But he told journalists before leaving the Malian capital on his way back to Liberia that Mr. Sawyer had no claim to power because the 13 West African heads of state attending the first ECOWAS special summit convened to discuss the Liberian conflict said they had "not put any government in Monrovia."

"The term of calling Sawyer 'President Sawyer' is a joke ... because he's not a party to this conflict," referring to Liberia's 11-month civil war.

Mr. Sawyer was chosen by Liberian politicians and exiles at an all-party Liberian conference last August in the Gambian capital Banjul to lead the interim government.

The installation of an interim government in Liberia is one part of an overall

ECOWAS peace plan which was drawn up in August by the the community's mediation committee represented by Nigeria, Ghana, Togo, the Gambia and Mali and given a broader endorsement by the heads of state this week.

Observers said the summit managed to achieve a ceasefire and reach a consensus on the peace plan and "save face" for the community which was reportedly split between French- and English-speaking countries over the sending in last August of a 6,000-strong intervention force, comprising mainly troops from Nigeria and Ghana.

But the question of an interim government had not been fully resolved, as Mr. Sawyer, who came at the request of some of the heads of state, left Wednesday for Monrovia saying he was the president of the inperim government which Mr. Taylor could join as parliament speaker if he wanted.

LONDON (NOV. 29) - The NATO secretary general said Thursday that the Alliance "must draw the lessons of the Gulf crisis to improve both our crisis management and crisis prevention machinery."

Manfred Woerner made the comments in a speech on the last day of the North Atlantic Assembly of parliamentarians from the 16 NATO member states.

Mr. Woerner said there was no question of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization "trying to become a global policeman or taking on every security problem."

"But," he said, "because we cannot do everthing we cannot conclude we cannot do more."

Mr. Woerner suggested that in the future an "internal Alliance understanding" could be reached "whereby, in a spirit of solidarity, the degree of engagement in dealing with a given problem might vary from ally to ally, but the assets of the Alliance would be available for coordination and support."

This year the Assembly's debates were observed by Soviet, Hungarian, Polish, Czechoslovak and Bulgarian delegates.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) - U.S. Secretary of State James Baker Thursday said he did not rule out the United States signing a proposed U.N. Security Council resolution on protecting Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied territories.

"It would depend entirely on what the resolution contains. The United States has supported resolutions in this area in the past and in the recent past," Mr. Baker said as he prepared to meet with his French counterpart, Roland Dumas, ahead of a vote later in the day on a resolution authorizing the use of force against Iraq.

In October the United States voted in favor of two resolutions against Israel in connection with the killing by Israeli police of 17 Palestinians during protests on the Temple Mount in Jerusalem. One of the resolutions condemned Israel for using excessive force and the other deplored Israel's refusal to accept a U.N. probe of the incident.

As current president of the 15-member Security Council, the United States Wednesday managed to postpone a vote on a resolution proposed by Yemen, Cuba, Colombia and Malaysia on the Israeli-occupied territories.

The document calls for sending an ombudsman to the territories and convening an international conference to discuss ways of protecting the Palestinians in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

As it stands now, the wording of the resolution would in all likelihood prompt the United States to use its veto power as a permanent council member and kill the measure. But that, in turn, would embarrass Washington in the face of the Arab nations it has persuaded to join the U.S.-led coalition against Iraq.

"We should be willing at all times to confront the problems that exist throughout the region. The U.S. has certainly expressed a willingness to do that at the right time, at the right place," Mr. Baker said, restating U.S. policy of qualified support for an international conference to search for a comprehensive Middle East peace settlement.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) - Venezuela will pay 611 million dollars for 7.5 billion dollars worth of U.S. Treasury zero-coupon bonds to be used as collateral in a Venezuelan debt reduction agreement, the U.S. Treasury Department said Thursday.

Sale of the bonds was approved by the Treasury Wednesday, only days before President George Bush will depart on a South American tour which will take him to Caracas on December 7.

Zero-coupon bonds are sold at a steep discount because they pay interest only upon maturation, which in the case of the Venezuelan bonds will be in 30 years.

Venezuela will pay just over eight cents on the dollar for the face value of the bonds, which the Treasury Department justified by referring to an earlier bond package worked out for Mexico that involved far greater sums.

Mexico purchased 30.2 billion dollars in zero-coupon bonds in a deal with the U.S. Treasury for 2.99 billion dollars in a transaction which was criticized by the U.S. Congress as a "hidden subsidy" and an unauthorized budgetary appropriation.

Venezuela's medium- and long-term debt to commercial banks now amounts to 21.0 billion dollars.

The refinancing agreement was completed earlier this year within the framework of the so-called Brady Plan, named after U.S. Treasury Secrtary Nicholas Brady -- with a 6.66 billion dollar permanent debt reduction and a short-term 2.44 billion dollar interest payment deferral.

To restructure its external debt, some creditor banks sold Venezuela's debt back to that country at deep discounts based on the debt's secondary market value, while others opted to extend fresh loans without accepting cuts in the nominal value of debt owed them by Venezuela.

WASHINGTON (NOV 29) - The United States Thursday hailed an accord signed by Argentina and Brazil to renounce building nuclear weapons, and called on other Latin American nations to respect nuclear non-proliferation.

With the pact signed Wednesday in the Brazilian city of Foz do Iguazu, "the prospects for a Latin America forever free from the dangers of nuclear weapons have brightened," the White House said in a statement.

The communique said presidents Carlos Menem of Argentina and Fernando Collor de Mello of Brazil "acted boldly to enhance regional and world stability in pledging to use nuclear energy only for peaceful purposes."

The two countries have suspected one another of secretly striving to develop nuclear weapons ever since Argentine president Juan Domingo Peron established a National Commission on Atomic Energy in 1955.

Neither country is known to have succeeded in building a nuclear device although the Brazilian Government recently acknowledged that the military had tried to build one under previous governments.

Under the agreement signed Wednesday, the two countries approved a common system of accounting and control enabling them to monitor each other's activities in the nuclear field.

The White House called on them to meet their pledges for full compliance with the 1968 Treaty of Tlatelolco, which calls for a Latin America free of nuclear arms.

"We also urge those countries in Latin America which have not done so to bring the treaty into force ... and to support the international community's non-proliferation regime."

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) - U.S. Secretary of State James Baker Thursday handed over to U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar a check for 185,732,250 dollars, as payment towards the U.S. contribution to the world body.

The United States yearly contributes 25 per cent of the U.N. budget -- the maximum allowable for any member state -- which in 1990 amounts to 233 million dollars.

An additional 168.5 million dollars for exceptional expenses caused by peace-keeping operations world-wide brings the total annual U.S. contribution to 401.5 million dollars.

Before Mr. Baker's payment, Washington had paid 117 million dollars towards its total U.N. quota.

The latest payment was made a few hours before the Security Council met to vote on a resolution allowing the use of force to dislodge Iraqi troops from Kuwait -- the second resolution of its type in U.N. history.

NEW YORK, UNITED NATIONS (NOV 29) - Here is the text of Security Council resolution 678 giving Iraq until January 15 to withdraw from Kuwait or face military attack from U.N. members:

The Security Council,

Recalling and reaffirming its resolutions 660 (1990), 661 (1990), 662 (1990), 664 (1990), 665 (1990), 666 (1990), 667 (1990), 669 (1990), 670 (1990), 674 (1990) and 677 (1990),

Noting that, despite all efforts by the United Nations, Iraq refuses to comply with its obligation to implement resolution 660 and the above subsequent relevant resolutions, in flagrant contempt of the council,

Mindful of its duties and responsibilities under the charter of the United Nations for the maintenance and preservation of international peace and security,

Determined to secure full compliance with its decisions,

Acting under Chapter VII of the charter of the United Nations,

1. Demands that Iraq comply fully with resolution 660 and all subsequent relevant resolutions and decides, while maintaining all its decisions, to allow Iraq one final opportunity, as a pause of goodwill, to do so;

2. Authorizes members states cooperating with the government of Kuwait, unless Iraq on or before 15 January 1991 fully implements, as set forth in paragraph one above, the foregoing resolutions, to use all necessary means to uphold and implement Security Council resolution 660 and all subsequent relevant resolutions and to restore international peace and security in the area;

3. Requests all states to provide appropriate support for the actions undertaken in pursuance of paragraph two of this resolution;

4. Requests the states concerned to keep the council regularly informed on the progress of actions undertaken pursuant to paragraphs two and three of this resolution;

5. Decides to remain seized on the matter.

NEW YORK, UNITED NATIONS, (NOV 29) - Thursday's U.N. Security Council vote endorsing the use of force to gain Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait was the only time since the Korean conflict 40 years ago that that the world body has authorized military action against a member nation.

Five years after the United Nations was founded in 1945, the Security Council agreed to permit military force to be used to repel an invasion of South Korea by North Korean troops backed by China and the Soviet Union.

There were 11 Security Council members at the time -- today there are 15 -- but only 10 took part in the vote on June 27, 1950.

The U.S.-backed vote was carried out while the Soviet Union was boycotting Security Council meetings to protest the presence of China's Nationalist government on the council instead of the Communist government which came to power the previous year.

Following adoption of the resolution, the United States sent its Air Force and Navy to back the South Korean military, with land troops following a little later.

On July 7, 1950, the Security Council placed all foreign military forces in South Korea -- from a total of 16 nations -- under U.S. command and a U.N. banner.

Fighting lasted until the signing of the July 27, 1953 armistice, which established the 38th paralell as the border between the two Koreas. No comprehensive peace agreement has yet been reached.

Huancayo, Peru, (NOV. 29) EFE - Maoist "Shining Path" guerrillas slashed the throats of two peasants they suspected of being informers and shot the father of one of them dead in an attack in Peru's central Andes region, police said Thursday.

The bodies of the two peasants, bearing hand-writtten notes accusing them of being informers, were laid out in the main square of Viques, in Junin department 315 km east of Lima.

The killings occurred Wednesday.

More than 21,000 people have been killed since Shining Path embarked on its rebellion 10 years ago and most of its armed operations have been conducted in the troubled Andean provinces.

Lima's La Republica newspaper reported Wednesday that towns in a quarter of Peru's territory lacked mayors because they had been murdered or driven away by Shining Path threats.

Since 1984, 91 mayors have been murdered, 46 of them in 1989 alone, by the guerrillas. None of the mayors, most of whom belonged to conservative, independent or left-wing parties, have been replaced.

The newspaper said 339 towns in forty provinces in the departments of Ayacucho Ancash and Huancavelica which have been declared emergency zones and placed under military control have no mayors.

Municipal elections called for November 11 were never held in these towns because of fears of Shining Path attacks.

Meanwhile, three unidentified gunmen late Wednesday fired from a car at the Lima home of parliamentary deputy and human rights activist Eduardo Lopez Therese, police said.

No one was injured in the attack.

VIENNA (NOV. 29) EFE - Austria has decided not to deport 1,200 Romanian refugees until all efforts to find them work have been exhausted, officials said Thursday.

The agreement was reached at a meeting between Interior Minister Franz Loeschnak, Social Affairs Minister Walter Geppert and social workers late Wednesday.

It was also agreed that any of the 1,200 Romanian refugees with relatives or lodgings in Austria would not be repatriated.

A team of Austrian parliamentary deputies would travel shortly to Romania to prepare a report on conditions there.

If their report and others by the Council of Europe and the human rights group Amnesty International concluded that the situation in Romania had worsened, the refugees could stay in Austria, the officials said.

Originally 7,000 Romanians faced expulsion but in the past week jobs or homes had been found for all but 1,200 of them thanks to widespread public efforts.

Last week the state-run airline refused to fly Romanian refugees back to their homeland and Austria's influential Roman Catholic Church protested the government's policy.

Austria's growing unemployment problem has been aggravated by the flow of refugees from eastern European countries struggling with severe economic crises.

STOCKHOLM (NOV. 29) EFE - A German pro-ecology political party is to help U.S. military deserters to escape possible service in the Gulf by flying them to Sweden, a Swedish newspaper reported Thursday.

The conservative daily Svenska Bagbladet said the Greens party had organized special flights to Sweden for possible deserters from the more than 60,000 U.S. soldiers stationed in Germany who may be sent to the Gulf.

The party was awaiting a decision on the so-called "Winter Holidays" operation from the Swedish embassy in Bonn, the paper reported, quoting Martin Thomas, a Greens party leader in the northwestern German town of Bremen.

Swedish embassy councillor Ingmar Karlsson said she thought Stockholm would find it difficult to accept possible deserters as Sweden supported all United Nations resolutions against Iraq following its August invasion of Kuwait.

Thomas, who claimed that 25 American soldiers so far wanted to desert, said "it is despicable to deny help" to people who do not want to die. During the Vietnam War, hundreds of U.S. soldiers posted in Germany deserted and went to live in Sweden.

The Swedish embassy said that late prime minister Olof Palme "would have fully supported" the Greens plan. Palme, who took part in anti-U.S. demonstrations during the Vietnam War, was assassinated by an unknown gunman in February 1986.

The United States sent some 220,000 troops to the Persian Gulf following the Iraqi invasion, and decided earlier this month to send up to 200,000 more, with some of them from bases in Germany.

MOSCOW (NOV. 29 EFE - Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin insisted he has no intention of challenging his long-time rival Mikhail Gorbachev for the Soviet presidency, in an interview appearing Thursday in the weekly Moscow News.

Yeltsin said he has already assured Gorbachev that he would not be a candidate if the constitution is changed to allow the Soviet presidency, to which Gorbachev was elected by parliament, to be decided by universal suffrage.

Its was the second time Yeltsin has sent conciliatory signals to his rival after Gorbachev earlier this month accused him of indulging in "opposition for opposition's sake".

On Monday he responded with what amounted to an offer of a cease-fire by inviting Gorbachev to put aside their political differences for the time being and work together to bring the Soviet economy out of its deep decline.

Yeltsin, who has presented himself as the champion of radical political and economic reforms, has been at loggerheads with Gorbachev since he was sacked as Moscow Communist Party boss in 1987.

Speaking of the new Treaty of Union redefining the relations between the 15 Soviet republics and the central government in Moscow, Yeltsin said in its present form, Russia,the largest and most economcially powerful republic, could not sign it.

The Kremlin, he charged, still has not recognized the sovereign rights which all the republics have unilaterally claimed and fails to see the only way to reconstruct the Soviet Union is from the bottom up, rather than from the Kremlin.

Until the Soviet and Russian governments sign an accord establishing the separation of powers and transfer of state property, a new treaty was most unlikely, Yeltsin said.

The Russian leader said he did not begrudge Gorbachev his achievements in the international sphere but said unfortunately these were not matched by the success of his domestic policies.

But he said Gorbachev +provokes indignation+ when he signs international accords which the republics have to pay for out of their own pockets or infringes their sovereign rights.

He cited as an example an item on the agenda of Gorbachev's forthcoming official visit to Tokyo, the dispute over the Kiril Islands in the northern Japanese archipelago, which the Soviets have occupied since the end of World War II.

Japan wants the islands back, but Yeltsin says they are part of Russia.

"I told the president that unless you first come to us for an accord we will send an official notice to the Japanese government stating that we cannot recognize any undertaking that infringes on our sovereignty," Yeltsin said.

JERUSALEM (NOV 29) EFE - Former Israeli Army officer Yair Klein pleaded guilty Thursday to a charge of illegally exporting military equipment and expertise to Colombia, the Armed Forces radio station said.

Klein, accused of giving military training to two Colombian farmers' organizations without the Israeli Defense Ministry's authorization, said he pleaded guilty to end the "trial" he said he was undergoing in the Israeli press.

Colombian authorities have charged that Klein, the president of an Israeli security firm, trained hit teams which have carried out scores of killings for powerful cocaine smugglers.

Klein has denied that accusation, but has said he trained Colombian farmers to defend themselves from attacks by leftist guerrillas.

The former lieutenant colonel told the Jerusalem court that press coverage of his alleged activities had caused serious damage to him and to Israel.

The Armed Forces radio station said Klein will be tried soon on another charge of illegal arms export, stemming from his alleged sale of weapons to the Caribbean island of Antigua which were found in the possession of Colombian drug traffickers earlier this year.

The maximum penalty is three years imprisonment for each charge of exporting arms or military expertise without Defense Ministry approval.

Klein has brought a libel suit against the independent Tel Aviv daily Yedioth Aharonoth, which published a series of articles about his alleged services to Colombian drug traffickers, for which he reportedly received dlrs 800,000 in payment.

GENEVA (NOV. 29) EFE - Over the next decade, AIDS will kill more than two million of women who are already infected with the HIV virus, the World Health Organization (WHO) predicted Thursday.

Michael Merson, director of the U.N. agency's Global Program on AIDS, said WHO estimated that nearly two-thirds of the some three million infected women would die by the year 2000.

Another 600,000 women would contract the virus by 1992, he told a press conference two days before the Geneva-based organization's annual World AIDS day, this year dedicated to the woman.

Merson forecast that by the turn of the century, up to 80 per cent of all HIV infections would be acquired by sexual intercourse.

Sub-Saharan Africa is worst affected with one in 40 women carrying the HIV virus which causes the AIDS syndrome.

WHO estimates one in 500 women in Latin America and one in 700 in the United States are HIV-positive.

Merson said that between eight and ten million people are currently thought to carry the HIV virus.

The total number of cases could climb to between 15 and 20 million by the year 2000, while some 10 million children could be infected by that date.

More than 8,000 new AIDS cases were reported in November 1990 by WHO's 156 member countries.

SAN SALVADOR (NOV 29) EFE - Salvadoran leftist rebels said Thursday that their new attacks in the capital over the last several days was to show that the Army had turned the city into an armed battlefield.

Leftist rebels, members of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN), claimed to have killed more than 400 soldiers in their nine-day-old offensive. Dozens of rebels and civilians have also been reported killed.

The FMLN accused the Army in a statement of using public facilities as trenches and fortifications. The FMLN also said the Army had taken over many schools, sports centers, and civilian buildings in the city.

Guerrillas attacked an Army patrol Wednesday night in the town of San Ramon, located about two km north of the capital. One soldier was reported injured.

A government statement also confirmed that rebels Wednesday set off explosives near the Central Election Council office. El Salvador is to hold municipal elections next March.

The FMLN began its latest offensive November 20, saying it was attempting to pressure the government to speed up United Nations-sponsored peace talks. The next session is scheduled for December though dates have not been set.

The Salvadoran government has said the new offensive is designed to "frustrate the possibility of a peace settlement."

CAIRO (NOV. 29) EFE - As the polls closed Thursday afternoon for the Egyptian parliamentary elections, officials said the the number of voters who had turned out for the ballot was low, after a boycott by the main opposition candidates.

The elections went ahead on schedule but the most optimistic estimates put voter turn-out at around 30 per cent.

The state-run radio and television did not broadcast any references to the number of voters.

Earlier, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak had said that Egyptians were free to vote or not as they pleased.

Over 16 million Egyptians were eligible to cast their ballot for the 444 seats being contested in the People's Assembly. Ten additional seats were to be assigned by presidential prerogative.

In the last legislature, consisting of 458 seats, Mubarak's National Democratic Party (NDP) had a 363 to 95 majority over the combined opposition.

Although smaller parties such as the socialist Tagamo party, Al Umma and Misru al Fatah are fielding candidates against the NDP, the two main opposition groups, the nationalist Neo-Wafd party and the Ahrar alliance, announced a boycott and urged voters to do the same.

They said the polls were undemocratic since the Supreme Court last May declared that the dissolution of parliament earlier this year had been illegal and because the state of emergency decreed following the assassination of then-president Anwar Sadat in 1981 was still in force.

But the government said last week that 81 Neo-Wafd activists were standing as independents, along with 119 members of the Ahrar alliance, which includes the fundamentalist Moslem Brotherhood, and ten more from other Moslem organizations.

XI'AN (NOV. 29) XINHUA - CHINESE PETROLEUM PROSPECTING TEAMS HAVE DISCOVERED A LARGE NATURAL GAS ZONE IN NORTHWEST CHINA'S SHAANXI-GANSU-NINGXIA-INNER MONGOLIA BASIN.

AN OFFICIAL FROM THE CHANGQING OIL PROSPECTING HEADQUARTERS, LOCATED IN JINGBIAN COUNTY, SHAANXI PROVINCE, SAID THAT GAS WAS FIRST FOUND IN 1986 WHILE PROSPECTING FOR OIL IN THE EASTERN AND CENTRAL PARTS OF THE BASIN.

AS OF NOW, A TOTAL OF 43 WELLS HAVE BEEN DRILLED IN SHAANXI PROVINCE AND THE INNER MONGOLIA AUTONOMOUS REGION. IN ADDITION, 24 TEST WELLS HAVE GIVEN OFF GAS, HALF OF WHICH HAVE A DAILY OUTPUT OF 200,000 CUBIC METERS EACH. THE HIGHEST OUTPUT EXCEEDS 300,000 CUBIC METERS A DAY, THE OFFICIAL SAID.

PROSPECTING DATA HAS ALSO PROVEN THE EXISTENCE OF A LARGE NATURAL GAS ZONE IN THE SHAANXI-GANSU-NINGXIA-INNER MONGOLIA AUTONOMOUS REGION.

EXPERTS SAY THAT THE NATURAL GAS IN THE BASIN IS NOT VERY DEEP BELOW THE EARTH'S SURFACE. THE DEPTH OF MOST GAS WELLS IS ABOUT 3,200 METERS. THEY ADDED THAT THE GAS IN THE BASIN IS OF GOOD QUALITY AND WILL BE EASY TO EXTRACT.

ACCORDING TO THE OFFICIALS, THE CHANGQING OIL PROSPECTING BUREAU HAS FORMED 10 TEAMS TO PROSPECT A LARGE PORTION OF THE BASIN WITH THE AIM OF CREATING CONDITIONS THAT WILL ENABLE THE CHINA OIL AND GAS CORPORATION TO DEVELOP THE AREA.

NEW DELHI (NOV. 29) XINHUA - "NAG" (SNAKE), INDIA'S FIRST INDIGENOUS THIRD-GENERATION ANTI-TANK MISSILE, WAS SUCCESSFULLY FLIGHT TESTED TODAY, ACCORDING TO DEFENSE MINISTRY OFFICIALS.

THE MISSILE WAS TESTED AT THE INTERIM TEST RANGE AT CHANDIPUR IN THE EASTERN STATE OF ORISSA AT 0807 HOURS THIS MORNING.

DEFENSE SCIENTISTS SAID THE MISSILE WAS MONITORED SUCCESSFULLY DURING ITS CONTROLLED FLIGHT. "IT HAS FULLY MET THE OBJECTIVE OF THE TRIALS," THEY ANNOUNCED HERE.

DEFENSE SCIENTISTS WERE SATISFIED IN ACHIEVING YET ANOTHER SUCCESS AFTER THE SUCCESSFUL TEST FIRING OF ITS INTERMEDIATE RANGE MISSILE AKASH AND SURFACE-TO-SURFACE MISSILE PRTHVI.

THEY SAID MORE TESTS WOULD BE CARRIED OUT BEFORE THE INDUCTION OF THE MISSILES IN THE INDIAN ARMY BY EARLY 1994.

THEY DESCRIBED "NAG" AS MORE THAN MATCHING ANY COMPARABLE MISSILE IN THE ARMORY OF THE NATO OR WARSAW PACT.

INDIA, WHICH HITHERTO HAD BEEN DEPLOYING THE RUSSIAN-MADE MULTIBARREL ROCKET SYSTEM, RECENTLY FACED IMMENSE DIFFICULTIES IN ACQUIRING SPARE PARTS FOR THESE CLOSE RANGE INFANTRY SUPPORT WEAPONS AS SUPPLIERS IN EASTERN EUROPE AND THE SOVIET UNION DEMANDED PAYMENT ON CONVERTIBLE CURRENCIES.

THE DEVELOPMENT AND TESTING OF THESE SYSTEMS IS SEEN HERE AS A MAJOR SUCCESS BY INDIAN DEFENSE SCIENTISTS.

LAGOS (NOV. 29) XINHUA - THE NIGERIAN GOVERNMENT HAS DECIDED TO MAKE ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT ASSESSMENT A PREREQUISITE FOR ALL NEW DEVELOPMENTAL AND INFRASTRUCTURAL PROJECTS FROM NEXT YEAR TO CURB THE WORSENING ENVIRONMENTAL SITUATION IN THE COUNTRY.

THESE PROJECTS INCLUDE HOUSING ESTATES, DAM CONSTRUCTION, HIGHWAYS, INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT AND LARGE SCALE FARMING, SAID MINISTER OF WORKS AND HOUSING, MAMMAN KONTAGORA AT THE FIRST CONFERENCE OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL ON ENVIRONMENT HERE WEDNESDAY.

HE SAID THE GOVERNMENT WILL CARRY OUT ENVIRONMENTAL AUDITING AS A SYSTEMATIC AND CONTINUOUS EVALUATION OF HOW MANAGEMENT AND EQUIPMENT ARE PERFORMING TO IMPROVE ENVIRONMENTAL CONDITIONS. THE MEASURE WILL BE APPLIED TO ALL PROJECTS, BOTH OLD AND NEW.

THE MINISTER SAID THESE MEASURES WERE PART OF GOVERNMENT STRATEGIES TO BALANCE DEVELOPMENT WITH THE NEED TO PROTECT THE ENVIRONMENT.

DESPITE OF ITS LOW LEVEL OF INDUSTRIALISATION, NIGERIA IS ONE OF THE COUNTRIES SUFFERING WORST ENVIRONMENT POLLUTIONS IN THE WORLD. NIGERIAN SCIENTISTS SAID THAT SOME PARTS OF NIGERIA, PARTICULARLY THE OIL PRODUCING AREAS OF THE NIGER DELTA, ARE UNDER THE THREAT OF ACID RAIN.

EXPERTS SAID THAT THE FLARING OF NATURAL GAS IN THE OIL PRODUCING AREAS WAS THE MAJOR SOURCE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE POSSI- BILITY OF ACID RAIN IN SOUTHEASTERN NIGERIA.

A RECENT WORLD BANK REPORT NOTED THAT ENVIRONMENTAL DEGRA- DATION IS AFFECTING ABOUT 30 MILLION PEOPLE IN NIGERIA DIRECTLY.

ECONOMICALLY, ENVIRONMENT LOSSES AGGREGATE ABOUT 300 MILLION U.S. DOLLARS ANNUALLY OR 13 PERCENT OF THE COUNTRY'S CURRENT GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT (GNP).

IN A BID TO CHECK THE NEGATIVE DEVELOPMENT, THE GOVERNMENT HAS SET UP A TRACKING SYSTEM WHICH WILL ENSURE THAT ALL CHEMICALS ENTERING THE COUNTRY, INCLUDING PESTICIDES, ARE MONITORED CARE- FULLY AND THOROUGHLY.

CAIRO (NOV. 29) XINHUA - MORE THAN 2,000 SOVIET JEWS WERE ARRIVING IN TEL AVIV TODAY, SETTING A NEW DAILY RECORD FOR THE JEWISH IMMIGRATION INFLUX, ACCORDING TO ISRAEL RADIO MONITORED HERE.

SOME 1,700 IMMIGRANTS HAD ARRIVED AT THE BEN-GURION AIRPORT BY NOON AND SEVEN MORE PLANES CARRYING SOVIET IMMIGRANTS WERE EXPECTED BEFORE MIDNIGHT.

ON TUESDAY, 1,351 SOVIET IMMIGRANTS ARRIVED, AND THE ISRAELI JEWISH AGENCY SAID TODAY'S ARRIVALS WOULD FAR EXCEED THAT NUMBER.

ADDRESSING ISRAELI EDITORS IN TEL AVIV, PRIME MINISTER YITZHAK SHAMIR SAID THAT ABSORBING THE IMMIGRANTS WAS HIS "OVERRIDING PRIOIRTY," AHEAD OF THE ARAB-ISRAELI CONFLICT WHICH HE SAID HAD BEEN SHOVELED TO THE SIDELINE ANYWAY.

HE SAID HE WOULD BRIEF PRESIDENT GEORGE BUSH ON THE INFLUX OF JEWISH IMMIGRANTS WHEN THEY MEET IN WASHINGTON ON DECEMBER 11.

JUSTICE MINISTER DAN MERIDOR SAID THAT ISRAEL WAS ASKING THE U.S. FOR A "SERIOUS AMOUNT OF MONEY" TO HOUSE THE NEW COMERS AND CREATE JOBS FOR THEM.

"I AM SURE THAT THE U.S. WILL BE READY TO HELP US," HE SAID. "I KNOW THE PRESIDENT VERY MUCH ESTEEMS THE GREAT IMMIGRATION ENTERPRISELIN WHICH WE ARE ENGAGED."

ISRAELI NEWSPAPERS HAVE REPORTED THAT SHAMIR WILL ASK FOR BILLIONS OF DOLLARS IN ADDITIONAL U.S. HOUSING LOAN GUARANTEES. THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION HAS AGREED IN PRINCIPLE TO PROVIDE 400 MILLION DOLLARS IN LOAN GUARANTEES PROVIDED ISRAEL DOES NOT HOUSE THE NEW COMERS IN THE OCCUPIED TERRITORIES.

ACCORDING TO THE JEWISH AGENCY, 26,000 SOVIETS HAVE ARRIVED SO FAR THIS MONTH, COMPARED WITH THE PREVIOUS HIGH OF 21,744 LAST MONTH.

SINCE JANUARY, 140,000 HAVE ARRIVED.

CAIRO, NOVEMBER 29 (XINHUA) - IRAQI PRESIDENT SADDAM HUSSEIN SAID TODAY THAT HE WAS NOT AFRAID OF FIGHTING THE AMERICANS IN A WAR, A REPORT FROM BAGHDAD SAID.

SADDAM ALSO CLAIMED THAT HE HAD THE TECHNOLOGY TO SHOOT DOWN U.S. STEALTH FIGHTER BOMBERS NOTED FOR THEIR CAPABILITY TO EVADE ENEMY RADAR DETECTION.

THE UNITED STATES HAS 22 F-111A STEALTH WARPLANES DEPLOYED IN UNSPECIFIC BASES AS PART OF ITS MILITARY BUILDUP IN THE GULF IN RESPONSE TO IRAQ'S AUGUST 2 INVASION OF KUWAIT.

"IF WAR BREAKS OUT," SADDAM WAS QUOTED AS SAYING, "WE WILL FIGHT IN A WAY WHICH WILL MAKE ALL ARABS AND MOSLEMS PROUD. WE ARE DETERMINED NOT TO KNEEL DOWN TO INJUSTICE."

HE TOLD UN ARAB YOUTH SOLIDARITY SEMINAR THAT THE UNITED STATES WOULD BE WRONG IF IT THOUGHT IRAQ WOULD "TREMBLE WITH FEAR."

THESE REMARKS CAME HOURS BEFORE THE THE U.N. SECURITY COUNCIL WAS TO VOTE ON A RESOLUTION AUTHORITIZING "ALL NECESSARY MEASURES" TO FORCE IRAQ OUT OF OCCUPIED KUWAIT IF SADDAM FAILS TO LEAVE BEFORE JANUARY 15.

THERE HAVE BEEN CONFLICTING REPORTS ABOUT WHETHER SADDAM HAS THE ABILITY TO DETECT THE STEALTH FIGHTER BOMBERS BY USING TECHNOLOGY PROVIDED BY FRANCE BEFORE THE GULF CRISIS BROKE OUT.

OTTAWA, (NOV. 29) XINHUA - CANADA'S TWO MAJOR OPPOSITION PARTIES HAVE SHARPLY CRITICIZED THE GOVERNMENT'S PLAN TO ENDORSE U.N. GO-AHEAD FOR MILITARY OFFENSIVES IN THE PERSIAN GULF, CANADA'S NATIONAL DAILY, GLOBE AND MAIL, REPORTED TODAY.

IT IS TOO SOON TO ABANDON THE INTERNATIONAL SANCTIONS AGAINST IRAQ AND RESORT TO MILITARY OFFENSIVES, AND CANADA SHOULD NOT BE LEADING THE CHARGE, LIBERAL PARTY OPPOSITION LEADER HERB GRAY SAID IN A PARLIAMENTARY DEBATE ON THE GULF CRISIS WEDNESDAY.

'WHILE IRAQ IS A DANGEROUS ENEMY ... THE UNITED STATES IS A DANGEROUS ALLY' WHOSE POLITICAL LEADERSHIP HAS BEEN ENTHUSING ABOUT WAR LIKE 'A KIND OF FOOTBALL GAME,' NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY CRITIC JOHN BREWIN SAID.

FOLLOWING THE LEAD OF THE UNITED STATES, CANADA HAS SENT THREE WARSHIPS AND 18 F-18 FIGHTER JETS TO JOIN THE U.S.-LED MULTI-NATIONAL FORCES IN THE GULF.

CANADIAN FOREIGN MINISTER JOE CLARK IS EXPECTED TO CONFIRM TODAY AT THE U.N. THAT CANADA WILL SUPPORT A U.S.-LED MOTION IN THE SECURITY COUNCIL THAT WILL AUTHORIZE THE USE OF FORCE AGIANST IRAQ, POSSIBLY AS SSON AS JANUARY 16, IF IRAQ DOES NOT WITHDRAW FROM KUWAIT.

DURING THE PARLIAMENTARY DEBATE, CLARK ARGUED THAT CANADA MUST BE REALISTIC AND FACE ITS RESPONSIBILITY.

THE PARLIAMENTARY DEBATE AND SHARP DIVISION OF FOREIGN POLICY POSITIONS WERE TRIGGERED BY THE GOVERNMENT'S PROPOSAL WEDNESDAY THAT THE CANADIAN PARLIAMENT ENDORSES THE EXISTING U.N. SANCTIONS AGAINST IRAQ AND ANY FUTURE ACTIONS THE U.N. AUTHORIZES.

'THE GOVERNMENT IS ASKING TOO MUCH.... WE WILL NOT GIVE THE GOVERNMENT A BLANK CHEQUE FOR ANY AND ALL ACTION,' GRAY SAID, EMPHASIZING THAT HIS PARTY WANTS THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT, LED BY THE PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY, TO SEEK SPECIFIC PARLIAMENTARY APPROVAL BEFORE SENDING CANADIAN FORCES INTO OFFENSIVE ACTION IN THE GULF.

HOWEVER, THE CONSERVATIVE GOVERNMENT, WITH ITS MAJORITY OF MORE THAN 10 MEMBERS IN THE 269-SEAT HOUSE OF COMMONS, IS CONSIDERED CERTAIN TO WIN ANY VOTE ON THE DEBATE TODAY.

TOKYO (NOV. 29) KYODO - JAPAN HAS DECIDED TO LOWER TARIFFS ON IMPORTS OF LEATHER PRODUCTS IN RESPONSE TO THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITY'S LONG-STANDING DEMAND, OFFICIALS OF THE MINISTRY OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INDUSTRY (MITI) SAID THURSDAY.

BUT THE OFFICIALS REFUSED TO SAY HOW LARGE THE REDUCTION MARGINS WILL BE.

"WE CANNOT REVEAL THE FIGURES AT THE MOMENT SINCE WE HAVE NOT YET OFFERED THEM TO THE EC," ONE OFFICIAL SAID.

JAPAN WILL TABLE THE OFFER DURING THE URUGUAY ROUND OF MULTILATERAL TRADE TALKS OVER MARKET ACCESS TO BE HELD IN BRUSSELS BEFORE THE DECEMBER 3-7 MINISTERIAL MEETING OF THE GENERAL AGREEMENT ON TARIFFS AND TRADE (GATT).

TOKYO MAINTAINS A TWO-TIER TARIFF SYSTEM FOR IMPORTS OF LEATHER SHOES AND OTHER LEATHER PRODUCTS, UNDER WHICH HIGHER TARIFFS ARE IMPOSED ON THE IMPORTS THAT SURPASS A FIXED QUOTA.

FOR INSTANCE, A TARIFF OF 27 PERCENT IS IMPOSED ON UP TO 4,120,000 PAIRS OF IMPORTED LEATHER SHOES. A TARIFF, WHICH IS EITHER 60 PERCENT OF IMPORT PRICE,

OR 4,800 YEN PER PAIR, WHICHEVER IS HIGHER, IS THEN IMPOSED ON THE IMPORTS OVER THAT.

THE MITI OFFICIALS SAID THE PROPOSAL FOR TARIFF CUTS WILL STILL BE FAR FROM THE EC'S DEMAND OF LOWERING THE HIGHER TARIFF RATE TO BELOW 20 PERCENT.

THE GOVERNMENT WILL ALSO BOOST THE SUBSIDIES TO THE CONCERNED DOMESTIC INDUSTRIES BY INCREASING THE DEBT GUARANTEE FUND, THE OFFICIALS SAID.

THE ALLOCATION FOR INCREASED FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE TO THE JAPANESE LEATHER INDUSTRIES WILL BE INCLUDED IN THE SUPPLEMENTARY BUDGET FOR FISCAL 1990, THEY SAID.

TOKYO (NOV. 29) KYODO - UNITED PARCEL SERVICE (UPS) OF THE UNITED STATES REJECTED THURSDAY AN OFFER FROM JAPAN'S TRANSPORT MINISTRY TO ALLOW IT FIVE CARGO FLIGHTS TO TOKYO A WEEK, MINISTRY OFFICIALS SAID.

UPS HAS BEEN REQUESTING SIX SLOTS A WEEK AND PERMISSION TO DEPART LATE AT NIGHT FROM TOKYO'S INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT IN NARITA, SO IT CAN BE COMPETITIVE AGAINST JAPANESE CARRIERS IN THE EXPRESS DELIVERY BUSINESS.

THE MINISTRY SAYS THERE IS NOT ENOUGH CARGO SPACE AT NARITA TO GRANT UPS SIX FLIGHTS.

THE U.S. COMPANY, SAYING LATE NIGHT LANDINGS AND EARLY MORNING DEPARTURES WOULD MAKE PARCEL PICKUPS IN TOKYO DIFFICULT, WANTS TO DO THE REVERSE. LATE NIGHT FLIGHTS ARE BANNED AT NARITA, HOWEVER, OUT OF CONSIDERATION FOR AREA RESIDENTS.

UPS'S REJECTION HIGHLIGHTED A TRADE DISPUTE BETWEEN JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES. THE U.S. GOVERNMENT HAS SUSPENDED JAPAN'S ACCESS TO TWO ROUTES TO CHICAGO PENDING RESOLUTION OF THE CONFLICT.

THE NARITA ROUTE WAS GRANTED TO UPS AS PART OF A JAPAN-U.S. AGREEMENT IN WHICH THE U.S. ORIGINALLY AGREED TO GIVE JAPAN AIRLINES AND ALL NIPPON AIRWAYS THE CHICAGO ROUTE.

WASHINGTON HAS SO FAR REJECTED ENTRIES BY THE TWO JAPANESE CARRIERS IN CHICAGO.

JAKARTA (NOV. 29) KYODO - POLICE HAVE BANNED THE PERFORMANCE HERE OF A SATIRICAL COMEDY PLAY BY THE THEATER KOMA THEATER GROUP, THE FOURTH TIME THE GROUP HAS BEEN BANNED IN THE LAST THREE YEARS, A SPOKESMAN FOR THE TROUPE SAID THURSDAY.

THE JAKARTA POST QUOTED A POLICE AREA CHIEF AS SAYING THE PLAY, CALLED "OPERA KECOA" MEANING "COCKROACH OPERETTA," WAS BANNED BECAUSE ITS SOCIAL CONTENT AND MESSAGE ARE SENSITIVE AND COULD CREATE PUBLIC UNREST.

"OPERA KECOA" TELLS THE STORY OF A POVERTY-STRICKEN TRANSVESTITE AND OTHER STREET PEOPLE.

NANO RIANTIARNO, 41, DIRECTOR OF THE TEATER KOMA DRAMA GROUP, SAID HE NEVER ANTICIPATED THAT THE POLICE WOULD BAN THE PLAY, DUE TO BE STAGED FROM NOVEMBER 28 TO DECEMBER 7.

SINCE THE TEATER KOMA GROUP WAS ESTABLISHED IN 1977, IT HAS BEEN PROHIBITED FROM PERFORMING PLAYS TWICE IN JAKARTA AND ONCE IN MEDAN, NORTHERN SUMATRA.

TEATER KOMA IS SCHEDULED TO PERFORM IN JAPAN FROM FEBRUARY 22 TO MARCH 7 NEXT YEAR AT THE INVITATION OF THE JAPAN FOUNDATION, BUT HAS NOT YET RECEIVED A REPLY FROM THE INDONESIAN GOVERNMENT TO ITS REQUEST FOR PERMISSION.

TEATER KOMA IS SCHEDULED TO PERFORM IN TOKYO, OSAKA, FUKUOKA, AND MAEBASHI, GUNMA PREFECTURE.

MOSCOW (NOV. 29) KYODO - NORTH KOREA TOLD THE SOVIET UNION IT IS PREPARED TO INDEPENDENTLY DEVELOP NUCLEAR ARMS SHOULD MOSCOW SET UP FULL DIPLOMATIC TIES WITH SEOUL, KOMSOMOLSKAYA PRAVDA REPORTED THURSDAY.

THE ORGAN OF THE KOMSOMOL (LENINIST YOUNG COMMUNIST LEAGUE OF THE SOVIET UNION) SAID IN A DISPATCH FROM PYONGYANG THAT NORTH KOREA MADE THE THREAT WHEN SOVIET FOREIGN MINISTER EDUARD SHEVARDNADZE MET HIS NORTH KOREAN COUNTERPART, KIM YONG NAM, IN PYONGYANG IN EARLY SEPTEMBER.

DESPITE THE THREAT, THE SOVIET UNION AND SOUTH KOREA ESTABLISHED DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS ON SEPTEMBER 30.

NORTH KOREA RATIFIED THE 1970 (NUCLEAR) NONPROLIFERATION TREATY IN 1985 BUT IT HAS NOT ALLOWED THE INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY TO INSPECT ITS NUCLEAR FACILITIES TO ENSURE THAT THEY ARE NOT BEING USED FOR WEAPONS PRODUCTION.

ACCORDING TO THE NEWSPAPER, EVEN SOVIET ATOMIC EXPERTS HAVE BEEN BARRED FROM NUCLEAR REACTORS IN THE SUBURBS OF PYONGYANG.

THE NEWSPAPER URGED THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT TO TAKE STIFFER MEASURES TO ENSURE THAT NORTH KOREA DOES NOT DEVELOP NUCLEAR ARMS.

THE SOVIET UNION HAS REPORTEDLY SUSPENDED ASSISTANCE FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF FOUR NUCLEAR POWER PLANTS IN NORTH KOREA.

#90333m0001 11/29/1990 ~Market Consensus Surveys

FALLS CHURCH, VA (NOV. 29) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY &

ECONOMY.

IN THE NEWS:

The Nikkei closes 341 points lower after being down more than 800. stocks overseas are slightly lower. ... Bonds slip overnight, with the long yield up to 8.45%. ... The dollar is stronger. ... North Sea crude is up 10 cents to $33.10. ... Italian financier GIANCARTO PARRETTI has expressed interest in buying MCA despite the company's agreement to sell to MATSUSHITA. Analysts generally discount the talk. ... CBS is said to be weighing a possible repurchase program for its stock. ... MERRILL LYNCH declares an immediate freeze on hiring as well as on merit raises for their senior executives. ... AMERICAN EXPRESS opened its first travel bureau in eastern Germany on Wednesday.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

The COMMERCE DEPARTMENT will release consumer spending data for October at 10 a.m. EST. It is expected to show a 0.1% rise, compared with a 1.1% increase in September. ... PRESIDENT BUSH hosts a reception to announce Star-Serve, an intiative to encourage community service by elementary school students. ... SUBARU OF AMERICA says it will trim its workforce by as much as 10%.

FROM THE BULLS:

"I am bullish on stocks and believe crude oil prices will easily fall below $23 a barrel in January and possibly to $16," says ROBERT ROBBINS of ROBINSON-HUMPHREY CO. in Atlanta. He believes that Saddam Hussein will quit rather than fight but either way he will be moved out of Kuwait. Robbins is looking for the Dow to move back to 2700 to 2800 by January and is sticking with an earlier prediction of 3200 by May. "I still think we are in one of the greatest bull markets of this century. I expect oil prices and inflation to come down and for the economy to be more resilient than most people think." ("Investor's Daily", 11/29)

"The direction of the market is up here," says MICHAEL METZ, market strategist at OPPENHEIMER & CO. "I think the bear market is over." Among the factors that have turned Mr. Metz bullish are signs that the dollar has bottomed against other currencies. A rising dollar should attract new foreign money to U.S. markets and leave the Federal Reserve with more leeway to loosen credit. (WSJ, 11/29)

Stock prices are headed higher even if the market does run into a couple of days of profit-taking, says DENNIS JARRETT, market strategist at KIDDER PEABODY. He says the upward trend won't end until the broader market shows signs of weakness greater than the industrial average. According to Mr. Jarrett the broader market remains relatively firm. "Certainly, we should get some warning [of the end of the rally], not an abrupt turn," he adds. (WSJ, 11/29)

FROM THE BEARS:

"We're probably having our year-end rally now and we'll probably have a selloff at year-end," says GEORGE BROOKS, editor of "Whisper on Wall Street" newsletter. "That would be contrary to the norm because there have only been seven times in the last 38 years that we have not had a year-end rally. ... I think we'll see a major bottom in 1991, probably after a relatively good January. ... I think we will sell off into February and March. ... I think the bear market will bottom out in the spring." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 11/28)

STOCK MARKET:

Stocks have now discounted the "coming of the best promoted recession in history," says FRED GORDON at the "Plain Talk Investor." "Better days lie ahead for the stock market," says Gordon: "[This has been] a severe downside correction with the framework of a bull market ... The bull's upward bias should prevail over the next year." Gordon would turn bearish if the Dow moved decisively below 2344-2365 or if interest rates reversed gears and headed higher. (CNBC "World Business", 11/29)

The U.N. resolution authorizing force will not effect the market because "it's already in the market," according to JOSEPH FESHBACH of SHEARSON LEHMAN BROTHERS. He says "we're in a bear market rally," and predicts the Dow will climb through the end of the year, but warns, "there's probably not that much upside left." (NYT, 11/29)

A U.N. declaration has investors thinking about the possibility of a January war. "Keep your powder dry," advises GRUNTAL's ALAN ACKERMAN. "Investors realize that if war comes, the market will go off sharply and then probably rally. They also want to keep their powder dry if peace should come because then there will be some tremendous buying opportunities." Ackerman says the market faces a very uncertain period, but it is steadying down and has a better tone. (FNN "Business Tonight", 11/28)

If a shooting war erupts in the Middle East, "the stock market would go down initially and then have a fair size bull market," says PHILIP CARRET of CARRET & CO. Historically, markets have come on strong after initial drops in response to military action, according to Carret. (FNN "Marketwrap", 11/28)

"It was a random-walk session [yesterday] in a random-walk week," says MICHAEL METZ at OPPENHEIMER. "It should be said, however, that the market has had excuses to go down, but has not. The market is looking for something to do and, come December, I think it's going to latch on to some sizable gains in the U.S. dollar. There's going to be a quiet creep back into the U.S. stock market by foreigners, although it's likely to be very surreptitious." ("The Washington Post", 11/29)

Weakness in U.S. and Japanese banks is a "technical concern" and poses no worldwide financial threat, says Swiss banker HANS BAER, chief executive at BANK JULIUS BAER. "I don't think we are worried about any domino effect on the world financial system," says Baer. "[But] it's a good thing that one talks about it -- whatever one talks about is not going to happen." (CNN "Business Day", 11/29)

"It was dull, like watching paint dry all day," MICHAEL BRONZINO of BRONZINO WOODWORTH INVESTMENTS says of yesterday's market "action." ("USA Today", 11/29)

STOCK TIPS:

WARREN BUFFETT is committing $25 million to the NATIONAL EQUITY FUND to help finance an estimated 750 homes for low-income families. "I look at it as an investment with pro-social aspects," says Buffett. "I don't view it in a philanthropic context." He expects to earn 15% to 20% a year for 10 years in the form of tax credits. ("USA Today", 11/29)

PIPER JAFFRAY & HOPWOOD analyst ROBERT KLEIBER repeats a "buy" opinion for SEIRRA ON-LINE, a California publisher of entertainment software. He also called its newest software game, KING'S QUEST 5, a "smash hit." The company jumped 2 1/2 to 16 1/2 yesterday. (WSJ, 11/29)

Toy company stocks are in the "Industry Spotlight" this morning in "USA Today." The article says analysts believe MATTEL, HASBRO, TYCO TOYS, TONKA and LEWIS GALOOB TOYS "might be ready to rebound." ("USA Today", 11/29)

"The food sector is not only outperforming a weak stock market, but providing investors with double-digit increases in dividends that have averaged 14 percent," says NOMI GHEZ of GOLDMAN, SACHS. "Were it not for the near doubling of oil prices, food company shares would be at their 52-week highs." (NYT, 11/29)

#90333m0002 11/29/1990 ~Market Consensus Surveys

FALLS CHURCH, VA (NOV. 29) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD CHAIRMAN ALAN GREENSPAN told the House Banking Committee that despite possible benefits to the U.S. trade balance, "a weaker dollar also is a cause for concern." This news caused the dollar to rise yesterday. "If you listened carefully to all of his comments, there should have been a neutral effect" in the currency market, says DAVID JAQUES, senior corporate trader ar BARCLAYS BANK in New York. Despite expressing concern for the dollar, he didn't mention direct intervention to support the U.S. currency, nor did he indicate the dollar's exchange rates would be an overriding concern in setting monetary policy. (WSJ, 11/29)

"We have not come to a conclusion" on whether to ease bank reserve requirements, but the central bank is "accelerating" its evaluation of the issue, says FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD CHAIRMAN ALAN GREENSPAN in his testimony before the House on Wednesday. (WSJ, 11/29)

"The evidence suggests that the maximum real economic growth occurs with a stable, noninflationary economic and financial environment," says FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD CHAIRMAN ALAN GREENSPAN. He says that "if that were consistent with easier monetary policy" then he would be in favor of lower rates. (NYT, 11/29)

In Greenspan's testimony about the economy, he admitted to easing because of economic weakness, according to BRIAN FABBRI of MIDLAND MONTAGU. "That's the first time the Fed has admitted to moving policy in the direction of ease because of economics." (FNN "Marketwrap", 11/28)

CHARLES LIEBERMAN at MANUFACTURERS HANOVER SECURITIES expects economic data to continue to be very weak -- "we are in a recession, after all" -- and for the Fed to respond with easing "as the inflation news gets a bit better." But he says that, up to now, the Fed is not being generous in providing bank reserves and that keeps market interest rates high. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 11/28)

MAXIMILLIAAN BRINNINKMEYER, fixed-income portfolio manager for ONE FEDERAL ASSET MANAGEMENT in Boston, says interest rates are likely to fall further as the core rate of inflation declines. Still, he says, bond buyers need to be cautious because the best gains in bond prices have been realized. "We've already seen two-thirds of the gains" in long-term bond prices, he says, adding that he's being especially wary because bond market rallies "tend to go too far and trap some people." (WSJ, 11/29)

The Treasury's five-year note auction yesterday drew surprisingly strong demand for small investors. The amount of noncompetitive bids -- those which come mainly from individual investors -- totaled $835 million, the highest level for that maturity in several years. "It was really strong. It caught my eye right off the bat," says JOSEPH LIRO, money market economist at S.G. WARBURG SECURITIES, INC. Mr. Liro says the large noncompetitive bid reflects in part a perception by many investors that interest rates "over the next year are going to be moving lower" as the Federal Reserve attempts to stimulate economic growth by pushing down short-term interest rates. (WSJ, 11/29)

"Interest rates in general are moderately down in view of what is happening to the economy," says WALTER FRANK of DONOGHUE'S. "The markets are still concerned with the unresolved Middle East situation." (NYT, 11/29)

THE ECONOMY:

FED CHAIRMAN ALAN GREENSPAN says the economy took a "meaningful downturn" in October and November. But under questioning yesterday by a House committee, he added: "The world out there, when you look at the hard data, is not in as bad a shape as it feels. If the economy were as bad at this point, or was just about to get as bad, as a number of my friends and your friends keep telling us, we should see weaker numbers in a number of key areas. ... I don't think one dismisses people's views of the way the economy is going as being irrelevant. They are quite relevant. But they have, in the past, been wrong. And I think we have to be prepared for the possibility that it is being overdone. I don't want to take a position at this stage because, frankly, I don't know." ("The Washington Post", 11/29)

"He came about as close to saying we're in a recession as a Fed chairman ever will," says DAVID BERSON, chief economist at the FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION. ("USA Today", 11/29)

"I think what we're looking at is a gradual decline" in the economy, says FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD CHAIRMAN ALAN GREENSPAN. "If it persists [it] will give us a fourth quarter GNP which is negative." (FNN "Marketwrap", 11/28)

"You don't need a declining GNP for a recession to get underway," says IRWIN KELLNER of MANUFACTURERS HANOVER. "Five of the eight post-war recessions began with the GNP rising in what was ultimately determined to be the first quarter of recession." (FNN "Marketwrap", 11/28)

"Inflation is not really a problem," says JOANNE PETERSON of BANKAMERICA. She says the "oil and food shocks" have been caused by the "perceptions of the Iraqi crisis." (FNN "Marketwrap", 11/28)

"Durable-goods orders tend to have sharp volatility" as the 3.6% rise in October durable goods indicates, says SAMUEL KAHAN, chief financial economist at FUJI SECURITIES in Chicago. The latest figures, he says, "may cause some people to scratch their heads and say, are we seeing a significant slowdown or not? The truth is we are." (WSJ, 11/29)

U.S. construction contracting in October slid to its lowest level in four years, in a further sign that the economy is entering a recession, according to the F.W. DODGE DIVISION of McGRAW-HILL. The Dodge Index on construction contracting slipped 3% in October to 145, its lowest value in more than four years. So far this year, contracts for new building total $207 billion, off 10% from a year earlier. ("Investor's Daily", 11/29)

The CONFERENCE BOARD survey of Christmas gift spending shows a drop of 4% this year with the largest decline occurring in the Northeast. "Holiday joy is being tempered by continuing fears about the Middle East crisis and pending federal tax increases," says FABIAN LINDEN, executive director of the board's consumer research center. He adds, "It may very well be that when all the lights are lit and carols are being sung, the gift-giving spirit will be stronger than suggested." The problem, says Linden, is that people are worried about their jobs: "Usually, on the question of will there be more jobs in the future, optimists outnumber pessimists by two-to-one. Now the reverse is true." (WSJ and CNN "Business Morning", 11/29))

"Don't count Santa out yet," says ALAN G. MILLSTEIN, editor and publisher of the "Fashion Network Report." "No one wants to be perceived as Scrooge when it comes to the kids and Grandma." Millstein also notes, "People are finding that last year's dollar buys more this year. The prices are a lot more appealing. [Retailers] are using everything to pull the customer in off the malls except a hook." ("Investor's Daily", 11/29)

OSLO, NORWAY (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Group Managing Director Egil Gade Greve has informed Den norske Bank's board of directors that he wishes to exercise his option to retire from his position in 1992, the bank announced. To ensure continuity, the board of directors has today recommended Finn A. Hvistendahl, executive vice president in Norsk Hydro, to the position of deputy group managing director and Greve's successor. The appointment will be made at a joint meeting between the bank's supervisory board and the board of directors on Dec. 11, 1990.

As group managing director, Greve will be responsible for the bank's operations through 1991. Hvistendahl will assume the position of deputy group managing director during the first quarter of 1991 and will have chief responsibility for planning the 1992 business year and future operations. The change of managing director will take place during the first half of 1992.

Hvistendahl (48) is executive vice president and a member of the corporate management of Norsk Hydro. He is currently a member of Den norske Bank's board of directors and has previously served on Bergen Bank's supervisory board and, from 1988, on Den norske Creditbank's board of directors. He is a graduate engineer and has held a number of managerial positions in the Hydro Group. From 1983 to 1987, he held the position of chief financial officer and was responsible for the group's financial planning and accounting.

In addition to his position on Den norske Bank's board of directors, Hvistendahl holds a number of non-executive posts within the Norwegian and international business communities. He has also been a member of the working committee of the Confederation of Norwegian Business and Industry.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FL (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Alamo Rent A Car announced today that, effective Dec. 1, 1990, it will be the first and only major car rental company to provide a choice of three money-saving options for consumers who opt to purchase loss, damage and theft protection, commonly called collision damage waiver, when renting a car for business or pleasure.

The nationwide launch follows a successful pilot program introduced last April when Alamo broke with the industry's tradition of "all or nothing" CDW. Alamo began to provide Florida and Hawaii renters with a first-ever-in-the-industry choice of three options varying in price from $3 to $6 to $9, instead of a one-choice product of as much as $13 per day as is still offered by all major car rental firms.

Collision Damage Waiver, or CDW, is an optional product available to renters who wish their responsibility for damage and theft of the rental vehicle waived, subject to the terms and conditions of the rental agreement.

CDW is generally purchased by those consumers who carry no personal auto insurance coverage, those whose personal credit cards do not provide collision damage protection, as well as those who prefer not to file claims for damage or theft with their own insurance carrier fearing a rise in premiums, policy review or even cancellation, depending on the size of the claim.

The three new consumer-protection products that make up the "Waiver Saver" series -- Maxi Waiver Saver, Waiver Saver 3000 and Waiver Saver 500 -- provide three choices of price and coverage options tailored to virtually every renter's needs.

Alamo's new Waiver Savers replace the traditional collision or loss damage waiver product now sold at virtually all car rental counters in the nation.

Alamo's Waiver Savers will be offered at all Alamo locations nationwide except those in Illinois, New York, Indiana or Texas due to constraints imposed by state law.

Long the leader in the leisure car rental industry, Alamo has built a reputation as the company offering the most attractive daily and weekly rates, as well as unrestricted, unlimited free mileage on all its cars, at all times.

Founded in 1974, Alamo Rent A Car is now the world's largest independently owned and operated rental car company and a leader in the leisure travel sector serving more than 5 million customers annually. It serves 92 percent of the nation's deplaning passengers in 90 locations in 36 states and the District of Columbia, as well as 27 locations in England and Scotland operated through its affiliated company, Guy Salmon Services, Ltd.

JACKSON, MICH. (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Something illuminating happens in Michigan this time of year. In a span of a few weeks, homes, stores, shopping malls and downtowns are transformed through the drama of holiday lighting.

Consumers Power Company estimates approximately 5 percent, or roughly 125 gigawatt-hours, of its December electrical load is attributed to the impact of the holiday season. Lighting demand in December comes from businesses and shopping malls which install special exterior and interior lighting displays and extend shopping hours. Consumers Power provides electric service to 275 cities and villages, many of which add streetlamps and other downtown holiday lights or displays. Extra demand can also be attributed to the fact that people decorate their homes and spend more time there due to the holidays and vacations.

"We talk a lot about how our residential customers benefit from rates which are in the bottom 20 percent of what the average U.S. customer pays for electric service," said Paul Elbert, vice president of marketing, rates and wholesale power transactions. "However, during the holiday season this fact is better illuminated."

Within a couple of weeks, about one million homes in Consumers Power Company's service territory will be decorated with an average of four strands of outdoor electric lights. If these lights glow for four hours each evening, the cost would be less than 2 cents per night for the mini-lights and about 6 cents for the larger bulbs. The cost would be comparable to having your porch light on for the same time period.

During the holiday season, more than one million Christmas trees will be put up in homes throughout Consumers Power's service territory. Each of these trees hosts an average of four strings of lights which are lit an estimated 5 to 6 hours each day for about 21 days. The electricity cost per hour per strand of the mini-lights is approximately one-tenth of a cent, making the total energy cost of powering the average Christmas tree for all 21 days of the season about 65 cents.

Consumers Power Company, the principal subsidiary of CMS Energy Corporation (NYSE: CMS), is Michigan's largest utility serving almost 6 million of the state's 9 million residents in 67 of the 68 Lower Peninsula counties.

LONDON (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Reuters today announced that its managing director and chief executive, Glen Renfrew, would retire on March 1, 1991, and be succeeded by Peter Job, now managing director, Reuters Asia. Job is 49 and has been with Reuters for 27 years. He is at present based in Hong Kong and will move to London in the new year.

Renfrew, who is 62, will be retiring on the tenth anniversary of his appointment to his present position and after nearly 39 years with the company.

Renfrew, an Australian, joined Reuters in London in 1952 after graduating from Sydney University. He served in various editorial and management roles in Asia, Africa and Europe and, between 1964 and 1971, managed Reuters' entry into the computer-based information business. He was manager of Reuters North America from 1971 until his appointment as chief executive.

Job was born in Exeter, England, and educated at Clifton College, Bristol, and Oxford University, where he took a degree in French and German.

He joined Reuters in 1963 and, after training in London and Paris, served as a correspondent and in editorial management posts in India, Malaysia, Indonesia, the United Kingdom and Latin America.

He moved into business management in 1974 and over the years assumed steadily increasing responsibility across the full range of the company's activities and covering at one stage all of the world outside Europe and North America.

He directed Reuters' development in Asia and the Pacific, including its investment and expansion in Japan. When Reuters adopted time-zone management in 1988, he was appointed to his present position of managing director, Reuters Asia. He became an executive director of Reuters Holdings PLC on June 28, 1989.

Reuters Holdings PLC (NASDAQ: RTRSY) supplies the global business community and news media with a wide range of facilities including real-time financial data and transaction services, access to numeric and textual historical databases, news and news pictures. Reuters has a controlling interest in Visnews, the international television news agency, and Reuter Group companies design and install trading room systems. Reuters obtains information from around 160 exchanges and over-the-counter markets and from a network of 1,310 journalists, photographers and cameramen. SOUTHFIELD, MI (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - A new United States patent, No. 4,968,359, has been issued to Southfield-based Bonal Technologies, Inc. for sub-harmonic stress relieving. Bonal Technologies, a wholly owned subsidiary of Bonal International, Inc., manufactures and markets Meta-Lax sub-harmonic stress relief and weld conditioning equipment.

In announcing the issuance of the new patent, A. George Hebel III, president of Bonal International, said, "This latest patent is a result of our ongoing research and development program. It represents an important step in the advancement of our proprietary energy-saving, non- thermal stress relieving and weld conditioning technology. We have also applied for sub-harmonic patents in nine other countries in Europe and the Pacific Basin."

Bonal Technologies recently announced a facilities expansion and the move of its research and development and electronic equipment assembly departments as well as marketing and administrative departments to Southfield. Welding and machining departments will remain at the company's original location in downtown Detroit and will expand into the areas vacated by the electronics, marketing and administrative departments.

Meta-Lax non-thermal, sub-harmonic stress relief systems provide a fast, low-cost alternative to energy-intensive furnace heat treating to neutralize residual internal stresses in metal structures. Unlike heat treating, the Meta-Lax process is independent of the size of the object being stress relieved. The cost of sub-harmonic stress relief processing is negligible, and it can be accomplished in minutes compared with hours or days for heat treating.

In weld conditioning applications, the Meta-Lax sub-harmonic process improves and strengthens welded components. Mild vibrations applied to components as they are being welded accelerate the atomic activity in the metal to condition the welds. This unique vibratory action prevents weld cracking and embrittlement, eliminating major problems in welded structures.

Bonal International, Inc. is a designated security trading in the over-the-counter market with CUSIP No. 097-770-101.

GRAND RAPIDS, MI (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Autodie Corporation (NASDAQ: ADIE) today reported fourth-quarter and year-end results for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31, 1990.

The manufacturer of large-scale tools and dies reported a loss of about $1.5 million, or 28 cents per share, on sales of $25 million for the fourth quarter. That compares with net income of about $2 million, or 39 cents per share, on sales of about $33.5 million for the same period last fiscal year.

The company posted a loss of about $21.1 million, or $4.10 per share, on sales of about $107 million for fiscal 1990. That compares with net income of about $5.4 million, or $1.05 per share, on sales of about $121 million for fiscal 1989.

President and Chief Executive Officer Joseph Spruit said the fourth- quarter results indicate that the company is on track to regaining profitability.

While Autodie lost money in the fourth quarter, the results were significantly better than the $14.8 million in losses that the company posted in the third quarter ended May 31, 1990.

"Fiscal 1990 is behind us now, and we are confident that the company's situation will improve markedly in 1991," Spruit said.

Autodie is a leading manufacturer of large-scale custom stamping dies and injection and compression molds. Autodie and its wholly owned subsidiary, Autobond Corporation, employ about 750 people.

ST. PAUL, MN (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Merrill Corporation (NASDAQ: MRLL) today announced record operating results for the three- month and nine-month periods ended Oct. 31, 1990.

Revenue for the third fiscal quarter was $26,614,000, the highest quarterly revenue in the company's history, and an increase of 41 percent from $18,913,000 in the third quarter a year ago. Net income for the quarter was $779,000, or 22 cents per share, compared to $20,000, or one cent per share, last year.

Revenue for the first nine months was $74,382,000, an increase of 50 percent from $49,582,000 for the same period a year ago. Nine-month net income was $3,060,000, or 84 cents per share, compared to a net loss of $824,000, or 22 cents per share, last year. Last year's nine-month results included a non-operating charge of approximately $1.8 million, or 48 cents per share, from the write-off of the company's investment in Sorg, Inc.

Merrill President and CEO John Castro said, "To report record results in a period of sluggish demand for financial printing is very gratifying. In large part these results reflect the success of strategies to grow our financial printing business through acquisition, as well as bringing better balance to our sources of revenue through the expansion of commercial and other service areas."

Merrill Corporation is a leading provider of on-demand, 24-hour-a- day typesetting, printing, document reproduction and distribution services to financial, legal and corporate markets nationwide.

EDINBURGH, SCOTLAND (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Profits after exceptional items but before taxation at the Royal Bank of Scotland Group amounted to 262.2 million pounds sterling for the year to Sept. 30, 1990 (1989 - 228.2 million pounds), the Group announced today. Increased bad debt and investment provisions arising from the deterioration in the U.K. economy were the main factor reducing profit (before an exceptional credit) to 241.4 million pounds (1989 - 336.5 million pounds). Sales of rescheduling country debt during the year gave rise to a 20.8 million pound release of exceptional provisions made in previous years (1989 - charge of 108.3 million pounds).

Earnings per share, after exceptional items, were 21.1 pence (1989 - 19.9p). Extraordinary items provided additional profits of 34.6 million pounds. The dividend for the year has been raised by 16.7 percent to 8.4p per share.

Total assets have grown by 10 percent to 30.1 billion pounds. The Group's capital base remains strong with shareholders' funds of 1,508.4 million pounds and a total risk asset ratio of 11.6 percent.

-- Profit after the increased bad debt and investment provisioning but before exceptional items fell by 95.1 million pounds.

-- Profit before taxation increased by 14.9 percent to 262.2 million pounds.

PORTLAND, OR (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Fone America (OTC Pink Sheets) will soon begin providing operator services in a five-state area served by Southwestern Bell Telephone, announced Peter Jacobs, president of the Portland-based telecommunications company.

Fone America has subscribed to Southwestern Bell Telephone's Operator Call Processing service to provide operator assistance for calls terminating outside of the company's calling areas, Jacobs explained.

"We anticipate generating revenue in excess of $5 million per year with our share of operator-assisted traffic in Southwestern Bell's territory," Jacobs said. "This and other recently signed agreements should have a very positive impact on Fone America's profit picture."

Fone America, a publicly-owned company, currently generates approximately $25 million in annual revenue, providing operator and information services primarily to hospitality, payphone and hospital markets in more than 30 states.

Southwestern Bell's Claudia Pinch explained that as a result of Southwestern Bell Telephone's new service offering, carriers other than AT&T will be given an opportunity to process operator assisted calls that terminate outside of Southwestern Bell's calling areas -- Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas. The traffic would be approximately 60 million telephone calls per year, she added.

Pinch said AT&T had been the company's exclusive default carrier for operator services for all interstate and interLATA (Local Access and Transport Area) calls, but Southwestern Bell Telephone filed a tariff with the Federal Communications Commission to allow other companies to handle those types of operator-assisted calls.

"Southwestern Bell is one of the first local exchange carriers (LEC) in the country to provide this type of new business opportunity to alternative providers of operator-assisted services and we expect other LECs to do the same," said Terry Trapp, Fone executive vice president. "It opens up an entire new market to us that wasn't available prior to the deregulation of the telephone industry."

Fone America is a publicly-owned company (traded over the counter pink sheets as 3FONA) and is recognized as one of the fastest growing operator services providers in the country, having grown from the 42nd to one of the top 10 companies of its kind in less than two years.

COSTA MESA, CA (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Headquarters, U.S. Air Force Command has announced the adoption of Parker Automotive Corp.'s (NASDAQ: PKRA) CarbonClean Industrial Diesel Tune system for worldwide use of U.S.A.F. motor vehicle maintenance organizations.

The implementation of this adoption will be through the U.S.A.F. Air Logistics Command, who has assigned a national stock number to CarbonClean Industrial Diesel Tune (IDT) and has caused the system to be included in the U.S.A.F. Table of Allowance.

Procurement of the product will be centralized through the U.S.A.F. Air Logistics Command, and will be funded by the Air Logistics Command rather than being funded by each individual U.S.A.F. base.

The U.S.A.F. intends to clean some 160,000 diesel vehicles with the CarbonClean system. Based on further discussions with the U.S.A.F., Parker Automotive expects to ship 458 machines to various U.S.A.F. facilities worldwide to accomplish the U.S.A.F.'s aims.

Michael E. Parker, founder and chairman of the board of Parker Automotive said "The Air Force has taken an important step in doing something about pollution. As the first U.S. government agency to implement the use of CarbonClean agency wide, the U.S.A.F. has acknowledged that CarbonClean has many advantages over the traditional manual method of cleaning fuel systems - and no disadvantages."

While the U.S.A.F. is implementing the product as a cost-reduction and efficiency-improving device, their recognition of the environmental benefits of CarbonClean is expected to set a trend that other government agencies might follow.

Parker Automotive Corp. looks for revenues of $3 to $4 million from this adoption in the near future, with the possibility of $10 to $11 million in revenue per year from this outstanding account.

CarbonClean was tested for a lengthy period by the U.S.A.F. "MEEP" (Maintenance Equipment Evaluating Program) before being adopted and implemented into the Table of Allowance. During testing, the U.S.A.F. found that the product was vastly superior and more efficient than conventional fuel system cleaning methods.

Numerous independent agencies worldwide have tested the CarbonClean product families and in each case reported dramatic reductions in exhaust emissions and significant increases in fuel economy and performance.

Parker Automotive is headquartered in Costa Mesa. Manufacturing facilities are in Fountain Valley, Calif., and sales offices are maintained worldwide. Currently, CarbonClean products are used and distributed in more than 60 nations.

COSTA MESA, CA (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Parker Automotive Corp. (NASDAQ: PKRA) announced today that it has agreed to enter into a long-term distribution agreement for its CarbonClean products in Spain and Portugal with Medosa Servicios, S.A., a domestic associate of the CEPSA group of companies. Medosa Servicios, S.A. has been assigned this project CEPSA and will coordinate the entrance of the remaining divisions of CEPSA into the project.

CEPSA Group is one of the most important industrial corporations in Spain. Its activities include all areas relating to the petroleum industry, which are carried out by the parent company and more than 40 inter-related companies. Total turnover in 1989 was over 450,000 million pesetas ($4.5 billion U.S.)

Today, CEPSA has two refineries, numerous petrol chemical plants, two plants for lubricants, three for packaging, one for manufacturing asphalts, 11 plastics processing plants, one fine chemical plant, four bunkering factories, six airplane supply stations, six commercial offices and an extensive network of service stations, all which provide the group with a strong brand image. CEPSA (Compania Espanola de Petroleos, S.A.) was established on Sept. 26, 1929. As of Dec. 31, 1989, company capital totaled 29,730,549,000 pesetas ($297,305,490, U.S.).

CEPSA's shares have been quoted on the continuous stock market as quantified listed securities since Sept. 1989. The degree of CEPSA's commercial development is rising. It supplies the national market of Spain from both inside and outside the scope of the monopoly, is active in marine ports and airports and carries out major export activity. More than 40 well-established and diversified companies represent a structure integrated in the field of petroleum. Its activities span exploration, crude production to plastic processing and technological research in its own facilities.

The agreement with Parker Automotive Corp. (PAC) details the terms and conditions under which the companies shall work together and establishes annual goals. While there is no firm requirement for these goals to be met, PAC believes that there is no doubt that Medosa Servicios, S.A. will meet their goals and be the most successful distributor in their network.

The agreement is to be 20 years in duration, renewable for another 20 years upon the performance of certain conditions. As well, the agreement call for goals of $113 million U.S. of products in the first three years and approximately $50 million U.S. annually thereafter. Also in the agreement is a 90-day option for Medosa Servicios to distribute CarbonClean throughout France and Belgium on substantially similar terms and conditions to this agreement. If the option is exercised, an additional separate agreement will be negotiated.

Parker Automotive manufactures a line of products marketed under the CarbonClean name that are patented and proprietary. These products have proven to reduce emissions, increase fuel economy and improve maintenance management in tests around the world.

PAC suspended trading in its NASDAQ-listed securities Tuesday, Nov. 20 as too many parties were aware of the negotiations. The company wanted to wait until the agreement in principle was fully negotiated before the news of the magnitude of the agreement reached the public.

Parker Automotive is headquartered in Costa Mesa. Manufacturing facilities are in Fountain Valley, Calif., and regional sales offices are maintained worldwide.

IRVING, TX (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - IMCO Recycling Inc. (NASDAQ: IMRI) today announced a $3.0 million program to upgrade and expand the production capability of its Rockwood, Tenn. aluminum recycling plant.

According to Ralph L. Cheek, chairman and chief executive officer, the program is being carried out to serve the needs of large aluminum can stock producers, particularly Alcoa, which are supplied by the Rockwood plant.

The program, which is expected to be complete by the end of next year's third quarter, will include installation of modern shredding and delaquering equipment to increase and improve the plant's ability to handle used beverage cans (UBCS). It will also include installation of a new recycling furnace that will raise the Rockwood facility's annual capacity by 20 percent.

Cheek said the program will make the company one of very few independent recyclers with advanced shredding and delacquering capability. "This effort will increase the amount of metal recovered from materials processed at Rockwood and also improve the quality of the plant's end product," he said. "On completion, we believe the overall efficiency and quality of Rockwood's operations will be unsurpassed in the recycling industry."

A large majority of IMCO Recycling's revenues are derived from "tolling" transactions that involve the conversion for a fee of UBCS, scrap and dross owned by can stock producers.

The company, which has nearly doubled its annual production capacity since the beginning of 1988, is currently expanding its Morgantown, Ky. plant in a move that will raise its total annual capacity by 15 percent to 500 million pounds at year-end 1990. The Rockwood expansion will further increase IMCO Recycling's capacity to 535 million pounds by the third quarter of 1991.

IMCO Recycling is the largest independent recycler of aluminum beverage cans and their by-products in the United States and is the nation's only publicly owned firm whose activities are concentrated in the aluminum can recycling market.

GRAND RAPIDS, MI (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Steelcase Inc. Chairman Robert C. Pew today announced the appointment of Jerry K. Myers as president and chief executive officer of the parent corporation, effective Monday, Dec. 3, 1990.

Myers, 49, succeeds Frank H. Merlotti, 64, who has been president of the parent company since 1980 and CEO since 1988.

Myers was most recently executive vice president and general manager of TRW's Automotive Sector in Cleveland.

In his new role, Myers will oversee the parent company's major business entities. Reporting to him will be: Rob Pew, president, Steelcase Operations; William Crawford, president, Stow & Davis; L. Paul Brayton, president, Steelcase Design Partnership; Bob Ballard, president, Steelcase Canada Ltd., and Don Rocheleau, president, Attwood Corporation. In addition, Myers will oversee the finance, international, human resources and community relations areas.

The '90's promise to be an extremely stimulating and challenging period for our parent corporation and our operating divisions," Pew said in making the announcement. "We have a tradition of managerial continuity. Our strong division management team will help support Jerry as he leads the parent corporation.

"Jerry shares and appreciates the traditions and values of our company," Pew said.

Pew also cited Myers' strong international and financial experience. "That experience should serve us very well, as we expect substantial growth in the international arena over the next several years," he said.

At TRW, a major manufacturer of automotive parts, Myers was responsible for a business which encompassed 29,000 employees, 115 plants in 21 countries, and sales of $3 billion annually.

Steelcase Inc. leads the contract furniture industry, with sales of nearly $1.9 billion. The company is based in Grand Rapids, and has more than 14,000 employees in North America and nearly 21,000 worldwide. It has joint venture operations in France and Japan, and is the leading manufacturer - through its Steelcase Strafor operation in France - throughout Europe.

UPPER SADDLE RIVER, NJ (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Western Union Corporation (NYSE: WU) today announced that its exchange offer, in which the company had been proposing to issue new notes and common shares in exchange for up to $530 million of its presently outstanding 19-1/4 percent senior secured notes and 16 percent notes, expired at midnight on November 28. The exchange offer was not completed because sufficient tenders were not received to meet the minimum tender conditions of the offer.

The company also said that it plans to commence a tender offer for a minimum of $250 million and a maximum of $350 million principal amount of the outstanding 19-1/4 percent and 16 percent notes, at a cash purchase price of $500 per $1,000 principal amount of notes, promptly upon the effectiveness of its registration statement covering the proposed tender offer.

In the expired exchange offer, which had been initiated in July and extended over a four-month period, the company had been seeking tenders of at least 95 percent of the outstanding principal amount of the 19-1/4 percent notes and 80 percent of the 16 percent notes. The amounts actually tendered were approximately 64 percent and five percent, respectively. These notes now are being returned to noteholders, who will have the opportunity to resubmit them in the cash tender offer.

In addition, since the exchange offer expired without being completed, the proposed amendment to the company's restated certificate of incorporation approved by Western Union shareholders in August will not be implemented. Under the proposed amendment, the company's Class A senior preferred shares and Class B convertible preferred shares would have been reclassified into common shares.

The foregoing is not and shall not be deemed an offer, including an offer of any security, or a solicitation of any vote or consent in connection with the proposed tender offer. Any such offer or solicitation will be made only by means of an offer to purchase included in a registration statement filed with and declared effective by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

DETROIT (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - MCN Corporation (NYSE: MCN) announced today that its wholly owned subsidiary, Coenergy Ventures, Inc., has become the limited partner in a natural-gas fired cogeneration project currently in the final construction stages in Ada, Mich.

The cost of the facility is estimated at $45 million and is expected to be financed more than 50 percent by long-term bank debt. Coenergy Ventures' investment will be approximately $16 million. Coenergy Ventures will also sell the project the more than two billion cubic feet of natural gas needed for operation each year.

According to MCN Chairman Alfred R. Glancy III, "The investment in the Ada Cogeneration Project fits well within our corporate philosophy of expanding into businesses related to the natural gas business."

The cogeneration project's primary purpose is to generate electricity for sale to Consumers Power Company. The generating capacity is 30 megawatts. Steam from the cogeneration process will be sold to Amway Corporation whose corporate headquarters and primary production operations are located adjacent to the project.

The facility is scheduled to complete test firing in December, with initial sales of electricity and steam commencing the following month. The project's general partner is Trigen Power Company, a U.S. subsidiary of North Canadian Oils Ltd. which is part of the Noranda family of companies.

MCN Corporation is the holding company for Michigan Consolidated Gas Company, a natural gas distribution, transmission and storage company serving more than one million customers in 465 communities throughout Michigan; for Citizens Gas Fuel Company, a natural gas utility serving customers in Lenawee County, Mich.; and for MCN Investment Corporation, which owns both Coenergy Ventures, which pursues energy-related opportunities throughout the United States and Canada, and other subsidiaries in the data processing and energy services businesses.

BETHESDA, MD (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - In a speech before a Washington seminar on bank operations, money laundering and financial institution criminal activity, Henry A. Berliner Jr., president and chief executive officer of Second National Federal Savings Bank (NASDAQ-NMS: SNFS), provided the following observations:

-- "'Just Say Yes' was the bank Slogan of the Eighties."
-- "We need a return of banker confidence as well as consumer confidence."

-- "We made five mistakes. We didn't allow for:
1) Overbuilding.
2) Over-reliance on asset inflation.
3) The 1986 Tax Reform Act.
4) FIRREA.
5) We thought our region was recession-proof."

-- "FIRREA was brought about by hands-off regulators and hands-on manipulators at hundreds of savings institutions who now have dumped over $350 billion of loans into the laps of the American taxpayer."

-- "It's not enough to lower Fed funds rates and have the treasury secretary tell bankers to start lending again with newly imposed capital requirements, no capital sources, overbearing regulation, and the and the regulator-induced credit crunch."

-- "The next financial crisis is in the insurance industry (due to) junk bonds commercial real estate, new competition and a decade of lower returns."

-- "There will only be light at the end of the economic tunnel after three consecutive months when housing starts are up, business failures are down, and oil is under $30 a barrel."

Second National is a $1.8 billion financial institution with 41 offices throughout Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

GOLDEN, CO (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Barringer Laboratories, Inc. (NASDAQ: BALB) today reported revenues of $2,520,000 for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1990, as compared to $1,827,000 for the comparable prior-year quarter, an increase of 38 percent. Revenues for the nine-month period were $6,256,000 vs. revenues of $4,855,000 for the prior year, an increase of 29 percent.

Net income from continuing operations for the quarter was $2,000 compared to $321,000 for the prior year, while the nine-month period experienced a net loss of $176,000 vs. net income of $150,000, or $.12 per share, for the prior-year comparable period.

Robert Walker, chief executive officer, commented, "Our Canadian subsidiary, newly equipped in 1988, has continued its remarkable sales and earnings performance into the third quarter.

"Our U.S. laboratories posted lower sales within the Radio-Chemistry division, primarily due to a delay in customer government funding, and also within the Radon division. Our minerals lab, located in Reno, Nev., also recorded lower sales due to the overall sluggishness in the mining industry. However, these divisions did show improve sales compared to the second quarter of 1990, and we have instituted a strong sales and marketing program, which should further improved sales levels.

"Our bottom line reflects the significant costs incurred to create the required infrastructure for growth in the U.S. We have increased our operating staff in order to institute standard quality assurance/ quality control procedures, develop methods which have enabled us to expand our capabilities, as well as launch a strong sales and marketing program to assure improved future sales. Additionally, we have added a significant amount of new laboratory analysis equipment to our locations to further position ourselves for future growth. All these costs have been incurred as part of our overall program to enhance our laboratories and position Barringer as a state-of-the-art analytical testing laboratory."

Headquartered in Golden, Barringer Laboratories provides analytical testing services for the environmental and minerals industry.

WICHITA, KS (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Maverick Restaurant Corporation (NASDAQ: MAVR) today reported that revenues for its third quarter ended Oct. 31, 1990, were $3,525,922, compared to revenues of $3,591,827 for the third quarter of the prior year. Revenues for the first nine months of 1990 were $10,529,857, compared to revenues of $10,723,876 for the first nine months of the prior year.

For the three months ended Oct. 31, 1990, the company recorded a loss of $60,848, compared to earnings of $12,369 for the third quarter of the prior year. For the nine months ended Oct. 31, 1990, the company recorded net earnings of $8,170 compared to earnings of $57,563, or 1 cent per common share for the first nine months of the prior year.

Maverick Restaurant Corporation President Chris F. Hotze said, "The loss for the quarter was due primarily to our poor sales performance in August and September in which same store sales were down 5.8 percent as compared to the same period last year. We believe the major contributing factors for this sales decline were the increase in gasoline prices in all our markets which decreased the amount of discretionary income our customers had to spend, and the deployment of a substantial number of military personnel to the Middle East that negatively impacted our customer base in our Virginia and El Paso markets."

"In late September we countered this negative trend by introducing an 'All You Can Eat' promotion at a value oriented price point. We are pleased to report that these increased promotional efforts resulted in October sales being up 6.7 percent over last year or a positive swing of 12.5 percent over August and September. Unfortunately, October's increase was not enough to offset the declines of the previous two months. We anticipate continuing this promotion in all markets as long as it continues to generate positive results."

"We continue to be on schedule with our debt reduction efforts. At a time when many companies have failed due to unmanageable debt loads, we believe the best course is for us to continue toward our goal of being debt-free within our next fiscal year. This will continue to be one of our primary objectives."

Maverick, the largest Grandy's franchisee, currently operates 20 Grandy's restaurants in five states.

TROY, MI (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Kmart Corporation (NYSE: KM) today announced that Pearl's Beverages, Inc. of Detroit will lease the property at 18211 Plymouth Road, Detroit, and open a distribution outlet in December 1990.

Kmart has been working with the Detroit Strategic Plan Target Industries program to bring new business to Detroit. The Target Industries program was established in 1988 to create economic development and bring jobs to Detroit.

"Detroit has much to offer businesses and their employees," said Joseph E. Antonini, Kmart chairman of the board and chief executive officer. "We are especially proud to be a part of the economic development of this fine city."

The new location allows Pearl's Beverages, a minority firm, to expand its operations and provide 50 new jobs by Jan. 1, 1991. "This is a wonderful opportunity for Pearl's," said Stephanie Rosenberg, Pearl's assistant vice president, corporate development. "Kmart helped make our search for an appropriate facility much easier."

In addition to leasing the property, Pearl's will begin to supply Kmart with Towne Club soft drinks on a test basis in certain Detroit-area Kmarts in late January 1991.

Pearl's Beverages, Inc. is primarily engaged in the processing and distribution of soft drinks, bottled waters and mixers under the Towne Club label. Additionally, Pearl's will sublet approximately 10,000 square feet of the 20,000-square-foot facility to Pearl's Packaging, Inc. for the packaging and assembling of various non-perishable consumer-oriented products to be sold to major retailers throughout the country.

Kmart Corporation serves America with over 4,000 retail outlets in all 50 states in the United States and in Puerto Rico and Canada. Kmart, currently operating 2,336 Kmart stores, is also the parent company for Pay Less Drug Stores, Builders Square, Waldenbooks, PACE Membership Warehouse, Inc., and The Sports Authority.

MINNEAPOLIS/ST. PAUL (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Angeion Corporation (NASDAQ: ANGN) has announced the appointment of David L. Christofferson as vice president and chief financial officer, effective immediately.

Christofferson comes to Angeion with 21 years of experience in corporate financial management. He spent 14 years at Medtronic in a succession of financial management positions for the drug administration systems group, the pacing products group, corporate product development, corporate manufacturing, operations and corporate finance.

Christofferson replaces Brian G. Jacenko, who is leaving Angeion to pursue other opportunities. Christofferson reports to President and Chief Operating Officer William H. Ham.

In announcing the appointment, Angeion Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Wendell L. King said: "Dave Christofferson brings to Angeion an excellent record in finance, planning and administration, especially in the areas of acquisition and financial management in a multi-division company. These will serve us well as Angeion continues to grow and evolve."

In 1986 Christofferson founded Excel Office Products, which was acquired by General Office Products Company in 1988. From 1987-89 he was chief financial officer and chairman of Medical Wellness Technologies, Inc., a distributor of pain control devices. Christofferson earned a bachelor of science in business degree from the University of Minnesota in 1968.

Minneapolis-based Angeion Corporation is a manufacturer of cardiovascular products. Its subsidiary, AngeLase, Inc., is currently engaged in the research and development of a catheter which would provide a nonsurgical cure for arrhythmia. Angeion recently also signed a letter of intent to purchase XMED, a research-and-development company which is developing products for the automatic implantable defibrillator market. Angeion's current core business target is the angioplasty accessory market.

MINNEAPOLIS (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The Valspar Corporation (ASE: VAL) a major coatings manufacturer, reported fourth quarter earnings for 1990 increased 23 percent to $6,859,000 or 63 cents per share from $5,596,000 or 51 cents per share in 1989. Sales for the quarter increased 1.4 percent to $147,990,000 from $145,883,000 a year ago.

For the fiscal year ended Oct. 26, 1990, Valspar's earnings were $26,731,000 compared to $23,234,000 last year, and earnings per share increased 17.8 percent to $2.45 versus $2.08 a year ago. Sales for 1990 increased 8.5 percent to $571,445,000. Adjusted for the acquired McCloskey business, comparable sales increased 3.6 percent.

Commenting on this year's results and the outlook for next year, C. Angus Wurtele, Valspar's chairman, stated that "the Consumer, Packaging and Special Products Groups all have had record years, while the Industrial Group has felt the effect of the economic slowdown.

"Earnings for 1990 were quite good in light of the 20 cent per share charge to second quarter earnings related to the bankruptcy filing of Amdura Corporation.

"The McCloskey acquisition contributed to Valspar's 1990 earnings and the acquisition of parts of DeSoto's industrial coatings operations, completed Oct. 26, 1990, significantly strengthened Valspar's market position. In spite of the near term economic uncertainties, we are very optimistic about Valspar's prospects for the future."

MCLEAN, VA (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - PRC Inc. (formerly Planning Research Corporation and Advanced Technology, Inc.), a subsidiary of The Black & Decker Corporation (NYSE: BDK), announced today that Gary D. Kennedy has been appointed president and chief executive officer of the professional services company. Kennedy succeeds Scott Thompson, who has been named chairman.

Kennedy joins PRC after more than eight years with Oracle Systems Corporation, a leading software, services and systems integration company, where he rose through various sales and general management positions to become president of its largest subsidiary, Oracle, USA. He was also chairman of Oracle Complex Systems Corporation, a systems integration subsidiary. During his tenure with Oracle, revenues increased from approximately $1 million to over $1 billion annually. Kennedy's operations accounted for over half of the corporation's total sales.

Prior to Oracle, Kennedy was employed by Intel Corporation. He holds an MBA degree from Northwestern University's Kellogg School of Management.

Thompson was employed by Advanced Technology, Inc. in 1977. After holding several management positions, he served as chief operating officer from 1985 and was appointed president and chief executive officer in 1988. Subsequent to Black & Decker's acquisition of the parent corporation of Planning Research Corporation and Advanced Technology, Inc. in 1989, Thompson was elected president and chief executive officer of the combined information and electronic systems business. As chairman, Thompson's role will be to provide counsel and strategic direction to PRC.

Commenting on the appointments, Nolan D. Archibald, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Black & Decker, said: "We are delighted to have Gary Kennedy on board. His wide-ranging experience in software and systems will provide additional strength to PRC, which already is a leading competitor in the professional services field. With Gary's expertise, our intention is both to reinforce that leadership position in the federal sector and to develop a similar world-class presence in the commercial marketplace over the next few years.

PRC employs about 8,500 employees and generates annual revenues of approximately $700 million.

AZUSA, CALIF. (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Optical Radiation Corp. (NASDAQ: ORCO) today announced it has signed a letter of intent with Twentieth Century Fox Film Corp. to release six theatrical films in the company's Cinema Digital sound (CDS) format.

Richard D. Wood, president and chief executive officer of Optical Radiation, said it is anticipated that the first movie may be "Edward Scissorhands," which is scheduled for release in December. "Aliens 3," "For Our Boys," and three additional films are scheduled for release in 1991, according to Wood.

CDS, jointly developed by Optical Radiation and Eastman Kodak Co., (NYSE: EK), is a process by which a digital optical sound track is printed directly onto motion picture film, resulting in sound quality comparable to compact disks.

"Twentieth Century Fox is the first major studio to commit to releasing a package of feature films in CDS format," said Wood. "We are excited about the future of CDS in the motion picture industry and are particularly enthusiastic about our prospective arrangement with Twentieth Century Fox."

Optical Radiation designs and manufactures a wide variety of precision optical components and systems for medical, industrial and scientific applications.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Medicis Pharmaceutical Corp. (NASDAQ: MDRXA, MDRXU), a company specializing in dermatological products, "has successfully launched and has begun shipping its Theraplex(TM) family of over-the-counter moisturizers and shampoos for dry skin and scalp conditions, having received firm commitments from all of the major drug wholesalers to stock the product line," Jonah Shacknai, chairman and CEO announced today.

"The Theraplex family of products has already received strong acceptance by dermatologists who can now recommend the products to their patients. Distribution channels are being adequately stocked and products will be available to consumers in pharmacies and health and beauty aid stores in the coming weeks. We believe there are no better products on the market today in this important category of dry skin care. Our unique step-care approach to moisturization helps dermatologists meet patients needs and insures patient satisfaction and compliance," Shacknai added.

Leonard Mazur, executive vice president for sales and marketing noted that "Theraplex is selling well through our wholesale and brokerage system and we expect strong sales in this product category for our second quarter ending Dec. 31." In its first quarter ended Sept. 30, Medicis successfully launched its prescription acne product line and in just two weeks achieved more than $1 million in sales. "With our prescription acne product line and now our Theraplex line having been successfully launched, we expect sales will accelerate strongly as we move forward," Mazur added.

Medicis has an exclusive license to market the Theraplex family of products in the United States, Mexico and Japan. Theraplex products have had strong sales in Scandinavia where they have been marketed by a subsidiary of Rhone-Poulenc and more recently in Canada where they have been marketed by Trans Canaderm. In Scandinavia, for example, sales of Theraplex products are running at a rate of $10 million annually in a country with a population base of 5 million.

The five Theraplex products consist of three skin moisturizers and two therapeutic shampoos.

The Theraplex moisturizers, with three distinct formulations offer the dermatologist a unique step-care approach to dry skin care. Theraplex moisturizers utilize a patented Swiss formula which provides all of the benefits of petrolatum, the most effective moisturizer known, but removes 82 percent of the grease associated with it.

The two Theraplex shampoos, Theraplex T and Theraplex Z are used in the treatment of dandruff, psoriasis and seborrheic dermatitis. All Theraplex products are non-comedogenic and allergy-tested.

In addition to its prescription and Theraplex product lines, Medicis is awaiting FDA approval for its tretinoin, a generic prescription form of Retin-A(R) (a registered trademark of Ortho Pharmaceutical), for which it has been granted an exclusive worldwide marketing license. Tretinoin (Retin-A) is a topical vitamin A derivative used in the treatment of acne.

Additionally, Medicis is in phase III clinical trials with its prescription photochemoprotective agent, Bergasol(R). Bergasol, which to date has sold more than 42 million units in Europe, stimulates the production of melanin thereby promoting deep tanning while reducing sun burning and DNA damage which contribute to the formation of skin cancer.

PHILADELPHIA (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Effective Dec. 1, 1990, Philadelphia Electric Co. (NYSE: PE) rates for its 340,000 suburban gas customers will be reduced.

PE said the annual bill for an average home heating customer will decrease 6.1 percent from $889 to $835, primarily resulting from a revision to its gas cost rate approved by the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission.

The rate reduction further increases the advantage now being experienced by PE home heating customers compared to those heating with oil. The price of PE natural gas used for home heating on Dec. 1 will be $6.48 per thousand cubic feet, which equates to about 87 cents per gallon for home heating oil. According to the Pennsylvania Energy Office, home heating oil as of Nov. 19 was $1.25 per gallon, 44 percent more for home heating than PE natural gas customers.

Kenneth G. Lawrence, PE vice president for Gas Operations said, "At a time when the cost of many other energy products is increasing, we are pleased that our gas customers will enjoy lower rates."

Lawrence said the reduction is due to stable natural gas prices and to a longer term outlook for the availability of natural gas. The new rate will be in effect for one year.

Lawrence added, "This favorable price advantage is translating into significant interest in natural gas by homeowners now using oil."

PE said that as a result of the Middle East crisis, the response this fall by the public to a gas conversion marketing campaign is double the response of previous years.

"Our current efforts are to respond quickly to all customers seeking additional information and to schedule those customers choosing to convert and to complete the conversion as expeditiously as possible," Lawrence said.

PE converted more than 2,300 of its residential customers in Bucks, Montgomery Chester, and Delaware counties to natural gas in 1989 and expects to exceed that total by 16 percent in 1990.

"Natural gas is becoming the fuel of choice in many situations. It is domestic, available and less expensive, cleaner and more efficient than oil, and it is relatively simple to convert," he said.

FAIRFAX, VA (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - ERC Environmental and Energy Services Co. Inc. (NASDAQ: ERCE) and BNFL Inc., the U.S. subsidiary of British Nuclear Fuels plc (BNFL), have been awarded a contract by Westinghouse Savannah River Co. in Aiken, S.C., to design and build a Skid-Mounted Ion Exchange Demonstration (SKID) unit that will demonstrate the applicability of BNFL's patented ion exchange technology to the treatment of high-level nuclear waste produced in the nation's nuclear weapons program. The award is a fixed-price contract valued at over $372,000. The work will be conducted over a 16-month period.

The SKID unit will be based on technology developed in Britain by BNFL that is in active use at its Sellafield reprocessing and waste management complex. Westinghouse Savannah River Co. is evaluating the technology in conjunction with testing its own experimental ion exchange resin, which it has developed at Savannah River Laboratory for the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE). The BNFL technology could eventually be used for the removal of radioactive materials from high-level waste supernate stored in tanks at DOE's Savannah River Site. The radioactive materials must be removed from the supernate and, along with other high-level wastes, immobilized in glass cylinders suitable for final disposal.

ERCE President Mark Elliott stated: "This award is the first step toward introducing proven and reliable BNFL waste management technology into the U.S. defense waste management program. It fits well with ERCE's expanding role helping DOE facilities meet their environmental needs. We are very pleased to be working with both BNFL and Westinghouse on this effort."

BNFL Inc. President Rolland Langley said: "The DOE has called for the development of advanced technologies to help resolve its nuclear waste management challenges; BNFL has responded with this proven radioactive effluent treatment technology. I am delighted that we now have the opportunity to demonstrate our capability to the DOE."

ERCE is a professional and technical services firm providing a comprehensive range of environmental, infrastructure, and energy consulting, engineering, and analytical services to industrial and commercial companies and governmental agencies. The company has principal operating offices in Fairfax Va.,; Nashville, Tenn.,; and San Diego, Calif.

BNFL Inc. is the U.S. subsidiary of British Nuclear Fuels plc, a large, internationally recognized nuclear fuel cycle company providing services ranging from uranium enrichment and fuel manufacturing to reactor operations, fuel reprocessing, and radioactive waste management. The company has emerged as a world leader in the development of innovative technologies for the treatment and disposal of radioactive waste, including high-level waste vitrification, transuranic waste management, and effluent treatment.

CLEVELAND (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The Austin Company announced today that a consortium of which it is a member had been selected to design, engineer and administer the construction of the passenger terminal at the new Hiroshima Airport in Japan.

Austin's partners in the consortium are MHS Planners, Architects and Engineers of Tokyo, one of Japan's leading design firms, and Yamamoto/Create Architects and Engineers Inc., also based in Tokyo.

Austin said the consortium would be responsible for designing and engineering a 26,800 square-meter (288,500 square-foot) facility comprising adjoining domestic and international buildings. The project will include concourses, baggage-handling systems and preflight amenities.

The overall project is estimated to be worth approximately $80 million (U.S.).

Austin will be responsible for engineering the special mechanical, electrical, information and equipment systems, including those for aircraft support.

MHS will be responsible for architectural design, as well as civil and structural engineering, and will be supported by Create.

The Austin/MHS/Create joint venture is expected to complete the design phase of the project by December 1991. Construction is expected to begin in April 1992. The new airport is scheduled to open in December 1993.

The selection of the Austin/MHS/Create consortium marks the first major competition for a significant airport project in Japan won by a joint venture with a U.S. member.

Austin also leads another consortium competing for the engineering, procurement and installation of the baggage-handling system at Kansai International Airport.

The Austin Company is recognized as an international leader in design, engineering and construction of all types of airport facilities.

The Austin Company is an international organization of consultants, designers, engineers and constructors. Austin serves industrial, commercial, governmental and institutional markets. Headquartered in Cleveland, where it was founded in 1878, the company operates through 40 offices in North America, Europe, Australia and Japan. There are associated companies in Brazil and Italy.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Jack Clark, chairman of the board of Stage II Apparel Corp. (AMEX: SA), announced today that the corporation's board of directors had voted not to declare a quarterly dividend, in view of the recent decrease in corporate earnings.

As previously announced, net sales for the first nine months of 1990 decreased by approximately $11,652,000 or 15.5 percent from the corresponding nine months of 1989. Earnings per share for this nine months' period decreased from $.80 per share for the corresponding 1989 nine months' period to $.08.

In view of such decreases in earnings and profits, the board of directors felt that it was not prudent to pay any further dividends until operating results are such that declaration of dividends would be financially prudent and in the best interest of the corporation and its shareholders.

ROCKVILLE, MD (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - CRI Insured Mortgage Association, Inc. (CRIIMI MAE) (NYSE: CMM) and AIM Liquidating REIT, Inc., said today that their exchange offer for four American Insured Mortgage (AIM) partnerships will proceed as soon as a revised prospectus is declared effective by the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) and mailed to unitholders of the four AIM partnerships, sponsored by bankrupt Integrated Resources, Inc. (NYSE: IRE).

CRIIMI MAE and AIM Liquidating REIT announced on Nov. 26 that they will shortly file a revised prospectus with the SEC detailing improvements to their exchange offer including substantially lowered fees and lowered upfront transaction costs.

The revised prospectus also will include changes reflecting the opinion by Federal District Court Judge Michael B. Mukasey enjoining both Integrated's affiliate, AIM Capital Management, and the CRI parties from further disseminating certain misleading information about the exchange offer. The judge also ordered both parties to circulate corrected disclosure which would supersede all prior communications.

Management of CRI said today that AIM Capital continues to make misleading statements in its efforts to defeat the exchange offer. Omitted from AIM Capital's recent public announcement was a description of the materially misleading statements which the judge found in AIM Capital's prior communications.

The judge's findings include: -- AIM Capital failed in its Oct. 11 mailing to adequately disclose the potential conflict of interest it has with the AIM unitholders.

-- AIM Capital's comparison of the AIM funds' market value to the value of CRI's exchange offer was materially misleading.

-- AIM Capital materially misled investors by claiming that they "would suffer an immediate loss of nearly 40 percent in (their) investment."

-- AIM Capital materially misled investors by claiming that CRIIMI MAE "borrows at a loss."

-- AIM Capital materially misled investors about the total value received by investors in the November 1989 CRIMI MAE merger by ignoring the cash distribution paid to investors.

In addition, the judge said that AIM Capital failed to adequately disclose that AIM Liquidating REIT, an unleveraged, finite life fund, is an alternative AIM investors can choose in the exchange offer.

In addition to finding that the CRI parties had also made certain misleading statements, the judge found that CRI already had addressed many of these items in an amended prospectus which was filed with the SEC prior to the court's ruling. That document had not yet become effective and therefore had not been mailed to unitholders.

The judge enjoined the CRI parties from further solicitation and receipt of tenders pending distribution of corrective disclosure. The CRI parties' said their new prospectus will conform to the judge's opinion, including a provision permitting tendering unitholders to rescind prior tenders. The new prospectus will be distributed to unitholders after it is declared effective by the SEC.

OSAKA, JAPAN (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Matsushita Electric Industrial Co., Ltd. said today that its President, Akio Tanii, today issued the following statement:

"There were several conflicting English interpretations of my comments on Monday evening, Nov. 26, regarding the issue of creative independence at MCA. These varied translations have resulted in some confusion which should be clarified.

"As Mr. Wasserman and I said in our joint statement, 'both companies are committed to maintaining the creative independence which has established MCA at the forefront of the entertainment industry.'

"In my personal statement, I said I expected that 'creative people of Hollywood' would continue to produce works of merit, 'making full use of their independent creativity.'

"In his personal statement, Mr. Wasserman underscored the joint commitment 'to maintaining the creative independence' of MCA.

"There should be no misunderstanding of Matsushita's position in this important area. Creative decisions for MCA will be made by MCA management. Matsushita has no intention of becoming involved in decisions regarding the subject or content of creative products at MCA.

CHICAGO (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Directors of Baker, Fentress & Co. (NYSE:

BKF), a Chicago-based closed-end fund, today announced that all net capital gain realized in 1990 will be distributed to shareholders. Accordingly, the directors declared a 1990 long-term capital gain distribution of $1.25 per share, payable Dec. 26, 1990 to shareholders of record Dec. 11, 1990.

Shareholders will have the option of receiving this distribution in one of three forms: all in company shares, all in cash, or a combination of 70 percent company shares and 30 percent cash.

The directors also declared a year-end dividend of $0.32 per share from undistributed net investment income, payable Dec. 26, 1990 to shareholders of record Dec. 11, 1990. During 1990 the company previously paid three $0.125 per share quarterly dividends from net investment income. Beginning this year the regular fourth quarter dividend is included as part of the year-end dividend, resulting in total 1990 dividends of $0.695 per share.

The company's policy is to pay annually to shareholders a total of dividends and capital gain distributions that equal at least 8 percent of the average net asset value for the 12-month period ended Oct. 31 of that year. For 1990, the relevant average net asset value was $23.57 per share, making the total 1990 calendar year distribution about 8.3 percent of the target payout.

Because Baker Fentress stock trades at a discount to net asset value, total 1990 distributions as a percent of market price is even higher.

HOUSTON (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Gamma Biologicals, Inc. (AMEX: GBL), has received a Food and Drug Administration (FDA) license to market monoclonal Anti-A, Anti-B, Anti-A&B and Anti-D blood grouping reagents.

These four products are used routinely to determine the blood groups of patients and donors. Currently, Gamma, which obtained the first U.S. license for a monoclonal blood grouping reagent, is the company with the most (nine) such products.

The company has also submitted to the FDA the first application for total monoclonal Coombs reagents. The Coombs test is one of the most widely performed procedures in clinical medicine, and the reagent is the company's largest dollar sales product line.

"Since 1945, the Coombs reagent source has been immunized rabbit blood serum," Chairman David E. Hatcher stated. "Gamma owns the clones for the Coombs serum, and the raw materials for these products are cultured in-house. Now we can begin retiring our rabbit colony."

"The conversion from human and animal donors to monoclonal culture supernates as source material provides our customers with a consistent, quality reagent and increases Gamma's market share and profitability in its most important product line," reported Hatcher. "We project more than a dozen FDA-licensed monoclonal products by the end of next year, and six new monoclonal reagents are under development."

In other news, Gamma expects to announce soon an agreement with a major university medical center to develop product lines based on a significant new technology for detecting bacterial, viral, or blood group antigens and antibodies.

The company also disclosed that it has refinanced its domestic line of credit, term debt and mortgage debt with a new bank lender. Hatcher said, "We view this as a very positive development for the company, since it provides a constructive new financial relationship essential to Gamma's continued growth."

Gamma Biologicals manufactures and markets a wide range of highly refined and specialized testing products, known as diagnostic reagents, as well as specialized instrument systems. Gamma markets to hospitals, blood banks, medical laboratories, physicians' offices and research institutions. The company's common stock began trading on the American Stock Exchange on June 8, 1990.

SHELTON, CONN. (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Raytech Corp. (NYSE: RAY) today announced that net loss for the third quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, was $.5 million compared to $.6 million net income in the third quarter of last year.

Net loss per share equated to $.17 compared to $.15 net income per share a year earlier.

This reduction in net earnings is attributable to losses incurred at the newly established Allomatic Products Co., which equated to a $.9 million net loss in the third quarter.

Raytech's net sales for the third quarter were $26.7 million, an increase of $2 million or 8 percent over the same period last year. This increase is attributable to sales at the newly established Allomatic Products Co., which equaled $3.6 million. Without Allomatic's sales contribution, sales decreased $1.6 million or 6 percent compared to 1989's results. This decrease is due to reduced demand within the original equipment and aftermarket friction material product market segment.

Net sales of $98.4 million during the first nine months of 1990 increased $13.4 million or 16 percent compared with the first nine months of 1989. Excluding sales of $14.5 million for Allomatic Products Co., for 1990, sales decreased $1.1 million or 1 percent compared with 1989.

Net income for the first nine months of 1990 was $5.8 million or $1.82 per share compared to $3.6 million or $.85 per share in 1989. Excluding an extraordinary gain of $2.6 million resulting from early extinguishment of debt the company's net income for the first nine months was $3.2 million vs. $3.6 million for the same time period last year.

Raytech Corp. is headquartered in Shelton, with operations serving world markets for energy absorption and power transmission products, as well as fasteners and custom-engineered components.

PARSIPPANY, N.J. (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - BASF today released the following statement:

Allegations by Greenpeace that an ongoing research study by BASF is "fraudulent and manipulated science" are both unfounded and untrue. The most recent study published in 1990, for example, has been peer-reviewed by a distinguished panel of international experts and has found worldwide acceptance. The title of this study alone -- "Thirty-four- year mortality follow-up of BASF employees exposed to 2,3,7,8,-TCDD after the 1953 accident" -- makes it obvious this research was not, and is not, intended to be a definitive study of dioxin.

The 1953 incident involved the accidental exposure of 69 workers at BASF's facilities in Ludwigshafen, Germany, to what is now known to be TCDD during an uncontrolled decomposition reaction in the production of precursors for herbicides. BASF immediately stopped production, implemented elaborate cleaning measures, and began caring for the exposed workers and monitoring their health. It should be noted that no TCDD samples were taken at the time because the substance itself was still unidentified. It wasn't until 1957 that TCDD was first described and it was several more years before measurements were even possible.

BASF first published the results of investigations into the health effects in 1954. Over the years, as more became known about TCDD, and as it became apparent that more people had been exposed, BASF published additional studies. The most recent involves a total of 247 people, addresses previous methodology concerns and was published this year in the International Archives of Occupational and Environmental Health. It represents an outstanding application of scientific procedure, and has received peer review from a number of scientists from distinguished organizations including the Environmental Epidemiology Unit, University of Southampton, England; the Imperial Cancer Research Fund, Oxford, England; and the National Cancer Institute, Bethesda, Md.

BASF would be happy to provide interested parties with a copy of the study.

HOUSTON, (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Stewart & Stevenson Services Inc. (NASDAQ: SSSS), a leading manufacturer of diesel and gas turbine powered equipment, today announced net earnings of $8,120,000 or 54 cents per share on revenues of $173,527,000 for the third quarter ending Oct. 31, 1990. This compares to net income of $5,871,000 or 41 cents per share on revenues of $140,735,000 for the same period one year ago. Net earnings for the first nine months totaled $22,899,000 or $1.54 per share on revenues of $477,229,000 compared to revenues of $414,804,000 and net income of $18,908,000 or $1.36 per share during the first nine months of 1989.

Current period net earnings reflect a 38 percent gain over the prior year. The company's distribution segment, which serves the southwestern United States, continues to show improvement in both revenues and earnings. The outlook for the Engineered Power Systems segment, which manufacutres diesel and gas turbine powered equipment, is very encouraging as reflected by the current level of unfilled orders.

The backlog of unfilled orders, now including operation and maintenance contracts, stands at $413 million compared to $363 million a year ago. Operation and maintenance contracts accounted for $68 million and $38 million, respectively.

CHICAGO (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - EdgeMark Financial Corp. today announced third quarter 1990 net income of $762,542, or $0.39 per share, compared to $780,968, or $0.39 per share, for the same quarter last year. For the nine months ended Sept. 30, net income was $2,261,271, or $1.14 per share, compared to $2,549,781, or $1.29 per share, for the same period in 1989.

According to Charles A. Bruning, EdgeMark Financial Corp.'s president and chief executive officer, the third quarter and nine-month results reflected the absorption of costs associated with the impact of a full nine-month operating cycle for the corporation's new facilities at EdgeMark Bank Rosemont and the NBC Tower facility of Merchandise National Bank. In addition, overall margins were squeezed slightly by the continued shift of customer deposits into higher yielding investments.

For the first nine months, net loans outstanding rose 9.1 percent to $291,974,128 from $267,706,128 a year earlier.

Total deposits were $405,076,059, up 4.3 percent from the $388,523,857 posted for the same period in 1989. Total assets at Sept. 30 were $468,942,599, an increase of $21.2 million or 4.7 percent.

EdgeMark Financial Corp. is a $468-million multibank holding company that owns and operates Merchandise National Bank, Chicago; Edgewood Bank in Countryside and Woodridge; EdgeMark Bank Lombard; First National Bank of Lockport; and EdgeMark Bank Rosemont.

DALLAS, (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Ed Haggar Sr. announced that Joe M. Haggar III has been named president and chief executive officer of Haggar Apparel Co. at the opening of the firm's national sales meeting here yesterday.

Dallas-based Haggar is the nation's largest manufacturer of men's slacks, sport coats, suits and ready-to-wear suit separates.

Ed Haggar, currently chairman of the board, stated that president and CEO Joe M. Haggar Jr., will assume duties as chairman of the board. Ed Haggar will become honorary chairman of the board. All changes are effective April 2, the start of the company's fiscal third quarter 1991.

"After conducting a thorough national search by the executive search firm of Korn/Ferry, we believe that the best candidate has been selected to continue the tradition of quality and innovation that has built Haggar Apparel Co.," stated Ed Haggar. "The experience and skills Joe III has developed will enable him to lead the company with the confidence and respect of associates, customers and suppliers alike."

Joe Haggar III will still maintain his present duties as president of Haggar Menswear at this time. He was executive vice president of merchandising and sales of Haggar Menswear before assuming his current position in 1985.

Joe Haggar Jr., who will be 66 in February, has served as Haggar's president since 1971 and CEO since 1985. At the announcement of his successor, Joe Haggar Jr. stated the decision reflects Haggar's desire to continue its development from a "main-stream" apparel manufacturer to one which produces clothing with more casual, updated styling to reach a broader base while continuing to serve its traditional customers.

"Joe III understands the foundation on which Haggar Apparel was built," he added. "At the same time, Joe III is a part of the generation that is now discovering the new products Haggar has to offer, so he can seize the fantastic opportunities to add marketshare ahead of us in the '90s."

Both Ed Haggar Sr. and Joe Haggar Jr. expressed thanks to customers, suppliers and especially Haggar's many loyal associates for their support and cooperation in the past. They both felt that the strong relationships Joe Haggar III has developed with these contacts over the years will help him lead Haggar to further growth and continued profitability in the future.

"I am pleased to have been selected to head up the team -- and I stress team -- that will take Haggar in an exciting direction in the '90s," said Joe Haggar III. "Building on our commitment to quality and total customer service we will together strive to be even more consumer-oriented and expand our marketing efforts to raise awareness to the wide range of products Haggar offers."

Joe Haggar III, who will be 39 when he assumes his new positions, joined the company's management training program in 1973. He worked in data processing, production control, manufacturing and sales. He later trained in the Dallas corporate headquarters and in two manufacturing plants. In 1976, he was named Dallas service center manager, later serving as national brand manager and vice president of Division II, directing three Haggar brands.

A member of the Salesmanship Club of Dallas and the Young Presidents Organization, Joe Haggar III serves on the board of the Texas Business Hall of Fame. A graduate of the University of Notre Dame, he played varsity football for the school for three years.

GOLDEN, CO (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - All people want to be the best they can be to feel good about themselves and explore their potential. It's human nature. But millions of Americans can't realize their potential because they can't read.

That's why Coors Brewing Co. launched the "Literacy. Pass It On." campaign, a five-year, $40 million national effort to help wipe out illiteracy. Coors' goals are to teach 30,000 individuals across the nation to read by 1991, and 500,000 by 1995.

This holiday season Coors Light will air a national television commercial to support the holiday "Give the Gift of Literacy" theme. This 30-second spot features a family in which the father has just learned to read. The spot directs consumers to look for Coors Light literacy displays in their local stores.

"Literacy is one of the most top-of-mind issues facing America today," said Mark Lee, Coors Light assistant marketing manager. "Consumers want to help, and they will look for ways to do so."

That being the case, the seasonally decorative point-of-sale includes a literacy referral 800 number along with tear-off pads that inform consumers about the seriousness of the problem and tell them what they can do to help.

"The ability and the incentive to read is something that is passed down from parent to child -- like family values and traditions," said Lee. "Our goal is to support American families in their effort to be the best they can be."

PITTSBURGH (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Consolidated Natural Gas Company (NYSE: CNG) said today that it has filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission a registration statement covering a proposed public offering of $200 million of convertible subordinated debentures. Proceeds of the issue would help fund the company's 1991 capital budget.

The debentures could be converted to common stock by the holders at any time. The company would have the right to call the debentures beginning five years after issue. Ten years after issue, the company would -- at the holder's option -- purchase the debentures for the principal amount, plus accrued interest.

The interest rate, conversion price and other terms would be determined by market conditions at the time of the sale. The debentures would have a maturity of 25 years. They would be subordinate to all of Consolidated's senior debt, including its currently existing long-term debt.

The offering will be managed by The First Boston Corporation and Merrill Lynch & Co.

Consolidated is one of the nation's largest producers, transporters and distributors of natural gas. Its primary marketing areas for natural gas are in Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, New York and other states in the Northeast. The company explores for and produces natural gas across the United States and in Canada.

MIDALE, SASKATCHEWAN (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Shell Canada announced today plans for an enhanced oil recovery project at the Midale Oilfield in southeastern Saskatchewan. This project could recover an additional 12 million barrels from part of the existing field and generate more than $500 million in revenue.

Brian Davis, Manager of Oil Development, says the $40 million project will use carbon dioxide (CO_2) to flood about 10 percent of the Midale field. If the project's successful, it could lead to a substantially larger development by the late-90s. ''Shell launched a pilot project using CO_2 flood technology in the area in 1984 to test the capability of CO_2 for enhanced oil recovery. The results of the pilot project were very encouraging and led to the current project proposal,'' he said.

Carbon dioxide will be injected into the reservoir to move the oil left behind after waterflooding. Like waterfloods, CO_2 pushes oil towards producing wells, but because the CO_2 also mixes with oil it will capture trapped oil which was left behind by waterflooding.

Ranking as Shell Canada's first major oil discovery in 1953, the Midale field contained about 500 million barrels of oil. Davis said about 100 million barrels of the oil in the Midale field have been recovered so far and an additional 20 million barrels will be recovered by the existing waterflood operation. However, CO_2 flooding the entire field could produce in the order of 80 million more barrels.

According to Davis CO_2 flooding also fits in with the company's initiatives around sustainable development. ''As oil becomes harder and more expensive to find, it makes good sense to get the most out of existing developments. And from an environmental standpoint, it provides an opportunity to reduce CO_2 emissions from an existing source,'' he explains.

Construction on the Midale CO_2 flood project is expected to begin early in 1991, pending government approvals. Project start up is scheduled for the third quarter of 1992. Shell will operate the project on behalf of the Midale Unit working interest owners.

Davis says that a decision about whether to expand the project into the remainder of the Midale field and the neighbouring fields would be made after several years of operation. It would involve a substantial capital commitment but could provide an attractive return for both the industry and the provincial and federal governments.

MENLO PARK, CA (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - After only three weeks on retail shelves, Mediagenic's (NASDAQ: MGNC) newest IBM entertainment title, "BattleTech: The Crescent Hawks' Revenge," is receiving impressive initial sales results at retailers nationwide. Reactions from both retailers and consumers have been so strong that the nation's largest entertainment software distributors, SoftKat and Ingram Micro D, have completely sold out their inventory.

According to Jeffrey Griffiths, vice president and general merchandising manager at Electronics Boutique, one of the nation's largest software retailers, the new BattleTech(R) title has been one of their best-selling titles this month. "We've been overwhelmed with the response to 'BattleTech' and we expect the excitement to continue well through the holidays," said Griffiths.

FASA Corp., originators of the "BattleTech" universe, reported that there are now more than 500,000 "BattleTech" fans in the United States and Europe who anxiously await the next evolution in this adventure series. Capitalizing on their board game success, FASA recently opened the BattleTech Center in Chicago, which has been hailed as the first commercial application of virtual reality. Since its opening in August, the BattleTech Center has received more than 40,000 visitors and has been featured recently on Entertainment This Week (NBC) and CNN.

Published under the Infocom label, "BattelTech: The Crescent Hawks' Revenge" is the third computer title in the series, following the popular "MechWarrior " recently named a Top Ten game by "Computer Gaming World Magazine," and the original, "BattleTech: The Crescent Hawks' Inception." In "BattleTech: The Crescent Hawks' Revenge," this newest role-playing adventure takes place on an epic scale, with 27 scenarios set on five different planets where players engage in futuristic real-time combat in giant "BattelMechs," 30-foot-tall lethal war machines armed with an arsenal of deadly weapons. Players once again assume the role of Jason Youngblood as he searches for his father who was kidnapped in the first game. Once Jason's father is found, the game shifts 20 years into the future and Jason must call upon his command abilities and combat savvy to help defend the Inner Sphere of the five Successor States from a devastating force, known as the Clans.

The game features 256-color VGA graphics that create a cinematic effect with detailed pictures of characters and scenarios. On the battlefield, Mech warriors have digitized speech that alerts players to problems and battle situations while in combat, enhanced by an original music sound track which is supported by most major sound cards. "BattleTech: The Crescent Hawks' Revenge" is now available for IBM and compatible machines and retails for $49.95.

Headquartered in Menlo Park, Mediagenic is an international developer and publisher of entertainment software for IBM-compatible computers and Nintendo video game systems. The company publishes its cartridge, floppy-disk and CD-ROM titles under the Activision, Electric Dreams and Infocom brands and serves as an exclusive distributor for products from Absolute Entertainment and Interplay Productions. Infocom publishes strategy games, graphical interactive adventures, and fantasy role-playing entertainment software.

LONG BEACH, CALIF (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - A ceremony was held here today marking delivery of the first McDonnell Douglas MD-11 wide-cabin trijet to Finnair, the national airline of Finland.

Delivery of the jetliner comes 47 months after the program was formally launched in December 1986 with 92 commitments from 12 customers. A total of 375 commitments, including 174 firm orders, have been received from airlines on five continents. MD-11s can carry more than 400 passengers over intercontinental ranges nonstop.

Finnair, one of 12 launch customers, has ordered four MD-11s and has options for two more. Initially the trijet will be used for charter service from Helsinki to the Canary Islands, and later in service from the Finnish capital to such international destinations as Tokyo, New York, Los Angeles, Bangkok-Singapore and Beijing.

Douglas Aircraft Co. President Robert H. Hood said, "McDonnell Douglas is pleased and proud to extend a partnership between Finnair and our company that began nearly a half century ago. We know the MD-11 will provide the ultimate in passenger comfort and efficiency, and we know Finnair will continue a tradition of technical and service excellence with this aircraft." Finnair President and Chairman Antti Potila said that in December Finnair will be the first airline in the world to begin service with the MD-11.

Esko Kukkonen, Finnair's executive vice president for operations, said, "Our choice of the MD-11 was strongly influenced by the excellent reliability of our DC-10 trijets. The MD-11 combines new cockpit and systems technology with state-of-the-art engines. Add to this its greater range, better payload and fuel economy and we have a superior airplane to serve our future passenger needs."

READING, PA (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Carpenter Technology Corp. (NYSE: CRS) has announced the sale of its 50-acre tract of land in Bridgeport, Conn., formerly the location of a steel-making facility.

The purchaser of the site is The Price Company (NASDAQ: PCLB), of San Diego, which has development plans for a retail shopping center on the property. Terms of the sale were not announced.

Paul R. Roedel, Carpenter chairman and chief executive officer, said, "We are pleased with this agreement since it meets our two key objectives. The sale price is within our original estimate of two years ago, and the community will benefit from the creation of new jobs and an increased tax base." Roedel indicated that the sale will have no effect on net income because the transaction is within the amount contemplated in March of 1989 when a reserve was established for the net costs to close the facility.

The Price Company, a retail developer, plans to build a 400,000 square-foot retail center on the water-front site, according to David Daddario, of North American Realty Advisory Services, who served as an advisor to Carpenter on the transaction.

A Price Club store will occupy 113,000 square feet as the center's anchor tenant, along with an additional 25 stores, Daddario said. He estimated that the retail center will help diversify the Bridgeport economy and will provide 1,000 new jobs.

Carpenter Technology purchased the Bridgeport plant in 1957, and operated the facility as a specialty metals production plant until December 1988. At that time, the company consolidated operations at the Reading plant, where the company's more modern and efficient production facilities are located. Over the past two years, Carpenter has cleared buildings from the site and prepared it for sale.

Carpenter is a manufacturer and world-wide marketer of specialty metals.

WORCESTER, MASS. (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - In a year when American travel companies are experiencing sharp decline in tourism to Europe, one U.S. tour operator has found the solution to travelers' anxieties about Iraq and about its possible impact on travel security in Europe.

ALSG (American Leadership Study Groups), of Worcester, one of America's most experienced and best-known educational tour operators, is offering an exclusive insurance plan that addresses the concerns most often voiced by U.S. travelers planning trips to Europe -- How can we plan a trip to Europe at a time of political uncertainty in the Middle East? What will we do if there's an outbreak of terrorism against Americans in Europe? Can we cancel our travel plans without forfeiting payments already made?

ALSG's unprecedented insurance plan provides complete reimbursement of all payments in case a terrorist incident occurs in -- or a U.S. State Department travel advisory warning is issued against -- and overseas destination which they are scheduled to visit within 30 days following the incident. Under the plan, ALSG travelers who cancel their trip because of the terrorist incident or the State Department warning receive a 100 percent refund of payments made for their trip.

ALSG's insurance plan also covers trip medical expenses, trip interruption, flight insurance, flight delays, baggage delays, and other travel-related protections. The plan is available to ALSG travelers for $49 (on one- and two-week trips) or $59 (for three-week and longer trips). "What's really important about this coverage," said Jonathan M. Ansell, ALSG's chief executive officer, "is that it is the only plan in the country that is fully insured by a national insurance company. We know of no other tour operator in the country that has arranged this kind of insurance to protect its customers."

ALSG has been conducting educational travel programs for all age groups since 1965. Trips range from one to five weeks, and our operated during the winter, spring and summer. ALSG groups are led by specially trained tour instructors. They spend their time visiting landmarks, museums, and other highlights of each city that convey the local culture and lifestyle. The tours are popular for both students and adults seeking travel for enlightenment as well as for pleasure. Special incentives are offered to teachers and others who organize their own groups of six or more participants.

MIAMI (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Ryder System, Inc. (NYSE: R), the nation's leading highway transportation and aviation services company, has renewed its contract with Doral Hotels & Resorts to co-sponsor the prestigious Doral-Ryder Open golf tournament. Ryder System has been co-sponsoring the PGA Tour event since 1987, when it signed the initial five-year contract, which was due to expire following the 1991 tournament.

Since Ryder System became involved, the Doral-Ryder Open has grown considerably in stature, prize money and popularity:

-- Its $1.4 million purse -- up from $500,000 in 1986 -- is now one of the largest on the PGA Tour.

-- In addition to the tournament and three pro-ams, several other events have been added, including a free pops concert, a celebrity dinner, a "fore-mile" race, a golf clinic for underprivileged youths, and a seminar and dinner for financial analysts. -- Considered by many pros as one of the best tournaments on the PGA Tour, the Doral-Ryder Open has consistently drawn top players, including 1991 defending champion Greg Norman, two-time winner Jack Nicklaus, Seve Ballesteros, Payne Stewart, Paul Azinger and Mark Calcavecchia. -- During the past four years, the tournament has raised more than $1.7 million in support of the American Cancer Society, chief beneficiary since 1969. -- The Greater Miami Convention and Visitors Bureau calcualtes that an infusion of more than $5.4 million pours into the community each year as a direct result of the Doral-Ryder Open. -- The 1990 tournament had the highest television rating (6.0) of any PGA Tour event this year, higher than even the U.S. Open. This rating translates into approximately 5,500,000 households or an estimated 13,750,000 people.

CHICAGO, (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Amoco Oil Company today reminded U.S. motorists that the federal motor fuel excise tax on gasoline and highway diesel fuel will be increased by 5 cents per gallon from 9 to 14 cents and from 15 to 20 cents per gallon, respectively, effective at 12:01 a.m. on Saturday, Dec. 1.

In addition, a one-tenth of 1 cent tax for underground storage tanks will be reinstated Dec. 1, making the total federal tax on gasoline 14.1 cents per gallon and 20.1 cents on highway diesel fuel.

"As required by law, effective Saturday Amoco will increase the amount it collects for taxes from dealers, jobbers, and most commercial customers by 5.1 cents per gallon," said Robert J. Rauscher, Amoco marketing vice president. He noted that while Amoco dealers and jobbers are independent businesspeople who set their own retail prices, it is likely that they will pass the tax increases on to their customers.

Diesel fuel for use by railroads, which was previously exempt from federal motor fuel taxes, will be taxed 2.6 cents per gallon Dec. 1. Commercial jet fuel is not subject to federal motor fuel taxes.

The gasoline tax was raised by Congress in the recently passed federal budget package that was signed by the president in seeking to cut the federal deficit.

"Amoco has typically not opposed motor fuel taxes whose proceeds are earmarked for federal or state highway funds," Rauscher said.

"However, the company has strongly questioned the use of motor fuel taxes for general revenues or deficit cutting," he said, noting that half of the revenue from the new tax will be applied to the federal deficit, while the other half will go to the highway trust fund. "The practice merely depletes resources available for infrastructure improvements, and allows government at all levels to avoid resolving the underlying problem of overspending."

Federal motor fuel taxes are applied in addition to various state and local taxes. State taxes range from 7.5 cents per gallon in Georgia to 22 cents per gallon in Connecticut and Washington.

Chicago may have the highest total tax on a gallon of gasoline in the country with combined federal, state, and local taxes of approximately 48 cents per gallon. With the addition of the new 5.1 cents per gallon federal tax on gasoline and percentage adjustments, the tax per gallon will be 53.5 cents per gallon in Chicago.

The announced tax increases are independent of any competitive market-based price changes that may occur.

Under the new law, all federal motor fuel taxes have been extended to either Oct. 1, 1995, or Jan. 1, 1996.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - John Wiley & Sons, Inc., (NASDAQ-NMS: WILLA) publishers, announced today that net income for the second quarter of fiscal 1991 was $278,000, or $.06 per share, as compared with a loss of $222,000 for the comparable fiscal 1990 period. For the year-to-date, the company's net income increased from $1.6 million in fiscal 1990, or $.36 per share, to $2.4 million, or $.55 per share, in fiscal 1991.

Net income for both the fiscal 1991 second quarter and the six months include after-tax gains, relating to unusual items, of $757,000, or $.17 per share. In fiscal 1990, the comparable figures included after-tax gains of $98,000, or $.02 per share.

Excluding the effects of those unusual items, net income for the year-to-date was 9.7 percent ahead of the comparable prior-year period. Gains achieved in the company's scientific/technical/medical sector more than offset a decline in the educational sector's operating income. Increased interest income on higher cash balances -- resulting from the proceeds of businesses sold -- more than compensated for the contribution to earnings those companies would have made.

"Most of our business sectors are meeting or exceeding our expectations," said Charles R. Ellis, president and chief executive officer. "While the educational sector's earnings contribution was below the comparable fiscal 1990 periods, it was at an anticipated level and reflects our intention to continue to invest for the future in that important phase of our operations."

Revenues for the second quarter increased 6.6 percent, up from $66.0 million in the second quarter of fiscal 1990 to $70.3 million in the fiscal 1991 quarter. Revenues for the first six months were $145.7 million in the current fiscal year, a 4.5 percent gain over $139.4 million in the comparable previous period.

The fiscal 1991 unusual pre-tax gain of $1.3 million consists of the gain on the sale of Harwal Publishing's review-book series for medical students -- approximately $5.2 million -- offset by $3.9 million of charges relating to the restructuring and rationalization of certain publishing lines including the write-down of product development costs and intangibles. The fiscal 1990 unusual pre-tax gain of $8.9 million reflects the $25.9 million gain on the sale of occupational and nursing lines, offset by approximately $17.0 million of restructuring charges. The reduced after-tax effect of the fiscal 1990 unusual gain is due to the lower tax benefits accorded those unusual charges.

ATLANTA (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The Interagency Review Panel which is overseeing the cleanup of DDT-contaminated waters in the Huntsville/Triana area of Alabama will meet Dec. 6 in Decatur, Ala. The meeting will begin at 10 a.m. in the Interpretive Center at the Wheeler National Wildlife Refuge and is open to the public.

The Technical Committee will meet one day earlier (Dec. 5) at 10 a.m. at the Redstone Arsenal. A site tour of the remedial project area is scheduled for 3 p.m. on Dec. 5.

Under terms of a court-ordered consent decree announced in 1983, the Interagency Review Panel was established to oversee the cleanup being carried out by Olin.

In addition to the EPA, the Review Panel includes representatives designated by the Tennessee Valley Authority, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the Department of the Army, and the state of Alabama. Panel participants include non-voting representatives from the Olin Corp. and the town of Triana. Construction of the remedial action project was completed in late 1987. A long-term monitoring program began Jan. 1, 1988.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Cypress Fund Inc. (AMEX: WJR) today announced that it has commenced a tender offer to purchase up to all 6,213,816 shares of its own common stock in exchange for the net assets of the fund as of a specified valuation date. Because the assets of the fund, a closed-end investment company, consist predominantly of securities held in the fund's investment portfolio, most of the tender offer price will consist of a pro rata portion of each of the fund's portfolio securities, with the balance of the price consisting of cash. The offer is conditioned, among other things, on at least 30 percent of Cypress Fund's shares being tendered and the issuance of an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission permitting tenders by certain affiliated shareholders.

Joyce N. Fensterstock, chairman and president of the fund, said: "The self tender offer will give shareholders the opportunity to hold directly their own mini-portfolio of the fund's investment securities, which may be particularly attractive to large shareholders with the ability to manage their own portfolio." The fund's two largest shareholders, who together own over 40 percent of the fund's shares, have indicated an intention to tender, although they are not bound to do so.

As previously announced, the fund's board of directors has been considering various plans for shareholders to realize the net asset value of their shares in cash or redeemable securities. Following consummation of the tender offer, the board is committed promptly to consider adopting such a plan, although no prediction can be made of what the plan will be or how long it would take to implement.

Neither the fund nor its board of directors is making any recommendation to shareholders whether or not to tender their shares. Unless extended by the fund, the expiration date for the offer is Jan. 2, 1991 at midnight, New York time. Requests for tender offer materials should be directed to Shareholder Communications Corporation, the fund's information agent, 800-221-5724, ext. 5.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Cypress Fund Inc. (AMEX: WJR), a closed-end management investment company seeking long-term capital appreciation through investment in common stocks, today announced its performance for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, its fiscal year end.

During the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, net realized and unrealized losses were $12,014,979, equal to $1.91 per share. The fund's total net investment loss during the same period was $6,005, equal to $0.00 per share. This compares with net investment loss of $529,032, equal to $0.07 per share, and net realized and unrealized gains of $7,284,958, equal to $0.93 per share, incurred during the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1989.

For the year ended Sept. 30, 1990, the fund's total net investment loss was $525,256, equal to $0.08 per share. Total net realized and unrealized losses for the same period were $18,519,498, equal to $2.84 per share. This compares to total net investment losses of $1,625,260, equal to $0.19 per share, and total net realized and unrealized gains of $10,367,270, equal to $1.31 per share, for the same period ended Sept. 30, 1989.

On Sept. 30, 1990 total net assets of the fund were $48,715,805 as compared with total net assets of $74,521,453 on Sept. 30, 1989. The net asset value per share on Sept. 30, 1990 was $7.84 based on 6,213,816 shares outstanding, a 29.24 percent decrease from the net asset value per share of $11.08 based on 6,728,798 shares outstanding on Sept. 30, 1989.

As previously reported, the fund was authorized in October 1987 to repurchase its shares on the American Stock Exchange. The current repurchase authorization permits repurchases of shares at discounts from net asset value of 5 percent or greater. A total of 1,454,800 shares have been repurchased from the inception of the repurchase program through Sept. 30, 1990, excluding shares purchased in the July 1989 tender offer.

LOUISVILLE, KY (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Brown-Forman Corporation (AMEX: BF.A BF.B) announced that its Directors showed confidence in the future by increasing the quarterly cash dividend 8 percent from $.52 to $.56 per share on Class A and Class B Common Stock. As a result, the indicated annual cash dividend rose from $2.08 to $2.24.

The company also announced that net income for the first six months was $80.1 million or $2.87 per share compared to $85.1 million or $3.03 per share before last year's nonrecurring items. Last year's first half included a charge of $59.9 million which eliminated the remaining value of the California Cooler brand intangible assets. This charge was partially offset by an $11.5 million gain in last year's first quarter which resulted from the company's adoption of FASB Statement No. 96. Including these nonrecurring items, net income for the six months ended October 31, 1989, was $36.7 million or $1.30 per share.

Net income for the second quarter was $44.0 million or $1.58 per share compared to $55.1 million or $1.97 per share in the year-ago period, excluding last year's charge for California Cooler. Including this item, net income for last year's second quarter was a net loss of $4.7 million or $0.17 per share.

Second quarter operating results for both years were affected significantly by the timing of price increases on many of the company's major spirits brands which resulted in fewer domestic sales during the period when compared against last year's second quarter. Mr. W. L. Lyons Brown, Jr., Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, said, "we anticipated a second quarter decline in U.S. beverage sales as a natural result of strong first quarter domestic sales in anticipation of price increases that occured in the middle of the summer. In spite of this decline, we are encouraged by the performance of the company's beverage business. We remain confident that we will realize solid second half performance and that Brown-Forman will achieve earnings per share growth for the full year."

During the first six months, the company surpassed its worldwide depletion goals for most of its major spirits brands. Several of Brown-Forman's major spirits brands, including Jack Daniel's, Canadian Mist, and Early Times, achieved worldwide volume growth in a very competitive market. Southern Comfort experienced a modest depletion decline. Korbel Champagne and Bolla wine also recorded moderately lower depletions in line with their respective categories.

Also during the second quarter, Brown-Forman's consumer durables segment, Lenox and Hartmann, reported a sales increase of 15 percent. Excluding companies acquired and sold in fiscal 1990, sales rose 13 percent. Despite an uncertain retail environment experienced in the first six months of fiscal 1991, Lenox Merchandising, Lenox Crystal, and Lenox Collections achieved solid results continuing to indicate the positive response of the American consumer to these products.

Brown-Forman Corporation is one of the country's major diversified producers and marketers of fine quality consumer products, including Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whiskey, Canadian Mist, Southern Comfort, Korbel California Champagnes, Lenox China and Crystal, and Hartmann Luggage.

DOWNERS GROVE, ILL. (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - MasterCard International Inc. and CIRRUS System, Inc. announced today that the 1,949 self-service cash machines of the Midland Bank in England and Wales are available immediately for use by MasterCard card and CIRRUS ATM cardholders.

"We are very excited about this newest addition to the MasterCard/ CIRRUS ATM network," said John O. Smith, president and CEO of CIRRUS System, Inc. "We're extremely pleased to be able to offer MasterCard and CIRRUS cardholders convenient cash access in the United Kingdom, which is the third most popular business and tourism destination for U.S. travelers."

Midland Bank's self-service cash machines are located in cities and towns near many favorite tourist attractions and business centers throughout England and Wales. For example, in London, Midland ATMs can be found on Baker Street, Buckingham Palace Road, The Strand, King Street-Covent Garden, York Road-Waterloo Station, and Wimbledon Hill Road, to name just a few locations.

Elsewhere in England, Midland ATMs are located in Winchester, Chester, St. Albans, Canterbury, Oxford, Bath, Jersey, Cheltenham, Salisbury, Cambridge, Stratford-upon-Avon and York; in Wales, Midland ATMs are in Cardiff and Caernarvon. In addition, Midland has ATMs in many other towns and cities throughout England and Wales.

For the convenience of MasterCard and CIRRUS cardholders traveling by air to and throughout England and Wales, Midland ATMs are located in Gatwick Airport in the International Arrivals Concourse, at Heathrow Airport in Terminal One, and at Midland's Wilmslow branch for Manchester Airport. In addition, ATMs can be found at 63 George Street and 205 Marsh Road in Luton for travelers using Luton Airport; ATMs also are situated in the National Exhibition Centre in Birmingham, a 15-minute taxi ride from Birmingham Airport.

All of Midland's ATMs display the MasterCard and CIRRUS logos, so travelers can easily spot them. Travelers also may check with their own financial institutions for information about specific Midland ATM locations before they go abroad, or visit a Midland branch while in the United Kingdom to request ATM location information.

To determine whether an ATM card or credit card will work in a Midland MasterCard/CIRRUS ATM, all a traveler needs to do is check to see whether his or her card has a MasterCard or CIRRUS logo. Cards with either logo will be accepted by the Midland ATMs.

KANSAS CITY, MO (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The World Health Organization and Marion Merrell Dow Inc. (NYSE: MKC), a major U.S. pharmaceutical company, today announced the first new drug in forty years for African trypanosomiasis (African Sleeping Sickness). This disease, which affects an estimated 25,000 people annually, is fatal if untreated.

The new drug, Ornidyl, is known as a resurrection drug, because it has been used to successfully treat more than 600 patients infected with the West African variety of sleeping sickness with very few side effects. Most of these patients have been near death.

Using Ornidyl, the World Health Organization (WHO) estimates that about 3,000 patients a year could be saved from premature death caused by this variety of African Sleeping Sickness.

The drug, which is best administered intravenously, costs about $140 for a two-week course. Marion Merrell Dow will manufacture Ornidyl in the United States and France and distribute it at cost to hospitals and health centers in Africa. Sufficient amounts of the drug will be available by the end of 1990 to satisfy demand.

African Sleeping Sickness is caused by trypanosome parasites transmitted by tsetse flies. The disease occurs in scattered foci throughout sub-Saharan Africa -- an area of some 10 million square kilometers. The World Health Organization estimates that more than 50 million people in 36 countries are at risk of contracting the disease.

The onset of sleeping sickness is characterized by malaise, fatigue and irregular, low-grade fever. It is followed by a spectrum of symptoms, including somnolence, high-grade fever, joint pains, swollen tissues, enlarged liver and spleen. As the disease progresses and the parasites invade the central nervous system, patients experience mental deterioration, seizures, coma and death.

Until Ornidyl, all major drugs used to treat sleeping sickness had serious shortcomings. Pentamidine and suramin are not effective against late-stage disease when the parasites have reached the central nervous system. Melarsoprol, which is used in late-stage disease, is an arsenic-based drug and is fatal in up to 5 percent of patients treated. In a further 5 percent, melarsopol causes severe lesions of the central nervous system.

When Ornidyl is administered intravenously -- the most effective method, few serious adverse effects have been observed. However, when given orally, it may cause mild gastro-intestinal problems -- diarrhea, vomiting and nausea.

Ornidyl acts by blocking enzymes essential for the proliferation of the trypanosomes parasites. It is the rapid proliferation of the parasites in the central nervous system that causes malaise and death.

After extensive testing, the manufacturer and WHO have determined that Ornidyl needs to be administered intravenously several times daily in large doses for two weeks.

"In its late stage, the parasite infests the central nervous system, an area where the drug concentration is lower than that seen in blood," said Paul J. Schechter, M.D., Ph.D., the principal scientist who developed Ornidyl at Merrell Dow Research Institute in Strasbourg, France. "We are still conducting research to find the minimum dosage that will cure the disease."

There are two types of African Sleeping Sickness -- the gambiense form, common in West and Central Africa, and the rhodesiense form, more common in East and southern Africa. Ornidyl, like earlier drugs, is more effective against the gambiense form which accounts for about two- thirds of all sleeping sickness cases. Ornidyl is being combined with other substances to improve its effectiveness on the rhodesiense form.

Ornidyl, also known as DFMO or eflornithine, was originally developed as a potential therapy for cancer. Promising experimental studies in animals were not duplicated in clinical trials in man. However, the research on the drug -- for human safety and tolerance -- was well-established.

As a policy, Marion Merrell Dow published its findings and offered the drug to scientific researchers. Cyrus Bacchi, Ph.D., of The Haskins Laboratory, Pace University, New York City, was studying the metabolic pathways of trypanosomes under a grant from UNDP/World Bank/WHO Programme for Research and Training in Tropical Diseases (TDR). It was Bacchi who first demonstrated in the laboratory that Ornidyl worked against the multiplication system of the parasites.

BEAVERTON, ORE. (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Tektronix Inc. (NYSE: TEK) reported earnings of $11,693,000, or 41 cents per share, for its second fiscal quarter which ended Nov. 10. This compares with $463,000, or 1 cent per share, in the prior year's second quarter.

Sales in this year's second quarter were $309,357,000, down 6 percent from last year's $330,102,000. Customer orders in the quarter were $313 million, down 8 percent from $340 million a year ago. The order comparison for the quarter was adversely impacted by cancellation of a large order and by the discontinuance of certain businesses. Without these effects, the current quarter's orders would be approximately 1 percent below prior year levels.

"This report shows the continuing positive impact on our earnings of the restructuring moves made last spring, plus our ongoing cost containment steps " commented Jerome Meyer, president and chief executive officer of Tektronix. "The earnings and very positive cash flow in the quarter help to provide a foundation for our efforts to generate growth. While business remains sluggish, our ongoing order comparisons have held up reasonably well in a difficult economic environment."

U.S. sales in the quarter were down 12 percent from last year, and made up 51 percent of the total; international sales were up 1 percent. Communications sales were 16 percent above last year's total, while Test & Measurement and Visual Systems sales declined from last year. Geographic and product sales breakdowns for the quarter were:

FORT WAYNE, IND. (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The Middle East crisis and a related drop in consumer confidence have significantly changed the short-term outlook for the auto industry, according to General Motors Chairman Robert C. Stempel.

Stempel, in remarks prepared for delivery tonight to the Fort Wayne Chamber of Commerce, said consumer confidence is now at its lowest since the 1980-82 period, and it dropped from almost record highs in just three months before leveling out in November.

"Many people have been taking a 'wait and see' attitude toward major purchase decisions," he said. "For the auto industry this has translated into weaker automotive demand that has meant temporary plant shutdowns and layoffs."

Stempel expressed confidence in the long-term outlook for GM, but said current market forces and an objective to achieve more level production in 1991 have caused the corporation to further reduce its fourth quarter North American vehicle production.

"At General Motors, we have significantly reduced the number of vehicles we plan to build in the fourth quarter of 1990 -- not just here at Fort Wayne, but at several of our plants across North America," Stempel said.

"Beyond an earlier 181,000 unit reduction, we are now planning to reduce our North American production schedules for the fourth quarter of 1990 by 111,000 units. As a result, GM's currently scheduled fourth quarter North American production of 1,071,000 units will be below both the third quarter of 1990 and the fourth quarter of 1989."

PHILADELPHIA (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The U.K.'s Ministry of Defence (MoD) has awarded Boeing Defense & Space Group's Helicopters Division a contract to modernize the world's largest Chinook helicopter fleet outside the U.S. Army.

The 47-month-long Midlife Update Program is valued at more than $250 million including spares and equipment. The program will upgrade more than 30 Royal Air Force (RAF) HC Mk 1 Chinooks to new HC Mk 2 standards similar to the U.S. Army's CH-47D.

Current plans call for the first HC Mk 1 to enter Boeing's Philadelphia facilities in February 1991, and return to England as an HC Mk 2 by late November 1992. Seven more RAF Chinooks will be spaced along the modernization-production line by the end of 1992. The final HC Mk 2 delivery is set for December 1994.

The Chinook Midlife Update Program will significantly enhance the RAF's ability to provide air mobility and logistics support for British forces over the next 25 years. Equally important, the modernization program will lead to reduced operating and support costs; these long- term financial benefits allow the program to pay for itself.

Edward J. Renouard, executive vice president and general manager of the Boeing Helicopters Division of the Defense & Space Group, said: "The Royal Air Force is our largest European customer, and we're pleased to provide the RAF with a number of improvements in the HC Mk 2. These enhancements include modular hydraulic systems, improved electrical systems, stronger transmission systems, and an improved auxiliary-power unit. Full authority digital engine control is also being introduced.

"Boeing Helicopters participates in extensive reciprocal trade with the United Kingdom in support of our production requirements, achieving $262 million in continuing long-term obligations. We have issued purchase orders to more than 60 U.K. firms since 1978, including such well-known companies as Westland Aerostructures, which builds the CH-47D's fuel pods, and Lucas Aerospace, which supplies the Chinook's primary electrical power generating equipment," Renouard said.

The RAF's Chinooks are prime movers within the U.K. Support Helicopter Force. Two Chinook units -- No. 7 Squadron and No. 240 Operational Conversion Unit -- are based at RAF Odiham in Hamsphire in south-central England. No. 18 Squadron is based at Gutersloh in north- central Germany and No. 78 Squadron is based near Port Stanley in the Falkland Islands.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) (NYSE: FNM) today provided analysts and investors at a meeting here with newly published information on its $17.9 billion multifamily residential mortgage business.

The information showed that multifamily delinquencies of 60 days or more declined to 1.3 percent at the end of the third quarter, from a peak of 6.6 percent in the fourth quarter of 1988, and 3.75 percent in the third quarter of 1989.

The multifamily delinquency and foreclosure information and performance by region will be published quarterly in materials provided to analysts and investors.

The new material includes details on Fannie Mae's multifamily loans on which Fannie Mae has recourse to the lenders. The information indicates that Fannie Mae is protected either by lender recourse and collateral, lender recourse, or government insurance on $11 billion of its multifamily mortgages. Fannie Mae also has $2.9 billion in multifamily mortgages where it shares the risk of loss, and $4 billion where it accepts full risk of loss.

The company's single-family and multifamily portfolio and Mortgage-Backed Securities outstanding totaled $381 billion as of the end of the third quarter of 1990.

SEATTLE (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - A $4.7 million contract to develop phased array antennas suitable for high-performance aircraft has been awarded to the Aerospace & Electronics Division of Boeing Defense & Space Group, the company announced today.

Rome Air Development Center, U.S. Air Force Systems Command, Hanscom Air Force Base, Mass., has contracted with the division's Research & Engineering organization to perform this high technology task.

Much of this work will be accomplished at the Boeing High Technology Center (HTC) in Bellevue, Wash. The 36-month effort will require model fabrication and testing, according to program designers.

The phased array antennas will enable high-performance, low-observable aircraft such as the B-2 bomber to connect with Milstar, the survivable communication satellite system used to link strategic nuclear forces. The antennas are very compact and may be applied on other aircraft.

The High Technology Center developed the unique packaging approach in designing the phased array antennas that should result in lower production cost and facilitate repair and maintenance.

The High Technology Center is part of Aerospace & Electronics, a division of Boeing Defense & Space Group.

HOUSTON, (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Allwaste Inc. (NASDAQ: ALWS) stated today that the company expects earnings per share from continuing operations for the quarter ending Nov. 30, 1990 (i.e., before considering a previously announced 9 cents per share gain on the sale of the company's discontinued manufacturing operation) will be profitable, but substantially lower than analysts' current estimates of 8 - 10 cents. R.L. Nelson Jr., chairman of Allwaste, stated, "Our air-moving, tank cleaning and glass recycling businesses are performing well. However, asbestos abatement operations, which comprise about 30 percent of Allwaste's total revenues, are experiencing significant losses in the face of rapidly deteriorating market conditions."

As previously discussed in the company's press release dated Oct. 30, 1990, Allwaste's asbestos abatement division was significantly impacted during the quarter ended Aug. 31, 1990 by increased competition and reduced demand for abatement services from the public sector (primarily school work). Recent publications and public debate over the health hazards associated with asbestos, much of which has been generated by special interest groups, have led to controversy and confusion as to the need to remove asbestos and may have contributed to postponement of some of the company's abatement projects. In addition, a general economic downturn during 1990 in certain key geographic areas serviced by the company has resulted in fewer commercial real estate transactions and renovation projects.

These trends are continuing and management is currently projecting that the company's asbestos abatement division will incur a significant pretax operating loss in the first quarter of fiscal 1991, which will include provisions for losses or reduced profit expectations on certain long-term contracts. The timing for a return to profitability for the company's asbestos abatement division is dependent upon the extent to which these economic and competitive trends continue, as well as the success of the company's marketing plan to penetrate the industrial sector and the impact of recently implemented overhead reductions and other cost-cutting measures. The company believes that there will be an ongoing need to remove asbestos; however, if current market conditions for asbestos abatement services worsen or the company's actions do not produce the desired results, management may consider additional steps including, but not limited to, a consolidation or downsizing of asbestos abatement operations, which could lead to asset write-downs and other loss provisions.

NEW YORK, (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Grant Thornton, a leading international auditing, tax and management consulting firm, today announced that it has signed a letter of intent to admit up to 25 partners and executive directors from Spicer & Oppenheim's New York office into its own New York practice.

The proposed transaction, which is subject to the completion of Grant Thornton's review of Spicer & Oppenheim's operations as well as Spicer's resolution of its existing obligations, would become effective in early December.

"We view this as a rare opportunity to expand our presence in the country's top financial center by adding a premier Wall Street auditing and tax practice to our own," said Robert E. Nason, executive partner of Chicago-based Grant Thornton, which has more than 50 offices, including four in the New York metropolitan area.

Domenick J. Esposito, 43, would continue to head Grant Thornton's New York metropolitan area practice as managing partner.

Esposito announced that, upon the transaction's closing, a new practice unit, including the admitted partners, executive directors and staff of Spicer & Oppenheim, would be formed. Cono R. Fusco, 47, a Grant Thornton partner, would serve as partner-in-charge of this new practice unit.

The transaction would give Grant Thornton more than 40 partners and 400 staff in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

"Spicer & Oppenheim has a sterling reputation on Wall Street and special status in the financial services industry, particularly in the area of investment partnerships, securities, commodities and reorganizations," Esposito said. "The proposed transaction would strengthen our existing skills and enhance our ability to help clients access sources of growth capital."

All of the shares are to be distributed to the shareholders of an affiliated company, AmeriServ Management Group, Inc., pursuant to a proposed plan of liquidation through a trust of which E. Ray Lewis, president and chief executive officer of the company, will serve as trustee. AmeriServ Financial Corporation will not receive any proceeds from the distribution. The shares being registered will be placed in a trust on the effective date of registration statement and distributed in four equal installments of 2,355,875 shares beginning with the next business day immediately following the effective date of the registration statement and at 90-day intervals thereafter, subject to shareholder approval of the proposed plan of liquidation.

In connection with the registration, the company has made application for the listing of its shares on the National Association of Securities Dealers Automated Quotation System (NASDAQ). Such a listing would allow the company's shareholders to follow their investment in the company through the availability of quotations and listings in selected newspapers. Previously, the company's stock was listed in the National Quotation Bureau, Inc's "pink sheets" and the level of activity and current quotations were more difficult to obtain. It is anticipated that the proposed listing on the NASDAQ will be approved shortly after the effectiveness of the registration statement.

The company has recently experienced rapid growth in its medical insurance claims processing and advance funding business and anticipates expanding its home warranty services contract business into several additional states besides Texas. In order to raise additional capital to fund the continued expansion of the company's businesses, the company has engaged Eppler, Guerin & Turner, Inc. as its financial advisor. As financial advisor, it is anticipated that Eppler, Guerin & Turner, Inc. will advise the company as to the most appropriate means to raise additional capital and will assist the company in securing such funds.

TOMS RIVER, NJ (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Statewide Bancorp (Statewide) (NASDAQ: STWB) and First Peoples Bank of New Jersey (First Peoples), a wholly owned subsidiary of First Peoples Financial Corporation (NASDAQ: FPNJ) announced today that they have entered into a non-binding letter of intent to proceed with a transaction whereby First Peoples will assume over $170 million in deposit liabilities and purchase certain of the assets of eight branch banking offices of Statewide subsidiaries in Atlantic and Salem counties, N.J.

The acquisition is subject to a number of conditions and contingencies, including the signing of a definitive agreement containing all terms and conditions of the transaction, the approval of the respective boards of directors of Statewide and First Peoples and the approval of various regulatory authorities.

Douglas E. Johnson, president and chief executive officer of Statewide, stated "This sale is an integral part of Statewide's capital plan whereby the corresponding asset reduction will enhance the capital position of Statewide."

Jerome S. Goodman, president and chief executive officer of First Peoples Bank added, "As we move forward with our planned growth by adding eight new branches, we look forward to building our core banking business and expanding our market share."

Statewide is a multi-bank holding company headquartered in Toms River, N.J. Its subsidiaries operate branch banking offices in Atlantic, Cape May, Burlington, Monmouth, Ocean and Salem counties, N.J. As of Sept. 30, 1990, Statewide had total consolidated assets in excess of $1,800,000,000.

First Peoples and its parent, First Peoples Financial Corporation, are headquartered in Haddon Township, N.J., with banking offices in Burlington, Camden, Cumberland and Gloucester counties, N.J. As of Sept. 30, 1990, it had total assets in excess of $1 billion.

ABERDEEN, S.D. (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Ronald J. Rivett, chairman of the board, cofounder and majority stockholder of Super 8 Enterprises, Inc., the parent company of Super 8 Motels, announced today that he and Chief Executive Officer and minority stockholder Loren D. Steele have agreed to sell the company to a group of Hong Kong based investors. The sale is expected to be finalized in January.

Super 8 Motels is one of the largest franchise motel chains in North America, and leads the economy sector with 48,300 rooms in 775 properties, located in 47 states and four Canadian provinces. The chain is enjoying record expansion in 1990, with an estimated 125 new properties opening before the end of the year. "It was an ideal time to consider a sale," Rivett said. "Our occupancy rates are up, our franchise sales are up, and our average room rate is up."

The purchase price was not released, but Rivett and Steele did reveal certain terms of the agreement. The new owners will acquire all assets of Super 8 Enterprises, except four of the motel properties that are held by the corporation. Rivett has chosen to retain ownership of those four, all of which are in Canada.

The agreement also stipulates that Super 8's corporate headquarters will remain in Aberdeen, S.D., for at least the next five years. The current management team and board of directors will also be retained for a minimum of five years. The future owners are committed to maintaining or enhancing all services to the company's franchisees.

Rivett, who will continue to serve on the board, noted that the sale will be an all cash transaction. "This gives Super 8 extraordinary financial and management stability during a difficult time for the lodging industry," he said.

"Not only is the chain debt free, but the new owners have established a $250 million development fund to support new construction and long term financing for franchisees in the United States and Canada. We will be in an excellent position to build new properties or convert properties from those chains that are now struggling with heavy debts."

"Many of our competitors have dreamed of creating exactly this kind of development fund," Steele added, "but no one has been able to do it on this scale. People have been saying that during hard times, cash is king. If that's true, this makes Super 8 part of the royal family."

In addition to its North American development activities, Super 8 expects to embark on an aggressive program of overseas expansion, beginning with Australia in 1991. Future development is also slated for Asia, Western Europe and Eastern Europe. "We see great opportunities for market penetration in many areas outside North America," Chief Operating Officer Harvey Jewett said. "Australia and Western Europe are especially ripe for the development of an economy lodging sector like that in North America. But as the world shrinks and the economies of Asia continue to boom, other regions will become equally promising."

Rivett added that he was pleased that the corporation would remain in Aberdeen.

"Since Dennis Brown and I started Super 8 in 1974, we have always relied on the people of Aberdeen as friends and coworkers. Now they will not only continue to work with Super 8, but they will be taking part in a dramatic expansion of our position in the industry."

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Pioneer Bancorp, Inc. (NASDAQ: PSBN), headquartered in Rocky Mount, N.C., announced that its principal subsidiary, Pioneer Savings Bank, Inc. will establish additional reserves for losses on loans, real estate owned and real estate held for investment of approximately $18 million for the quarter ended September 30, 1990. As a result, Pioneer anticipates reporting a loss for the quarter and fiscal year ended September 30, 1990 of approximately $16.7 million. Actual figures for the quarter and fiscal year will be reported following a review of these preliminary results by Pioneer's independent audit firm.

Ed G. Roughton, President, stated that the significant increase in these reserve levels resulted from an intensive review of Pioneer's loan portfolio, real estate owned and real estate held for investment, which continue to be adversely affected by the depressed real estate market in North Carolina. Roughton said, "The continuing softness in the real estate sector has adversely affected many projects and borrowers. These adverse conditions have been more severe and have lasted longer than we orignally anticipated, making the additional reserves both necessary and prudent. Our objective is to make up to date assessments of each of our higher risk loans and investment to determine the appropriate level of reserves needed to cover our potential exposure. However, we do recognize that the real estate markets are volatile and that conditions are changing rapidly, requiring continuous monitoring of events and adjustments of assumptions."

Pioneer also announced that as a result of these losses, its principal subsidiary, Pioneer Savings Bank, Inc. will no longer comply with all the minimum capital requirements imposed by the Office of Thrift Supervision. At September 30, 1990, the Bank's tangible capital ratio will approximate 1.7 percent, against a current minimum regulatory requirement of 1.5 percent, the Bank's core capital ratio will approximate 2.2 percent with the current minimum regulatory requirement being 3.0 percent, and the risk-based capital ratio will approximate 4.1 percent, which is below the current minimum regulatory requirement of 6.4 percent. These minimum capital requirements are expected to increase in the future, with the risk-based capital requirement increasing to 7.2 percent at December 31, 1990 and the core capital requirement increasing to an as yet undetermined level expected to range from 4 percent to 5 percent, in line with recent actions taken by commercial bank regulators.

As a result of noncompliance with these minimum capital requirements, the Bank is required to submit a capital plan to the Office of Thrift Supervision which may result in the implementation of additional limitations on growth, and restrictions on certain types of lending and investment activities and other aspects of the Bank's operations. Mr. Roughton noted, however, that in light of the previously announced supervisory agreements entered into between the Bank, the Office of Thrift Supervision and the Administrator of the North Carolina Savings Institutions Division, these limitations are not expected to materially affect the Bank's results of operations. The Bank may also become subject to a capital directive from the Office of Thrift Supervision, defining the required amount and timing of an increase in the Bank's capital ratios. Roughton noted that even though the Bank would not currently meet all capital requirements, it would still have approximately $14 million in capital. He further stated that customer deposits in the bank are insured up to the applicable $100,000 limits by the FDIC.

Pioneer also announced that it has entered into a settlement agreement with certain defendants in the previously disclosed litigation involving the Bank's ownership of what are commonly referred to as the Connor bonds. At September 30, 1990, the Bank owned $3.0 million of manufactured home collateralized bonds issued by a corporation now subject to bankruptcy proceedings, which are subject to reserves for losses on these bonds of $1.3 million. Payments to be received by Pioneer under the settlement agreement are expected to result in a pre-tax income recovery of approximately $700,000. Although this recovery is expected to occur in the first fiscal quarter of 1991, the actual timing and amount of the payment will depend upon the sale of the loans securing the bonds.

Pioneer Savings Bank, Inc. is currently the sixth largest thrift institution in North Carolina with assets in excess of $540 million and 26 banking offices in eastern North Carolina.

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Pioneer Bancorp, Inc. (NASDAQ: PSBN), headquartered in Rocky Mount, North Carolina, and Pioneer Savings Bank, Inc. announce the resignation of Theo H. Pitt, Jr., effective today, as Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer of Pioneer Bancorp, Inc., and Pioneer Savings Bank, Inc., of Rocky Mount, North Carolina.

J. Claude Mayo, Jr., Chairman of the Executive Committee, has been elected Chairman of the Baord and Lucius S. Jones has been elected Vice Chairman. In addition, Ed G. Roughton, President and Chief Operating Officer, has been appointed acting Chief Executive Officer.

Pitt said he will pursue new opportunities that have arisen in recent months in the financial services field. Additionally, Pitt said he expects to become more involved in North Carolina politics.

Pitt said his interest in politics, which is long-standing, has been heightened by a failure on the part of the federal government to deal effectively with an array of issues, including wrenching change in the comercial banking, savings institution and real estate sectors.

"My years with Pioneer have brought me into close personal contact with thousands of North Carolinians looking to improve theirs and their families' lives through homeownership," Pitt said. "This had brought me tremendous satisfaction over the years. Community banking -- serving the financial needs of individuals, families and the communities they comprise -- is a specialized and vital form of financial service that must be preserved."

Mayo recognized Pitt's long record of service to Pioneer and the growth achieved under his leadership. Since being named Chief Executive Officer in 1974, Pioneer has grown from an institution of $35 million in assets and one office to its present position as the 6th largest thrift in North Carolina.

Mayo further stated that the Board is committed to fully devoting its efforts to meeting the challenges facing Pioneer in these difficult economic times.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The following was released today by the New York Daily News:

The New York Daily News today filed a lawsuit seeking treble damages in excess of $150 million in the United States District Court in Manhattan charging the striking Drivers Union, 23 of its members and the Allied Printing Trades Council of New York State (the umbrella organization for the ten Daily News unions) with violating the federal racketeering laws (RICO) by conspiring to commit criminal acts of violence and intimidation designed to coerce the News either to accept a featherbedding settlement or to sell the paper to an ownership group that would include the striking unions.

In a 109 page complaint, the News described over 80 specific acts of violence and intimidation by union members, including arson, attempted murder, assault, robbery and vandalism, directed primarily against the 12,000 dealers who normally sell the Daily News to more than one million readers in the metropolitan area, as well as against the paper's advertisers and the paper itself.

The complaint details the "buyout plan" organized by Theodore Kheel, advisor to the Allied Printing Trades Council, and describes the pattern of intimidation and violence conducted to further that plan. The sets forth how Kheel -- "operating behind a facade of respectability -- embarked upon a plan and scheme to personally benefit from such campaign of violence and threats that he was condoning and facilitating."

The complaint also alleges that Michael Alvino, currently Drivers Union president, "ratified, condoned and incited the unlawful actions of the members of the Drivers Union," as did George McDonald, president of the Allied Trades Council.

The News' RICO complaint traces the "notorious history" of the leadership of the Drivers Union, including convictions or guilty pleas for crimes of extortion, income tax evasion, operating a union as a racketeering enterprise, kickbacks, payoffs and bribery. This includes the participation by Alvino in collecting bribes "paid as extortion" to two previous Drivers Union presidents. Each of these former presidents was convicted and sentenced to prison. Alvino avoided prosecution through a grant of immunity in exchange for his testimony.

The campaign of the Allied Council to acquire an equity interest in the News began early in 1990 at the start of negotiations with the unions over new labor contracts.

In February 1990 the unions authorized Kheel to begin an aggressive search for a buyer of the News.

The strike began suddenly during the night of Oct. 25. After the News implemented contingency plans for the production and distribution of the Daily News, members of the Drivers Union began a campaign of intimidation and violence that was, according to the complaint, "ratified, condoned and incited" by the Drivers Union. Its purpose was to coerce newspaper dealers, and then advertisers, to stop doing business with the News.

Within one week after the violence began, Kheel started actively to promote his buyout plan despite denials by the News that the paper was for sale. According to the complaint, as the violence against the innocent newspaper dealers continued, Kheel has persisted, up to the present date, in pressuring that the News be sold to the investor group that he claims to be assembling -- a group that includes the striking unions. As recently as Nov. 27, 1990, Kheel wrote to the President and Chief Executive Officer of Tribune Company (NYSE: TRB), the Daily News' parent company, stating, "With the Daily News on the verge of collapse, I am prompted once again to request a meeting with you on the sale of the Daily News."

The complaint alleges that the defendants engaged in extortion by planning and scheming to take advantage of the violence to coerce the Tribune Company into selling the News.

ROSEMEAD, CA (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Southern California Edison Company today announced the sale of $200 million 32-year, first and refunding mortgage bonds.

The company will use the proceeds from the financing for the redemption, repayment or retirement of outstanding indebtedness, the financing of construction expenditures, or for other general corporate purposes.

Fifty-seven million dollars of the proceeds will be used to refund the company's 11-1/2 percent Series 85C bonds, due in 2015 but callable in 1990 in accordance with terms of the issue. This action will save Edison's customers $600,000 annually.

The bonds, Series 90D, due 2022, were sold to a group of underwriters led by Goldman, Sachs & Co. The bonds were priced at 95.47 percent of the principal amount with a 9.25 percent coupon, resulting in a 9.71 percent annual cost to the company. Goldman's offer represented the lowest cost of the three competing bids received by the company.

The bonds are expected to be offered to the public by the underwriters at 96.00 percent of the principal amount, for a yield of 9.66 percent.

This offering is being made only through a prospectus, which may be obtained from the underwriters.

SAN DIEGO (NOV. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Great American Bank, a Federal Savings Bank (NYSE: GTA) today announced the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) has approved Great American's revised capital plan. Great American and Wells Fargo Bank, National Association (NYSE: WFC) have also received regulatory approvals from the OTS and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) to complete the sale to Wells Fargo of Great American's California retail branch network and certain other assets. Wells Fargo previously received approval to complete the transaction from the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC). Phase one of the proposed transaction is expected to be completed after the close of business on Nov. 30, 1990.

"We are pleased to have received regulatory approval of Great American's revised capital plan and the transaction with Wells Fargo," said Robert L. Kemper, Chairman, Chief Executive Officer and President of Great American. "We welcome the opportunity to continue operating as an independent, stockholder owned enterprise. Management will work diligently to comply with the terms and conditions of our newly approved capital plan."

Pursuant to a condition contained in the OTS orders approving the Wells Fargo transaction and Great American's capital plan, Great American consented to the issuance by the OTS on Nov. 29, 1990 of a cease and desist order. The order mandates compliance by Great American with its revised capital plan and imposes certain additional operating restrictions on Great American. The order replaces the more extensive, detailed operating restrictions imposed on Great American in July 1990.

The order provides that a material failure to comply with the revised capital plan without prior written consent of the Regional Director of the OTS, will be deemed a material violation of the order. Other events that would constitute such a violation, if they were to occur without the consent of the Regional Director, include, among others: (1) failure to consummate either or both phases of the Wells Fargo transaction, (2) a decrease in the level of involvement in the day-to-day activities of Great American by Kemper or a successor approved by the Regional Director, (3) operation of Great American in a manner determined by the Regional Director to expose the Savings Association Insurance Fund (SAIF) of the FDIC to an inappropriate level of credit, interest rate or basis risk, and (4) making any capital distribution, including the payment of cash dividends or redemption of subordinated debt.

A material violation of the order or the capital plan would subject Great American to the appointment of a conservator or receiver or a number of lesser sanctions, including submission to a merger or acquisition of Great American negotiated on its behalf by the OTS, election to the board of directors of individuals recommended by the OTS or the reimposition of an extensive list of operating restrictions of the types Great American was subject to from July 1990 until approval of the revised capital plan. In addition, a material violation of the revised capital plan would constitute an "unsafe and unsound practice" under applicable federal statutes and could result in termination of the approval of the plan.

Great American's revised capital plan reflects the anticipated effect of the transaction with Wells Fargo and describes Great American's plans for achieving compliance with regulatory capital standards by Dec. 31, 1994.

After completion of the Wells Fargo transaction, Great American will continue to operate 81 branches in Arizona, Washington and Colorado and will continue to make single family real estate loans in California and in the three states where its branches are located.

MOSCOW (NOV. 29) TASS - THE SOVIET UNION AND GERMANY HAVE BEGUN JOINT WORK TO DEVELOP A SATELLITE COMMUNICATION SYSTEM. RESEARCH RELATED TO THE FIRST SUCH PROJECT ENDED IN SUCCESS.

REPRESENTATIVES OF GERMANY'S ANT BOSCH TELEKOM, THE SOVIET GLAVKOSMOS SPACE AGENCY, THE SOVIET RESEARCH-AND-PRODUCTION ASSOCIATION OF APPLIED MECHANICS AND THE RADIO RESEARCH-AND- PRODUCTION ASSOCIATION GATHERED IN THE GERMAN CITY OF BACKNANG TO DISCUSS FURTHER STEPS IN THEIR COOPERATION.

THE ROMANTIS PROJECT WAS INITIATED BY THE INTERSPUTNIK INTERNATIONAL ORGANISATION.

LEV KANTOR OF THE RADIO ASSOCIATION TOLD TASS THAT THE RESULTS OF THE JOINT RESEARCH OPENED THE POSSIBILITY OF QUICKLY IMPLEMENTING THE PROJECT.

"AS COMPARED WITH OTHER NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL SYSTEMS, ROMANTIS REQUIRES MINIMAL INVESTMENTS," HE SAID. "THE PROJECT FULLY MEETS THE REQUIREMENTS OF THE WORLD ADMINISTRATIVE RADIO CONFERENCE, WHICH ENSURES THE PLACING OF SPACESHIPS INTO ANY COORDINATED POINT OF ORBIT."

THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE PROJECT IS TO BEGIN EARLY NEXT YEAR, KANTOR SAID. AT FIRST, THE PARTNERS WILL SIGN AN AGREEMENT ON COOPERATION, THE PRODUCTION AND SUPPLY OF COMMUNICATION SATELLITES AND GROUND STATIONS.

AFTER THAT, THEY PLAN TO SIGN AN AGREEMENT ON THE JOINT OPERATION OF THE SYSTEM.

MINSK (NOV. 29) TASS - THE BYELORUSSIAN TRADE UNION FEDERATION HAS ISSUED A STATEMENT OPPOSING THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT'S DECISION TO RAISE PRICES ON GOODS THAT ARE NOT BASIC OR LUXURY GOODS.

"THE IDEA TO SWITCH TO A FREE MARKET PRICE FORMATION WITHOUT NORMALIZING FINANCES AND MONEY CIRCULATION AND ELABORATING A SECURE SYSTEM FOR THE SOCIAL PROTECTION OF THE POPULATION IS ERRONEOUS," FEDERATION CHAIRMAN VLADIMIR GONCHARIK TOLD TASS.

"FEARS THAT ATTEMPTS WILL BE MADE TO COPE WITH INFLATION AND NEUTRALIZE MONEY BY MEANS OF DECLINING LIVING STANDARDS WERE NOT GROUNDLESS. PRICES HAVE BEEN RAISED," HE SAID.

"THE FEDERATION BELIEVES THAT IT IS NECESSARY TO REDUCE CONSIDERABLY THE LIST OF GOODS ON WHICH PRICES HAVE INCREASED AND DETERMINE A LIMIT FOR PRICE HIKES. THE REPUBLIC SHOULD HAVE A LAW GUARANTEEING A MINIMUM OF SUBSISTENCE AND RULES FOR INDEXING PEOPLE'S INCOMES DURING INFLATION AND PRICE HIKES," HE SAID.

THE STATEMENT HAS BEEN SENT TO THE BYELORUSSIAN PARLIAMENT AND GOVERNMENT. THE FEDERATION ALSO EXPRESSED HOPE THAT THEIR POSITION AS REGARDS THE SOCIAL PROTECTION OF WORKING PEOPLE WILL BE SUPPORTED BY DEPUTIES AT THE BYELORUSSIAN PARLIAMENT'S SESSION, SCHEDULED FOR DECEMBER.

MOSCOW (NOV 29) TASS - WAYS TO SOLVE ETHNIC, REGIONAL, LABOUR AND SOCIAL CONFLICTS WERE IN THE FOCUS OF THE SOVIET-AMERICAN SCHOLARLY CONFERENCE THAT OPENED AT THE SOVIET INSTITUTE OF US AND CANADIAN STUDIES TODAY.

THE AMERICAN SIDE IS REPRESENTED AT THE CONFERENCE BY HARVARD UNIVERSITY SPECIALISTS SCOTT BROWN AND WILLIAM URY, ONE OF THE AUTHORS OF THE BOOK "GETTING TO YES, NEGOTIATING AGREEMENT WITHOUT GIVING IN" -- A BESTSELLING BOOK IN THE 1980'S, PUBLISHED IN RUSSIAN BY THE SOVIET NAUKA PUBLISHERS THIS YEAR.

THE SOVIET SIDE IS REPRESENTED BY EXPERTS AT THE LEADING SOVIET RESEARCH CENTRES, RUSSIAN PARLIAMENT DEPUTIES AND SOVIET FOREIGN MINISTRY OFFICIALS.

THE TWO-DAY CONFERENCE WILL SEEK TO IDENTIFY A COMMON APPROACH TO THE SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES -- FROM THE MOMENT A CONFLICT SITUATION ARISES TO THE MOMENT WHEN THE CONFLICT ERUPTS IN AN OPEN CLASH THAT CANNOT BE RESOLVED WITHOUT AN INTERMEDIARY, AND SOMETIMES REQUIRES THE USE OF FORCE TO RIDE BETWEEN THE CONFLICTING PARTIES.

SOVIET SCIENTISTS ARE PARTICULARLY INTERESTED IN HOW TO SOLVE INTER-ETHNIC CONFLICTS, ALTHOUGH MANY OF THEM SOUNDED PESSIMISTIC TODAY WHEN SPEAKING ABOUT PROSPECTS FOR SETTLEMENT IN THE SOVIET UNION.

ACCORDING TO PROFESSOR URY, THIS ATTITUDE IS UNDERSTANDABLE, TAKING INTO ACCOUNT THE PRESENT SITUATION IN THE SOVIET UNION, BUT IT IS NOT REASONABLE. HE TOLD THE CONFERENCE THAT CONFLICTS, INCLUDING INTER-ETHNIC, HAVE ALWAYS BEEN PART OF MANKIND'S LIFE. THEIR EMERGENCE IS UNAVOIDABLE IN A COUNTRY THAT HAS EMBARKED ON THE ROAD TOWARDS DEMOCRATISATION AND DECENTRALISATION. THERE IS NO USE DRAMATISING THE SITUATION. IT IS WISER TO LOOK FOR A SOLUTION WITH THE HELP OF SCIENTIFIC METHODS, BASED ON STUDIES OF WORLD EXPERIENCE, PROFESSOR URY SAID.

"THE PROBLEM OF CONFLICT RESOLUTION," VADIM UDALOV, FIRST SECRETARY OF THE SOVIET FOREIGN MINISTRY'S RESEARCH-COORDINATION CENTRE, TOLD TASS, "IS ACQUIRING SPECIAL IMPORTANCE NOW, BECAUSE FOLLOWING THE END OF THE COLD WAR, THE WORLD'S STRUCTURE IS CHANGING AND COMPLETELY NEW PROBLEMS ARE BEING FOREGROUNDED -- REGIONAL, NATIONAL AND ETHNIC.

"OUR CENTRE IS DEVISED TO RENDER PRACTICAL ASSISTANCE TO SOVIET DIPLOMACY IN SOLVING A VARIETY OF CONFLICTS, INCLUDING INTERNAL.

"WE ALSO WORK OUT RECOMMENDATIONS FOR FOREIGN MINISTRY DEPARTMENTS DEALING WITH RELATIONS BETWEEN THE CENTRE AND SOVIET REPUBLICS.

"AMERICAN THEORETICAL STUDIES OF CONFLICTS ARE OF GREAT INTEREST TO US, AS WE ARE TAKING THE VERY FIRST STEPS IN MASTERING "CONFLICTOLOGY'. I HOPE THAT THE EXPERIENCE AMASSED BY OUR AMERICAN COLLEAGUES WILL HELP US FIND EFFECTIVE SOLUTIONS TO OUR PROBLEMS."

ANOTHER PARTICIPANT IN THE CONFERENCE, MOSCOW LINGUISTIC UNIVERSITY'S PROFESSOR ALEXANDER PORTNYAGIN, IS INTERESTED IN METHODS OF TEACHING THE THEORY OF CONFLICT SETTLEMENT. HE SAID A COURSE OF LECTURES ON THE SUBJECT WILL SOON BE DELIVERED IN HIS UNIVERSITY.

MOSCOW (NOV. 29) TASS - A TOTAL OF 1,061,761 CRIMES HAVE BEEN COMMITTED IN THE RUSSIAN FEDERATION OVER THE FIRST TEN MONTHS OF 1990, 14.1 PERCENT MORE THAN OVER THE SAME PERIOD IN 1989. THE CRIME RATE HAS GROWN IN ALMOST ALL AUTONOMOUS REPUBLICS, TERRITORIES AND REGIONS OF THE REPUBLIC, RUSSIAN DEPUTY INTERIOR MINISTER GENERAL VIKTOR YERIN TOLD A NEWS CONFERENCE HERE TODAY.

YERIN IS HEADING THE CRIMINAL POLICE SERVICE, RECENTLY FOUNDED IN THE RUSSIAN INTERIOR MINISTRY.

HE NOTED THAT THE NUMBER OF GRAVE CRIMES HAS GROWN BY 13.5 PERCENT. ONE OF EVERY SIX OF SERIOUS CRIMES WAS COMMITTED BY MINORS, AND ONE OF EVERY TEN -- BY ORGANIZED GROUPS, HE SAID.

OVER 439,000 CRIMES HAVE BEEN SOLVED SINCE THE BEGINNING OF 1990, OR 10.3 MORE THAN IN 1989. RUSSIAN POLICE HAVE INVESTIGATED SOME 129,000 CRIMES IN THE ECONOMIC SPHERE. ONE EVERY TEN OF EMBEZZLEMENTS WERE OF LARGE AND EXTREMELY LARGE SUMS OF MONEY, HE SAID.

THE SOVIET INTERIOR MINISTRY, THE RUSSIAN PROCURATOR'S OFFICE AND THE SOVIET KGB ARE CURRENTLY REALISING A PROGRAMME TO COMBAT ORGANISED CRIME. THE PROGRAMME FOR 1990-1991, ADOPTED IN THE BEGINNING OF THE YEAR, FOCUSES ON IDENTIFYING SHADOW ECONOMY DEALERS, CRIMINALS AND DRUG TRAFFICKING LEADERS AND MOB BOSSES WITH INTER-REGIONAL TIES, YERIN SAID.

SINCE THE FORMATION OF SPECIALISED UNITS TO COMBAT ORGANISED CRIME, SERVICEMEN HAVE UNCOVERED 915 ORGANISED CRIMINAL GROUPS AND 4,861 CRIMES. THEY HAVE SEIZED A LARGE AMOUNT OF AMMUNITION AND EXPLOSIVES, 483 KILOGRAMS OF DRUGS, MONEY AND VALUABLES WORTH 9,800 THOUSAND ROUBLES. THE CREATION OF SPECIALISED CRIMINAL POLICE UNITS WILL HELP ACCOMPLISH THIS WORK, YERIN SAID.

(NOV. 29) UPI - The U-N Security Council prepares to vote Thursday on a resolution imposing a January 15th deadline for Iraq to withdraw its forces from Kuwait. The resolution would give Iraq- quote- ''a final opportunity, as a pause of good will'' to leave Kuwait before the U-S-led multinational force would use ''all necessary means'' to oust Iraqi forces.

President Bush has signed a mammoth housing bill that gives state and local governments a much larger role in making housing decisions. Declaring ''the status quo of centralized bureaucracy is NOT working for the people,'' Bush signed the 24-point-eight-BILLION-dollar measure during a signing ceremony at the White House. It creates 360-thousand more units of affordable housing.

In Los Angeles, the U-S Justice Department has joined a federal ''whistleblower'' lawsuit against a Teledyne subsidiary. The suit, unsealed Wednesday in U-S District Court, alleges Teledyne Systems overcharged the government by tens of Millions of dollars on defense subcontracts in the 1980's.

A broadcast report says the U-S attorney's office in Brooklyn, New York, will prosecute reputed mob boss John Gotti in the killing of reputed Gambino crime family boss Paul Castellano. Castellano was shot to death in December 1985 outside a midtown Manhattan restaurant.

Lebanon's government has set next Monday as the final date for a complete army deployment in the capital... a move apparently intended to speed up the establishment of a militia-free Beirut. Wednesday's announcement appeared designed to pressure the Christian militia, which has appeared to be slowing down its withdrawal of gunmen and equipment from east Beirut.

In El Salvador, military officials say urban guerrillas attacked a prison north of the capital of San Salvador... killing four people and wounding seven. Leftist rebels have stepped up their military action in nine of the country's 14 provinces in an offensive aimed at pressuring the government into making concessions at peace talks.

(NOV. 29) UPI - Two former top military officials say the Bush administration should give the economic embargo against Iraq more time to work before sending U-S forces into combat in the Persian Gulf. Retired admiral William Crowe told a Senate panel Wednesday- ''We should give sanctions a fair chance before we discard them. I personally believe they will bring to his knees ultimately.'' And retired Air Force General David Jones also urged caution, saying throwing 400-thousand soldiers into the region is a high-risk tactic that could unnecessarily cause fighting.

The White House acknowledges that the latest economic news indicates the nation is in a slowdown. The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that the nation's total output of goods and services increased a revised one-point-seven percent in the third quarter... while orders for durable goods jumped three-point-six percent in October. Washington economist Jean Sundrla says the numbers are obviously cause for concern, but he doesn't see- quote- ''a screaming recession here.''

Embattled Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry and his wife, Effi, have split up. A spokeswoman says Mrs. Barry and the couple's son have moved out of the home she shared with the 54-year-old mayor during their 12-year marriage. The split comes just one month after the three-term mayor was sentenced on a cocaine possession conviction. Observers say Barry's trial on drug possession charges strained the marriage, particularly as witness after witness testified about his incessant womanizing.

A suburban Chicago man has set a record for flying around the world on commercial flights. 32-year-old Trey Urbahn of Mount Prospect, Illinois, says the adventure took him 102 hours and he had to endure a missed connection in Cairo and bad weather in the Midwest. Urbahn says the hardest part about the whole journey was- quote- ''going from sitting in one position for a long time and then turning into a marathon runner when I got to the airport to change planes.''

In Fort Meyers, Florida, investigators say a police dog blamed for biting a child earlier is also to blame for the death of a deputy's infant daughter. A Sheriff's spokesman says the German shepherd dog apparently lifted the two-week-old girl from her crib and dropped her on the floor... killing her. The spokesman says the dog lived with the family. There were NO signs the infant had been mauled. The dog was impounded at a veterinary clinic pending results of the investigation.

(NOV. 29) UPI - The Quebec Nordiques have ended a scary episode that began before Halloween.

Ron Tugnutt stopped 40 shots Wednesday night and Joe Sakic scored his 13th and 14th goals of the season, helping the Nordiques snap a club record 17-game winless streak with a 4-3 win over the Hartford Whalers.

Jamie Baker and Tony McKegney also scored for Quebec, 4-18-5, which had not won since beating Detroit 5-3 on Oct. 20. Back then, kids were thinking about Halloween costumes and Oakland and Cincinnati were still playing baseball.

During the winless spell, Quebec had been outscored 84-35. Winnipeg owns the NHL record for longest winless streak, having gone 30 straight in 1980.

Bobby Holik scored a pair of goals and Kevin Dineen also tallied for the Whalers, 9-11-4, who have dropped two in a row after running off a six-game unbeaten streak.

Tugnutt turned aside 28 shots over the final two periods, but Hartford closed within one on a pair of goals by Dineen and Holik in the final five minutes.

Quebec opened a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Baker and McKegney. Baker, a rookie, scored a short-handed goal from the slot at 2:35 when Claude Loiselle's centering pass from the left circle hit Baker's skate and skimmed under goaltender Daryl Reaugh's right pad.

The Nordiques made it 2-0 at 14:33 when Guy Lafleur's centering pass from the behind the net caromed through a maze of players in the slot. McKegny, who was lying on the ice after a check, was credited for the score when the puck bounced in off his helmet.

Sakic hiked the Quebec advantage to 3-0 just 24 seconds into the second period when Sakic found a seam in the Hartford defense after taking Mat Sundin's pass in the neutral zone and scored on a breakaway.

Holik put Hartford on the board at 11:20 on the power play. Holik, who was assisted by Kevin Dineen and Doug Crossman, worked down the left boards and slipped around Quebec defenseman Joe Cirella and scored from the slot.

Sakic completed the Quebec scoring at 9:18 of the third period on Sundin's second assist when he tallied from the slot.

Dineen brought Hartford within 4-2 at 15:50 and Holik's second of the game, at 19:37 on a power play, closed the game's scoring.

In other games, Washington blasted New York 6-3, Buffalo edged Montreal 2-1, Philadelphia tied New Jersey 5-5, and Winnipeg knotted Calgary 2-2.

-- AROUND THE NHL --

Capitals 6, Rangers 3

At New York, rookie Peter Bondra scored his first NHL hat trick, helping Washington snap the Rangers' 10-game unbeaten streak. Bondra, from Czechoslovakia, scored a goal in each period, twice connecting in the first minute. He also assisted on Steve Leach's third-period power- play goal. Mike Gartner scored two goals, one short-handed, for New York.

Sabres 2, Canadiens 1

At Montreal, Mikko Makela scored early in the final period, lifting Buffalo. Canadiens' forward Russ Courtnall lost the puck in his own zone to Dale Hawerchuk, who fed a pass to Makela. Montreal had tied the score 1-1 at 2:36 of the second period on a 40-foot drive by Tom Chorske. Buffalo's Dave Andreychuk scored the first goal of the game.

Devils 5, Flyers 5, (OT)

At East Rutherford, N.J., Rick Tocchet scored his second goal with 49 seconds left in the third period, capping a three-goal Philadelphia rally. The second-place Flyers extended their unbeaten streak to five games and pulled within three points of the first-place Rangers in the Patrick Division.

Flames 2, Jets 2

At Winnipeg, Manitoba, Ed Olczyk scored a power-play goal 38 seconds into the third period, lifting the Jets. Olczyk, capitalizing on a two- man advantage, converted Phil Housley's rebound to cap a rally from a 2- 0 deficit. Joe Nieuwendyk scored two short-handed goals for Calgary.

(NOV. 29) UPI - Sometimes you get one chance to be a hero. Wednesday night, Beau Reid got two.

Reid, who missed a layup only seconds earlier, buried a three-pointer with three seconds remaining Wednesday night to lift Nebraska to a 71-69 upset victory over No. 5 Michigan State.

The Cornhuskers were leading 68-67, when Reid worked free and missed the layup with 45 seconds. The miss was magnified when on the Spartans' next possession, Matt Steigenga dunked off an alley-oop lob from Steve Smith with 14 seconds to go, giving Michigan State a 69-68 advantage.

The Cornhuskers called timeout and set up Reid, who calmly drilled a 23-footer.

''I wasn't going to blow another opportunity,'' said Reid, a 6-foot-7 senior who finished with 8 points. ''I knew I was going to shoot it when I saw Steigenga drop off me to guard Rich (King) inside.''

Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote said the Spartans made a defensive error on Reid's jumper.

''We made a mistake trying to take the lob away from King (Nebraska's 7-foot-2-inch center) and Matt was too far off Reid,'' Heathcote said.

Michigan State, 1-1, called a timeout, but Clifford Scales broke up the Spartans' inbounds pass and dribbled out the clock as time expired.

For the Cornhuskers, 3-1, it was their second straight win over a team from the Big Ten conference, following a 100-73 thumping over Illinois in the San Juan, Puerto Rico Classic last weekend.

King led four Nebraska players in double figures with 13 points while Smith, an All-America, topped all scorers with 27.

The Spartans lost the game at the foul line, making just seven of 19 attempts and missing three straight in the final 2:10.

''In a close game, those free throws have to go in,'' Heathcote said. ''We ought to be able to step up and make those.

''We had all the opportunities we could ask for to win the game, but we just didn't capitalize. I think we're a pretty good basketball team, but probably not a great team.''

Nebraska Coach Danny Nee said: ''It's as good a win as I can ever remember. We needed something like this. It's good for Nebraska basketball.''

-- AROUND THE NCAA --

Elsewhere in the UPI Top 25, No. 11 Indiana edged Notre Dame 70-67, No. 12 Ohio State destroyed Delaware St. 116-67, co-No. 14 Pittsburgh nipped Siena 82-80; co-No. 16 Georgia crushed Western Kentucky 124-65 and co-No. 16 Oklahoma downed Texas A&M 81-65.

At South Bend, Ind., Calbert Chaney scored all of his 15 points in the second half to rally the Hoosiers over the Fighting Irish. Indiana, 3-1, went on a 14-4 run in the second half to take its first lead of the game, 55-53, with 6:46 to go. Notre Dame, 2-3, had a chance to send the game into overtime but Elmer Bennett's 35-footer went off the rim at the buzzer. The Irish were led by Daimon Sweet's 19 points.

At Columbus, Ohio, sophomore Jim Jackson scored 29 points to lead six Buckeyes in double figures. Ohio State, 2-0, set a single-game school record for points with the rout. Tom Davis led Delaware State, 1-1, with 29 points. Perry Carter added 15 points and 13 rebounds for the Buckeyes, who led from the opening tap.

At Colonie, N.Y., Pittsburgh's Jason Matthews nailed a three-pointer and free throw in the final 1:09 and the Panthers held off Siena, which upset Pittsburgh two years ago. Bobby Martin led Pittsburgh, 3-0, with 21 points and 12 rebounds. Siena, 2-2, was led by Marc Brown's 22 points.

At Athens, Ga., Jody Patton scored 21 points, making six 3-pointers to lead the Bulldogs in a laugher. The lopsided triumph marked the second-highest point total ever scored by a Georgia team. Litterial Green added 20 for the 3-0 Bulldogs. In surrendering the most points in school history, the Hilltoppers, 0-2, endured the school's worst loss.

At College Station, Texas, Kermit Holmes' 27 points helped solve Texas A&M's patient approach and helped the Sooners spoil the home debut of A&M Coach Kermit Davis. Terrence Mullins added 15 points for the Sooners while the Aggies were led by Shedrick Anderson with 14. Oklahoma, which fell in the second round of the preseason NIT to Arkansas, climbed to 3-1. Texas A&M is 1-2.

In other games: Kentucky defeated Cincinnati, 75-71, behind Reggie Hanson's 20 points; North Carolina State routed Charleston Southern, 135-80 as Chris Corchiani scored a career-high 36 points and added 10 assists. Rodney Monroe chipped in 25 for the Wolfpack.

Eric Riley and Tony Tolbert scored 18 each to power Michigan to a 72- 63 win over Central Michigan; Walt Williams' 20 points enabled Maryland to post a 72-59 victory over Southern California. Harold Miner paced USC with 22.

And it was: Ball State 100, Xavier 94; Pennsylvania 66, Southern Methodist 59.

(NOV. 29) UPI - Foreign ministers from the world's most powerful nations gathered in New York Thursday to vote on a U.N. resolution authorizing the use of force against Iraq, while pressure for patience mounted in Washington.

The vote in the U.N. Security Council would be the 12th and most serious taken since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, and appeared to have at least tacit support from all five permanent members and a majority of the council's 15 member states.

The resolution would allow the U.S.-led multinational force assembled in the Persian Gulf to attack Iraq and Iraqi-occupied Kuwait if Baghdad's forces do not withdraw by Jan. 15.

The Security Council took another step against Iraq Wednesday, condemning atrocities committed against Kuwaitis and placing Kuwati's civil records in U.N. custody.

The council voted 15-0 to adopt a resolution that ''condemns the attempts by Iraq to alter the demographic composition'' of Kuwait and to destroy the country's civil records.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar was asked to take over the records of the Kuwaiti government and its population of nearly 2 million, which is composed of 39 percent of ethnic Kuwaitis, 39 percent of other Arabs and the rest from India, Iran and Pakistan.

U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering, who presides over the council for the month of November, said Iraq's ''records of rapes, plunder and murders posed a direct challenge to the United Nations.''

''Iraq's crime is deepening,'' Pickering said.

But while the rhetoric became more bellicose in New York, patience was the word in Washington, where two retired chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff urged the Bush administration to give economic sanctions a chance to work before attacking Iraq.

And that position, which is becoming a consensus position at least among congressional Democrats, picked up a powerful backer - Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., of the Senate Appropriations Committee, who can significantly influence defense spending and thus foreign policy. Byrd sided with the military men testifying before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The committee is holding hearings on the administration's response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and President Bush's vow that if U.N.- sponsored military sanctions do not cause Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein to withdraw his occupying forces, they will be forced out by military action.

Later, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger told the panel sanctions may not have the desired effect and could lead Iraq to offer to negotiate rather than withdraw from Kuwait. He said over time there might also be a lessening of international resolve.

Quoting military sources, NBC News reported Wednesday that if the United States decides to go to war, a five- to- seven-day air assault will be followed by ground attacks.

''Air assault units from the Marines - the 101st and 82nd Airborne - expect to be in the first wave after the aerial bombardment. Those units are now edging north toward Kuwait,'' the network reported.

''We should give sanctions a fair chance before we discard them,'' said retired Adm. William Crowe, who stepped down as chairman of the Joint Chiefs in September 1989. ''I personally believe they will bring (Saddam Hussein) to his knees ultimately, but I would be the first to admit that is a speculative judgment.''

''If in fact the sanctions will work in 12 to 18 months instead of six months, the trade-off of avoiding war with its attendant sacrifices and uncertainties would, in my estimation, be more than worth it,'' he said.

Retired Air Force Gen. David Jones, who held the job from 1978 to 1982, told the committee that President Bush should ask Congress for authorization to use military force, a move he said would prove to be a unifying factor in national opinion about the crisis.

The State Department attempted to answer questions about the effect the embargo was having on Iraq, saying the answer apparently was yes but they are not hurting enough to damage President Saddam Hussein.

''We know that 3 1/2 months after sanctions were imposed, they are beginning to have an impact on Iraq in various specific areas,'' said State Department spokesman Richard Boucher. ''For example, tires are in short supply, and shortages of raw materials, spare parts, lubricants and chemicals are hampering industrial operations.''

Boucher added a big ''but'' to that assessment: ''We have no assurance, however, when the embargo will achieve the objectives of the international community. Saddam Hussein has not given any indication that he is concerned about the hardships faced by his people or his country's dismal economic prospects.''

Meanwhile in Tripoli, Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi said Wednesday he failed in an attempt to arrange a meeting between Saddam and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia and therefore is ''no longer interested in the gulf crisis.''

And in the Middle East, with the Gulf crisis and a sluggish economy as a backdrop, Egypt held parliamentary elections Thursday with President Hosni Mubarak's ruling National Democratic Party virtually assured victory following a peaceful campaign.

TOKYO (NOV. 29) UPI - Typhoon Page, weakening but still packing 78 mph center winds, began to buffet remote Pacific islands Thursday as it churned over the Pacific toward central Japan.

There were no immediate reports of casualties or damage.

''The possibility is very high that the typhoon will land on central Japan Friday afternoon,'' said a spokesman for the government's Meteorological Agency. ''Even if it veers off, it will come very close to the Pacific coast of the Honshu main island.''

Page, the 28th typhoon spawned over the Pacific this year, began to buffet remote islands off Okinawa, site of major U.S. military installations, Thursday, disrupting inter-island ferry and air service, transport officials said.

The officials said 10 scheduled flights between Okinawa and nearby islands were canceled while most of ferry operations were suspended.

Public offices and schools were closed on the island of Minami- Daitojima, about 870 miles southwest of Tokyo, the officials said.

The Meteorological Agency said Page, located about 87 miles southwest of Minami-Daitojima at noon Thursday, was moving northeast at 18 mph.

The agency said heavy downpours are expected to lash wide areas along the Pacific coast as the typhoon approaches.

HONG KONG (NOV. 29) UPI - A French national was robbed of about $836,000 worth of jewels Thursday at Hong Kong's Kai Tak International Airport, police said.

The 38-year-old man, whose identity has not been released, apparently set a canvas bag containing jewels worth $836,000 by his seat in the airport lobby and failed to notice when a passerby walked off with the pouch.

''The man went to the check-in counter and said he was missing one of his bags '' a police spokeswoman said. ''Probably he was a French jeweler, but we don't know where he was flying and at this point we have no suspects.''

(NOV. 29) UPI - Around the world... Around the clock... U-P-I brings the latest news. ..

The countdown clocks are ticking at Cape Canaveral for Sunday's blastoff of the space shuttle Columbia. The orbiter's seven-man crew is scheduled to fly to Florida from Houston late tonight to prepare for takeoff on a long-delayed astronomy flight. The launch is six months behind schedule because of crippling fuel leaks.

President Bush signed a mammoth housing bill yesterday, a bill which he says will give state and local governments a much larger role in making housing decisions. The 24-point-eight BILLION-dollar measure creates 360-thousand more units of affordable housing. Bush said ''We want public housing to become a springboard for independence, not a bottomless pit for dependency.''

The Senate ethics committee continues its hearings today in Washington in the influence-peddling case against the so-called Keating Five senators. The case suffered a setback yesterday when a key witness in the case against the senators conceded that only one of the lawmakers ''did something wrong'' during a 1987 meeting central to the influence- peddling charges.

Police in Burbank, California, are blaming the suicide death of an 89-year-old man on the failure of the scandal-ridden Lincoln savings and loan. Police say Anthony Elliott killed himself because he lost his life savings in the thrift collapse. Police say Elliott had invested 200- thousand dollars in worthless junk bonds.

A panel of health care experts is warning that the quality of hospital services may suffer by 1994 because of the worsening financial situation in the health industry. The Healthcare Financial Management Association cited falling profitability and a weakened ability to pay for existing debt as signs of trouble ahead for hospitals.

In Riverside, California, prosecutors say they won't file criminal charges in the bizarre case of a woman whose head was severed and frozen in a process called cryonics in hopes she could be brought back to life with a new body. Assistant District Attorney Don Inskeep says there ''simply wasn't enough'' evidence to prosecute.

(NOV. 29) UPI - The worst blizzard this season slammed Minnesota with howling winds and cold temperatures while warm weather records were set in the East Thursday during the final hours of an extremely late Indian summer.

More wet weather struck soggy Seattle with wind, flood and winter storm advisories posted on rivers, along the coast and in the mountains of the stricken state.

The warnings were prompted by a strong cold front approaching the Washington coast that brought heavy rain and winds reaching 48 mph and was expected to dump as much as 18 inches of snow on the Cascade and Olympic mountains.

The brief heavy rains leading the storm posed a danger to rivers in western Washington that flooded over the weekend causing millions of dollars of damage.

Blinding winds of up to 80 mph rocketed across Montana, knocking five freight cars carrying household appliances off their track Wednesday in the worst blizzard yet of the season, authorities said.

No one was hurt in the mishap, which occurred about 4:30 p.m. (MST) 5 miles west of Browning, a town of about 3,000 people located about 30 miles from the Canadian border.

''It's definitely the worst blizzard we've had this season,'' said Sue Grimm, a dispatcher for the Glacier County Sheriff's Department in Cut Bank.

To the east, records for warm weather were set in several cities in the early morning hours Thursday, sometimes just minutes before a cold front pushed through the region, sending temperatures spiraling toward the freezing mark.

Records were set in Boston, Atlantic City, N.J., New York City, Hartford, Conn., and as far north as Portland, Maine, where the thermometer reached 60 degrees, and there have been 10 days this month with temperatures of at least 60 degrees, breaking a record of eight set in 1975.

The National Weather Service in Atlantic City said the thermometer reached a record 68 degrees just 14 minutes before a cold front hit the area, sending temperatures crashing toward freezing. Lows were expected in the 20s Friday evening.

BEIJING (NOV. 29) UPI - China bristled Thursday over Western reports that prominent dissidents have been charged with major political crimes, berating the West for ''inappropriate'' concern over China's human rights situation.

''I think it is inappropriate to interfere in developing countries' internal affairs with the excuse of human rights,'' Foreign Ministry spokesman Li Zhaoxing said at a news briefing.

Li was responding to a question as to whether Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen would discuss human rights issues during his meeting in Washington this weekend with President George Bush.

Qian's U.S. visit, tied to the U.S.-led campaign to oust Iraqi troops from Kuwait, is the most overt breach to date of U.S. sanctions imposed after the June 4, 1989, Beijing massacre that crushed China's democracy movement.

But Li sidestepped the question and launched instead into a diatribe against ''some people in the West and in press circles'' for focusing on what many in the West regard as an abysmal human rights record in China.

''I don't understand why you aren't interested in so many other issues taking place in Chinese society,'' Li told reporters.

Li's remarks appeared to be a calculated response to recent Western press reports that a group of dissidents pegged as core agitators in the 1989 Tiananmen Spring democracy movement have been charged with counterrevolution or sedition.

Two jailed activists, editor Wang Juntao, 32, and economist Chen Ziming, 38, face imminent trial on both offenses, among the most serious under Chinese law.

University lecturers Liu Suli and Liu Xiaobo and veteran dissident Ren Wanding also face trial on the single charge of spreading counterrevolutionary propaganda.

Notice of the charges was transmitted to the dissidents' families, who contacted foreign reporters earlier this week.

Li refused to confirm or deny the reports, claiming he had ''never heard of the matter'' and urging those voicing objections to China's human rights record to ''read the Constitution and the laws of China.''

The vaguely defined crime of counterrevolution in China is punishable by at least five to 10 years in prison, while the more serious charge of intent to overthrow the communist government can carry a lengthy prison term or even death in extreme cases.

China may also have been responding to a lengthy letter from the human rights group Amnesty International to senior Chinese leaders.

The letter, sent to Chinese President Yang Shangkun and Premier Li Peng by telex on Nov. 7, listed several prominent jailed democracy activists and called on the Chinese government to account for their cases.

PARIS (NOV. 29) UPI - France said Thursday it has decided to reinforce its military contingent in Chad at a time when Libya, Chad's northern neighbor, is reportedly mobilizing its armed forces.

''This reinforcement is designed to improve the security of our troops and to assure, in the worst case, the protection of our citizens, '' the Foreign Ministry said in a statement.

A Libyan-backed rebellion has threatened the government of Chadian President Hissein Habre, who narrowly escaped capture by rebel forces last week after he went to the war zone near the Sudanese border to the east to take personal command of his troops.

The French Defense Ministry said a company of the 2nd Foreign Legion Parachutist Regiment would be sent to Ndjamena to bolster the 1,000 French troops based permanently in the former French colony.

The Washington Times reported Thursday that Libya had begun mobilizing its armed forces and removing large stockpiles of weapons from storage.

The newspaper, citing Bush administration sources, said the mobilization, photographed by U.S. space satellites over the past two weeks, could be related to Libya's 15-year-old conflict with Chad. Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi has been supporting rebels seeking the overthrow of the Chadian government.

GENEVA (NOV. 29) UPI - The World Health Organization said Thursday there must be changes in the kind of initimate human behavior usually not discussed to combat the AIDS pandemic which so far has stricken some 1.3 million people.

As many as 8 to 10 million people have the HIV virus which causes AIDS and there could be as many as 30 million by the end of the century, WHO said in marking World AIDS Day.

''Slowing the sexual spread of HIV will mean changing behaviour that is intimate, generally not talked about, and often politically and culturally sensitive,'' said Dr. Michael Merson, director of the WHO AIDS program.

''Both men and women need to know how to avoid becoming infected and they need to have the support of health care and other services in making the necessary changes in their personal behavior,'' Merson said.

Marking World AIDS Day, the U.N. health agency said the reported cumulative number of cases of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome reported since 1980 is around 300,000.

But the true number is about 1.3 million men, women and children because less-developed countries, especially in Africa, lack the necessary infrastructure to trace and diagnose the fatal disease.

''AIDS is also the end-stage of infection with HIV, the human immunodeficiency virus, and there are a far greater and ever-expanding number of adults around the world who have been infected with HIV - a number we estimate at 8 to 10 million,'' Merson said in a WHO information service interview.

''On the basis of current infection trends, by the year 2000 there may be a cumulative total of 25 to 30 million men, women and children infected with HIV '' Merson warned. ''Unless an effective treatment is found, most if not all of these people will ultimately develop AIDS.''

Once linked mainly to homosexuality and drug addiction, AIDS is now increasingly spreading through heterosexual behavior in both advanced and developing countries, and especially among women, the WHO said.

''All in all, of the persons now infected with HIV, three million are women,'' Merson said.

The agency estimates that one in 40 African women is HIV-infected, one in 500 in South America and one in 700 in North America. In Southeast Asia, around 200,000 women become infected in the past three years alone, the WHO said.

In the case of pregnant women with HIV, Merson said, the infection is passed on to the unborn or newborn baby in 30 percent of all cases.

Merson said that in many countries women generally have low status and ''may have little or no choice in sexual decision-making. Many find it awkward or even dangerous to ask their husband or partner to keep to 'safer sex,' including the use of a condom,'' he said.

It is especially important to educate women in ways to avoid infection, Merson said, because in developing countries it is the women who will be unable to take care of home and children, then die and leave them orphaned.

''We estimate that during the 1990s about 10 million uninfected children, mostly in sub-Saharan Africa, will be orphaned in this manner, '' Merson said.

It is also important that young girls as well as women are ''told the facts,'' he said. ''We must now, however, ignore men as we look for ways to prevent infections in women. Safer sex - sticking to one partner, using a condom - is vital for peventing the sexual transmission of HIV.''

BUENOS AIRES, ARGENTINA (NOV. 29) UPI - A police anti-terrorist unit has broken up a cell of extremists who intended to assasinate President Bush on his visit to Argentina next week, a police official said Thursday.

Commissioner Julian Blanco said one person, not an Argentine national, suspected in the plot has been arrested by members of the Special Operations Group, the SWAT team of the the Province of Buenos Aires.

Bush is scheduled to visit Argentina on Dec. 5, the third stop on his five-nation South American tour.

The newspaper Diario Popular said the suspect is a Chilean national, but Blanco would not confirm it. ''The magistrate has not authorized me to give information,'' he said. ''I can say only that one person in transit in Argentina was arrested.''

Asked if it was true that a leftist terrorist group was planning to kill Bush, Blanco replied, ''This information is correct. I can't deny that our organization is working on this case.''

Diario Popular said a contingent of 30 Argentine and Chilean left- wing terrorists planned to ambush Bush as he was visiting the Palermo race track.

It said the terrorists were veterans of the unsuccessful assasination attempt against former Chilean President Augusto Pinochet, now Chile's army commander, in 1986, and of a bloody, temporary takeover of an Argentine army barracks in January 1989.

Commenting on the case, President Carlos Menem said he had asked for a report on the plot.

PROVIDENCE, RI (NOV. 29) UPI - Brown University President Vartan Gregorian says his school will amend its student code to categorize sexual assault as a ''major offense,'' but will not condone the use of anonymous graffiti to accuse men of rape.

Gregorian issued a two-page statement Wednesday on a controversy that has engulfed the Ivy League school for several weeks now. The stir has focused on a ''rape list'' that has appeared periodically on the walls of campus bathrooms and identified men who have allegedly sexually assaulted women on campus.

At times, the list has reached 30 names. The university has instructed janitors to scrub it off when they find it, but the list keeps resurfacing.

Gregorian declared that ''the route of graffiti and anonymity, whether against men or women, is not an acceptable substitute for either due process or justice.''

''If there are alleged criminals in our midst, it is incumbent upon the victims to come forward promptly before either the university authorities or civil ones to take action,'' he said.

''We must provide them assistance in doing so. If students have been hurt, harmed, or victimized, we owe it to them and to our community to try to bring the assailants to justice,'' Gregorian said.

In response to complaints that the university does not take the issues of sexual assault and harassment seriously enough, Gregorian said he has spoken ''forcefully and without ambiguity against all forms of racism and intolerance and against physical assaults on our students.''

Following a stormy Nov. 15 student forum, Gregorian told two deans to outline ways to strengthen existing university programs dealing with sexual assault and harassment and recommend new programs that could be added.

After hearing back from the deans, Gregorian said he decided to recommend to the university governing body that the Code of Student Conduct be amended to separately classify sexual assault, as well as racial and sexual harassment, as ''major offenses.''

''Even though sexual assault is already mentioned in our rules, nevertheless I have taken this additional action in order to give this offense the prominence it deserves so that there can be no ambiguity whatsoever,'' he said.

(NOV. 29) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange closed broadly lower in slow trading Thursday, with the blue-chip Nikkei Average sinking below the 23,000 level for the first time in a week.

The index of 225 selected issues, which fell 569.63 points Wednesday, lost another 341.28 points to 22,712.60.

It was the first time the Nikkei Average fell below the 23,000 level since Nov. 22, when the benchmark figure closed at 22,816.99.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index of all major issues, which fell 36.96 points Wednesday, lost another 30.39 points to 1,666.96.

Declines led advances 882 to 83, while only 73 issues remained unchanged.

Volume amounted to around an estimated 300 million shares, compared with 359 million shares Wednesday.

Elsewhere in Asia, stock prices lost ground on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange in dull, listless trading.

The bellwether Hang Seng Index slipped 8.04 points to 2,978.35. The drop followed a loss Wednesday of 12.55 points.

In Singapore, stock prices slumped in light trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange in line with the fall in Tokyo and continued worries over a possible shooting war in the Persian Gulf.

The blue-chip Straits Times Industrial Index, which eased 2.47 points Wednesday, slipped another 6.41 points to 1,109.41 while the broader- based All Singapore Index eased 2.60 points to 308.13.

Volume amounted to around an estimated 24.6 million shares, compared with 25.5 million shares Wednesday.

Elsewhere around the region, in Bangkok, stock prices continued to tumble on the Thailand Stock Exchange due to heightened fears of war in the Gulf.

The Securities Exchange of Thailand Index, which lost 5.45 points Wednesday, fell 28.95 points to 558.26.

Volume amounted to around an estimated 47 million Thai shares, compared with 46 million shares Wednesday.

In Australia, stocks closed lower in moderate trading on the Sydney Sharemarket.

The All Ordinaries Index, which added 0.8 point Wednesday, fell 12.7 points to 1,338.4.

Volume amounted to around an estimated 53 million shares, compared with 56 million shares Wednesday.

ATLANTA (NOV. 29) UPI - Former President Jimmy Carter said he would be willing to monitor elections in Lebanon if the war-torn country can resolve its 15-year-old civil war.

Carter convened two days of private meetings on Lebanon and economic development in the Middle East Wednesday at the Carter Presidential Center.

''I don't think anybody anticipates quick elections,'' Carter said at a news conference at the end of the a daylong discussion with Lebanese, Syrian, Jordanian and Israeli leaders on ''ideas on how to bring peace and reconciliation'' to Lebanon.

But Carter said he would be willing to travel to the war-torn country to monitor elections if and when they take place.

The discussions centered on the Taif agreement, an Arab-brokered constitutional revision for Lebanon that puts Christian and Muslim communities on more equal footing in governmental power. The 1989 agreement also calls for the withdrawal of all foreign enemies from Lebanese territory.

Lebanese President Elias Hrawi has been trying to implement the Taif peace plan since Syria, which has 40,000 troops in the country, last month crushed a long-running rebellion by Christian Gen. Michael Aoun. Aoun had barricaded himself with his loyalists at the presidential palace.

Hrawi succeeded with plans to get eight major Christian and Muslim militias to evacuate greater Beirut in an effort to establish an area where the government and the national army have control.

In support of Hrawi's efforts, the United States sent U.S. Ambassador Ryan

Crocker to Beirut Wednesday, a year after withdrawing all embassy officials from the city because of heavy fighting among rival militias.

While acknowledging the Taif agreement is not universally popular among different Lebanese groups, Carter said it is ''the only ballgame in town'' and all sides seem willing to make it work to end the civil war.

Carter also said a restoration of Lebanese government authority would bode well for the release of hostages held in the country.

TOKYO (NOV. 29) UPI - Sales at large-scale department stores and supermarkets across Japan in October registered a mild 4.7 percent rise over a year ago to $13.34 billio), the Ministry of International Trade and Industry said Thursday.

The year-on-year growth compared with a nearly 10 percent rise recorded in recent months.

The growth rate was the lowest since February 1990. In that month, sales posted a year-to-year fall because of a high sales level a year ago ahead of the introduction of the 3.0 percent sales tax in April 1989, ministry officials said.

TOKYO (NOV. 29) UPI - Oil reserves held by Japanese refiners rose 2.68 million barrels in October to 321.16 million barrels, equivalent to an 88-day supply and unchanged from a year ago, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry said Thursday.

The ministry said oil products in stock rose 4.0 percentage points over a year ago, accounting for 55 percent of the total, because of increased domestic production to make up for import restraints.

Japan's oil imports remained stable because of increased production by Saudi Arabia and other oil-producing nations and Japan will not have to immediately tap its crude reserves, ministry officials said.

PHILADELPHIA (NOV. 29) UPI - The new director of the city's AIDS Activities Coordinating Office has learned that he suffers from the deadly disease.

Jim Hymes, 40, said Thursday he was diagnosed this week with the virus.

''I've devoted most of my professional life to fighting AIDS,'' Hymes told The Philadelphia Inquirer. ''And now I'm an AIDS patient.''

Hymes is now on medical leave, but city Executive Deputy Health Commissioner Barry Savitz said he expects Hymes to return to work when his doctor says he is ready to do so.

Savitz said it is important for the agency to respond to employees and citizens ''in a humane way. There can't be discrimination against people with AIDS or other people with handicaps or illnesses.''

Some directors of AIDS organizations have expressed concern that Hymes' illness coupled with city budget cuts could spell an end for the office, but Savitz said the city is committed to retaining the office.

Hymes said the news that he has AIDS was painful.

''When they tell you you're going to die, it's a little difficult,'' he said.

Hymes said he has long suspected he was exposed to the disease, but did not have himself tested until he began losing weight quickly.

''I always had in the back of my mind that I'd get the disease,'' he said. ''I had no false hopes of being immune from this.''

Hymes said 62 of his friends, including several of his sexual partners, had died of the disease.

Hymes has worked for the city health department for 11 years, and had been deputy director of the AIDS office until June, when he replaced David Fair, who resigned in February.

TOKYO (NOV. 29) UPI - The Finance Ministry has decided on a $17.5 billion supplementary budget, incorporating $1 billion pledged by Japan to support U.S.-led multinational forces deployed in Saudi Arabia, the newspaper Yomiuri Shimbun reported Thursday.

The daily said the expenditure will be approved at a Cabinet meeting Friday and submitted to parliament for approval next month.

Japan has pledged a total of $ billion to support the multinational forces and front-line states, whose economies have been hurt by the Gulf crisis.

Other reports said the ministry also decided to increase Japan's official

(NOV. 29) UPI - The eyes of the world will be on the United Nations Security Council today as foreign ministers vote on a resolution that would allow military force to be used against Iraq. The measure is expected to pass.

Representatives of the five U-N Security Council permanent members and most of the 10 NON-permanent members are expected to attend today's U-N Security Council session. Secretary of State Baker arrived in New York yesterday.

Members of the Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday heard testimony from military and foreign policy experts. Committee members are gathering information on what may happen in the Perisan Gulf crisis.

Voters began casting their ballots in parliamentary elections in Egypt today. Thousands of armed police were mobilized to guard the country's 23-thousand polling stations. The interior ministry said it expects the vote to go smoothly.

Polish Solidarity leader Lech Walesa urged a national television audience yesterday to vote for him in the second round of the presidential election. Walesa and Stanislaw Tyminski will compete in a runoff December 9th.

The Soviet capital has only a three-to-five-day stock of meat and is short of milk and other food, but city officials and Western diplomats blame the problems on distribution, rather than overall shortages.

The World Health Organization says to combat the AIDS epidemic, there must be changes in the kind of initimate human behavior usually NOT discussed. The organization said on World AIDS day that there may be 30 Million cases by the year 2000.

The Philippine armed forces chief says that rebel soldiers have shared explosives with communist guerrillas and are co-ordinating moves to overthrow President Corazon Aquino. He said the rebels want to ''project a situation that the government is no longer in control.''

Links between Bangladesh and the rest of the world began returning to normal today after being cut for more than 24 hours during a national state of emergency declared by President Hussein Muhammad Ershad. He said the opposition was trying to remove him from office by illegal means.

The military says the Vietnamese-backed government of Cambodia has moved at least seven-thousand additional troops, including some Vietnamese soldiers, into western Cambodia for a dry season offensive against resistance forces.

A spokeswoman for Washington, D-C, mayor Marion Barry says the mayor's wife and son have moved out of their home. One month ago, Barry was sentenced on a cocaine possession conviction. The Barrys were married in 1978.

HOUSTON (NOV. 29) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze will be in Houston early next month for one of a series of meetings to prepare the agenda for an upcoming superpower summit.

Baker confirmed the Dec. 10-11 session following a meeting with Shevardnadze at the United Nations in New York Wednesday.

''I very much appreciate and accept the invitation,'' said Shevardnadze, who added the two officials work ''more fruitfully'' in meetings outside their capitals.

Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev are expected to meet in Moscow early next year, and indications are that the talks could result in the signing of a strategic arms reduction treaty.

Baker is a Houston native, and President Bush claims Houston as his adoptive home town. The meetings apparently will occur at The Houstonian Hotel and Conference Center, where Bush stays when in Houston.

Shevardnadze's trip to Houston will mark the first time a Soviet government leader has visited the city on official business in at least 30 years.

MOSCOW (NOV. 29) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev will go to the troubled southwestern republic of Moldavia on Friday in an effort to calm ethnic tensions that have split the republic and led to violent clashes, a spokesman said Thursday.

Gorbachev will go to the Moldavian capital of Kishinev for a 24-hour visit and also is considering a visit to the Russian-speaking city of Tiraspol, Gorbachev spokesman Sergei Grigoriev said. ''He will be meeting with representatives of various parties in the disputes,'' he said.

Russians and Ukrainians in the Dniester region of eastern Moldavia and Turkic-speaking Gagauzis in the south declared separate autonomous regions earlier this year because of fears that minority rights will be trampled under Moldavian nationalism and the majority's desire to unite with Romania.

Both regions have held elections to separate Parliaments, with the Dniester polls going ahead last week, defying efforts by Moscow to prevent them and a declaration by the Moldavian Parliament that the move was illegal.

At least three people were killed in the Dniester region in ethnic clashes earlier this month, and elections last month in the Gagauz region led to ethnic confrontations between Gagauzis and Moldavian vigilantes trying to prevent voting.

The Moldavian Parliament voted Tuesday to annul the results of the Dniester elections, which were dominated by Russian and Ukrainian Communists intent on keeping Moldavia from seceding from the Soviet Union and preventing what they call Moldavian discrimination against ethnic minorities.

Leaders of the Dniester region, who vowed to go ahead with plans to form a separate Parliament, are demanding that the Popular Front- dominated Moldavian government resign and that a law making Moldavian the only official language in the republic be repealed.

The Moldavian Parliament gave preliminary approval Thursday to a citizenship law with strict residence requirements as part of its effort to consolidate an independent Moldavia or prepare to eventually join a ''greater Romania.''

A republic of 4.4 million people, Moldavia was formed by joining a former Moldavian autonomous area of the Ukraine with large parts of Romania that Josef Stalin seized in 1940 as part of a secret pact with Nazi Germany's Adolf Hitler.

Moldavians, whose language is a dialect of Romanian, make up 64 percent of the republic's population, Ukrainians 14.2 percent, Russians 12.8 percent and Gagauzis 3.5 percent.

EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (NOV. 29) UPI - It doesn't have Kenilworth trucks parked in a row out front, George Jones on the jukebox or chipped beef over toast, but for desert-weary soldiers the truck stop in the middle of nowhere will have to do.

The truck plaza, next to a highway in remote eastern Saudi Arabia near the border with Iraqi-occupied Kuwait, has become a watering hole sorts for U.S. and British troops who, in passing by on missions, drop by for cold sodas, lunch and even an occasional haircut.

Military rules forbid giving the name of the truck plaza, but it has a grocery store, a Pakistani restaurant, a barber shop and gas pumps that fill the tank of an economy vehicle for just $5.

''We came out here expecting to be in the middle of nowhere, and this helps out a lot, it really does,'' said Spec. 5 Bobby Rankin, 22, of Eagle Pass, Texas.

The plaza's grocery store, run by Pakistanis, used to cater to immigrant workers in Saudi Arabia. The store has added U.S. and British junk food, but still doesn't quite match the atmosphere of the U.S. trucks stops made legendary in country music songs.

''At a truck stop back home I'm used to stopping by and getting something to eat and relaxing a little bit,'' Rankin said. ''Here it's a lot different. Some of the items (in the grocery store) - I really don't know what they are.''

Some of the soldiers said even if the truck plaza is less than traditional, it provides a nice way to socialize with other troops and take in another culture.

''You see a lot of the local people as well, so you don't feel like you're in the middle of nowhere - and you're not seeing people for days on end, which is what a lot of us do anyway,'' said a gunner with Britain's famed ''Desert Rats '' the 7th Armored Brigade known for its prowess in desert fighting.

Inside the truck plaza's restaurant, American GIs smoke cigarettes, waiting for an order of hamburgers and fries, new items on a menu that features curried lamb and chicken.

Some soldiers said they call the restaurant ''Chicken Charlie's'' because they love the spicy chicken. Others call it ''Omar's,'' for no particular reason other than the name just seems to have stuck.

The plaza's stores, particularly the Pakistani-run barber shop, appear to be doing booming business with the thousands of soldiers deployed in Operation Desert Shield.

''Seeing that he's the only one around here, he's the best guy to come to,'' said Warrant Officer Ian McCulloch, a senior British Royal Engineer from Edinburgh, Scotland. He said the barber will now be taken to the troops on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

''It will save lots of soldiers coming down here and being high profile,'' McCulloch said. ''He can come to us ..., which will make things a lot easier for soldiers up the road.''

The only drawback is the barber speaks little English.

''He'll just have to hack you and I'll have to tell him when to stop, '' said Royal Engineer Andrew Gregory, 20, a specialist in building roads through the desert.

The truck stop in the middle of nowhere provides a morale boost, a good meal, a cold drink and even a place to take care of some personal grooming. But chief among its benefits, according to Spec. 4 Michael Freeman with the Georgia National Guard's 165th Supply Company, are its personal facilities.

''Well, shoot,'' Freeman said. ''You could walk in and go to the bathroom. You don't have to walk outside about 100 yards to go to the bathroom.''

DALLAS (NOV. 29) UPI - Former Sen. John Tower says that President Reagan appeared to take part in a deliberate cover-up of White House involvement in the Iran-Contra affair during testimony before his investigative panel.

Tower gives his account of Reagan's testimony before the Tower Commission in upcoming memoirs, excerpts of which appeared Thursday in the Dallas Times Herald.

Reagan named his loyal supporter to the three-man special commission he appointed in 1986 to investigate the Iran-Contra scandal. Reagan appeared personally before the panel on Jan. 26, 1987, and Tower said he was shocked by some of Reagan's testimony.

Tower said Reagan used a script prepared by aides to contradict an earlier statement and deny that the White House gave advance approval for an August 1985 shipment of missiles to Iran.

Tower said Reagan's about-face was part of a ''deliberate effort'' to cover up the involvement of Donald Regan, Reagan's chief of staff. He also wondered if Reagan might have been ''deliberately tipping us off that Donald Regan was up to something fishy.''

Although the Tower Commission's report noted Reagan's changing stories, Tower's book is the first time a principal figure has suggested that the changes were part of a deliberate cover-up. The other members of the Tower Commission were Brent Scowcroft, who had served as President Gerald Ford's national security adviser, and Edmund Muskie, who had been secretary of state under President Jimmy Carter.

In the meeting with the Tower Commission, the president agreed with his former national security adviser Robert McFarlane that Reagan had given advance approval to a proposal that would have Israel ship TOW anti-tank missiles to Iran, with the United States agreeing to replenish Israeli stocks.

When the board met with Reagan again Feb. 11, 1987, Tower says, the president shifted gears, making a ''rather convoluted statement'' denying he had approved the arms sale.

''I, for one, was shocked at what I was hearing. The president was recanting his previous testimony,'' Tower writes.

When Tower pressed for clarification, he writes, Reagan walked to his desk. ''He picked up a sheet of paper and, as I remember his words, said to the board, 'This is what I am supposed to say,' and proceeded to read us an answer.

''It was obvious that the president had been prepped ... and words were being put into his mouth.''

Tower calls the change of stories ''a major contradiction,'' and says it ''bore all the earmarks of a deliberate effort to conceal'' possible involvement by Regan, the chief of staff. ''By convincing the president that he, the president, had not authorized the arms shipment, Regan was buttressing his own contention that he had been completely unaware of the transaction,'' Tower writes.

Regan resigned as White House chief of staff on Feb. 27, 1987, the day after the Tower Commission report was presented to Reagan.

Tower declined a request for an interview. He does not explicitly say in his memoirs whether he thinks Reagan knowingly went along with a plan to deceive the commission, or whether the former president's notoriously faulty memory allowed him to be duped by aides.

When the Tower Commission's report was released Tower said, ''The president did make mistakes.'' But he added that the commission concluded that Reagan had not been involved in a cover-up. ''We don't use the term cover-up,'' Tower told a news conference at the time. But he added that ''there was a deliberate effort to mislead'' by those who prepared a chronology for Reagan.

MOSCOW (NOV. 29) UPI - The Soviet capital reportedly has only a three- to five-day stock of meat and is short of milk and other food, but city officials and Western diplomats blamed problems with distribution rather than overall shortages.

International efforts to assist the stumbling Soviet economy gathered steam, meanwhile, with a German telethon raising more than $4 million for food aid that would probably be unnecessary if the Soviet Union could efficiently process and distribute what it produces.

Yuri Luzhkov, chairman of the Moscow city council's executive committee, said Wednesday that the shortages in the capital were caused by delayed deliveries and ''self-seeking decisions'' by surrounding areas to cut supplies to Moscow.

''There are either long interruptions in deliveries, or supplies were in much smaller amounts,'' the official Soviet news agency Tass said Thursday. ''Store shelves are bare. Panic buying is underway.''

Shortages and lines at shops have been a common part of Soviet life for some time, and consumers often hoard whatever is available, but Soviet officials say the problem has become critical in recent months.

With the liberalization of the Soviet economy, much of the recent problem has been blamed on food producers and others who are not quick to fill state-issued quotas when they can instead sell products for higher prices on the open market or trade them for other needed goods.

Luzhkov said Moscow had only a three- to five-day supply of meat because of delayed deliveries and in the last month has received only 60 percent of the normal milk supply. He said sufficient bread, salt, sugar and grain was available but other products were in short supply.

But the capital was thought unlikely to run out of meat completely, and while shelves at state-run meat markets were mostly bare by midmorning each day, meat was still available in the free markets - for up to 15 times the state-subsidized price.

Western diplomats in Moscow agreed with Luzhkov and other officials that the primary cause of the food shortages sweeping the Soviet Union seemed to be failures in distribution. Some questioned how effective planned foreign aid efforts would be.

''In general terms it seems there is enough food in the country, but it cannot be delivered,'' said one diplomat from a country considering sending aid. ''The problem is the normal channels are not working.

''If we send help we have to consider very carefully how to assure it will get to those who need it,'' said the diplomat, who requested anonymity. ''There will need to be some very concrete measures to ensure distribution.''

Another diplomat said officials in his Western European country were considering bypassing Soviet distribution systems entirely and delivering the food directly with trucks from outside the country.

''It's evident they have a problem with distribution, that is why they lost 25 percent of their harvest,'' said this diplomat, who also requested anonymity.

''If we give aid we have to make sure it gets there.''

Officials from Germany, which is leading the massive effort to help the Soviet Union cope with food shortages during the harsh Russian winter, were in Moscow Tuesday to work out details to ensure proper distribution of the aid.

Delegation leader Horst Teltschik, a personal adviser to German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, said Soviet-German coordination groups will do everything they can to make sure supplies will get to those who need them, but he added it was impossible to guarantee that none of the material would end up on the black market.

The German newspaper Bild said Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev asked Teltschik for 1.9 million tons of emergency food, including 500,000 tons of meat.

Relief officials in Germany said $4.25 million was raised in private donations during a telethon to help the Soviet Union Wednesday night that included taped pleas from Gorbachev and Kohl.

A spokesman for the relief group CARE-Germany said the money will allow the organization to send Soviet families 80,000 food parcels containing canned meat and sausages, margarine, powdered milk, chocolate and flour.

A German government program of direct aid has not been finalized, but officials are reportedly considering using emergency strategic stockpiles that are not needed after the unification of Germany and easing of East-West tensions.

''We are hammering out the details to make sure nothing is to be lost,'' a German Embassy spokesman said in Moscow. ''We expect to go ahead with shipments on a large scale in the next few weeks.''

Other Western countries and the European Community are also considering billions of dollars worth of direct aid and credits to help the Soviet Union get through the winter.

LONDON (NOV. 29) UPI - The family of Prime Minister John Major will not move into 10 Downing Street, the ''flat above the shop'' much loved by Margaret and Denis Thatcher, but will continue to live in their Cambridgeshire home, a spokeswoman said Thursday.

As when he was chancellor of the exchequer, Britain's treasury, Norma Major, 48, will travel to London to be at her husband's side ''as and when necessary '' the spokeswoman said. Otherwise, she will stay in Great Stuckeley, 60 miles north of the capital, with their children James, 15, and Elizabeth, 19.

It was 11 years ago that the Majors moved to the area once represented by Oliver Cromwell when John Major became the local member of Parliament. The family now owns a four-bedroom brick house, Finings, set on two acres in the village of 300.

The prime minister's own move was short: He went from 11 Downing Street next door to 10 Downing Street, occupied by the Thatchers for the past 11 1/2 years.

While Margaret Thatcher, a grocer's daughter, liked what she called ''the flat above the shop,'' it is hardly sumptuous.

The glossy black door with the No. 10 has no key - police are posted around the clock to admit the 150 to 200 daily visitors. Behind the door is the main entrance hall, off of which are the press office, prime minister's office and Cabinet Room.

Ramsay MacDonald's youngest daughter practiced her golf shots in the long hall and before her, in the 1960s, Robin and Giles Wilson played soccer up and down it.

On the main floor are elegant staterooms, including the Blue Drawing Room, the Pillared Reception Room and the State Dining Room.

Up 17 steps from the public and official floors are the prime minister's private quarters. There are four bathrooms, two bedrooms, a sitting room, a dining room that seats eight and a narrow kitchen likened a train carriage.

The Thatchers' daughter, Carol, once said, ''If you've got a family of four moving in, it will be very cramped. It is not just a home but an office. But is is very conveniently located. You can go to Victoria and get fast food.''

The crown acquired 10 Downing Street in 1732, and it has been the official residence of the prime minister since George II gave it to Sir Robert Walpole. It was not until this century that prime ministers commonly lived at Downing Street, however, preferring to stay in more elegant country homes.

The brown-brick house has not engendered much affection from its past residents. The countess of Avon, wife of Anthony Eden, said in 1985, ''Women have never been appreciated in Downing Street.'' During a Middle East crisis in 1956, she said, it seemed that the Suez Canal was flowing through her dining room.

CHICAGO (NOV. 29) UPI - Researchers said Thursday they have developed a new non-surgical technique that can successfully treat most cases of the most common cause of male infertility - varicose veins.

The new technique involves heating a dye to scald the wall of the vein, shutting it down and forcing the blood to be re-routed, researchers from the University of Minnesota Hospital in Minneapolis said at a meeting of the Radiological Society of North America.

The dye can be heated to a temperature hotter than boiling water, said Dr. David Hunter, who headed the research team that treated 180 patients with the technique.

''Overall more than 85 percent of the treated veins were completely blocked off and that figure rose to 91 percent when we modified the treatment by increasing the amount of contrast used,'' Hunter said.

''We saw an increase in sperm count in up to 75 percent of infertile patients and more than 50 percent of these were subsequently able to impregnate their wives.''

''Our study suggests that hot contrast treatment is as safe and effective as surgery, which is the standard treatment,'' Hunter said.

The technique, which involves injecting the dye through a catheter that is threaded through the jugular vein and down into the scrotum, can cause complications, including scrotal swelling and temporary numbness in the thigh.

But the advantages of the new technique over surgery are the quicker recovery time and the cheaper cost, he said.

Varicose veins are caused by malfunctioning valves which allow blood to be pulled down into a vein and accumulate.

HOUSTON (NOV. 29) UPI - Henry Lee Lucas, a drifter who horrified the nation with claims he killed hundreds of people, now says Texas will execute an innocent man if it puts him to death as scheduled Monday.

Lucas, who later recanted his confessions, told reporters in a death row interview Wednesday that he does not fear execution because he will go to heaven. He says his only crime being embarrassing police who accepted his bogus confessions to more than 250 murders but said he also regrets that the real killers are still loose.

Lucas, 54, is to be put to death by injection early Monday but because the death date is his first, many officials expect he will win a stay of execution.

''I have done nothing to cause the death of my life except those false confessions and I've asked forgiveness for those, which I feel God has forgiven me for,'' Lucas said.

''According to His promise, I'll have heaven waiting for me,'' he said.

Lucas is to be executed for the 1979 rape-murder of an unidentified hitchhiker dubbed ''Orange Socks'' after the only item of clothing on her body.

Lucas said he is not assuming he will be granted a stay. He claims law enforcement officials in Texas want revenge for being duped by the false confessions that brought him international attention.

''If it happens, I think it's the idea that the justice system didn't work, and when I proved it didn't work, it gave the law enforcement a black eye. And I don't think they can take that black eye,'' said Lucas, who was among the first people branded a serial killer.

The prosecutor in the county that secured the only death sentence among Lucas's 10 convictions rejects his claims of innocence.

''I think everybody will feel safer when Lucas is dead,'' said Williamson County District Attorney Ken Anderson.

Texas Rangers escorted Lucas across the state and the nation for interviews with police agencies hoping to clear unsolved murders. He claimed most of the killings were carried out during cross-country travels with Ottis Toole, who is serving life prison terms for two Florida murders.

Lucas claims he confessed to 4,000 crimes after being arrested in Texas in 1982 but Texas Rangers officially attributed more than 250 in 26 states to him.

He later recanted and evidence surfaced that indicated Lucas could not have committed some of the crimes to which he confessed. Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox publicly expressed serious doubts about Lucas's guilt in the ''Orange Socks'' case.

Lucas once claimed he confessed because of the lure of fame and the good treatment he received from the Texas Rangers. He now claims he was drugged, threatened and forced to confess.

''They call me the worst thing that ever walked the face of the earth,'' he said. ''They ... tell 'em how I could join Hitler in hell and all that stuff. I've proven every way I know how to prove I'm not guilty. I don't have no control over what they do.

''I don't want to be remembered for these crimes. I didn't do 'em and the people who did do 'em is on the streets. That hurts worse than anything because who else are they gonna kill out there? That's a hurt I feel responsible for.''

CHICAGO (NOV. 29) UPI - Soybeans and grains were lower across the board at midmorning Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Traders had been expecting steady to lower prices with a smaller-than-reported loan by Saudia Arabia to the USSR being viewed as adding pressure to prices across the floor.

Ideas abounded that soybeans, which have led this week's tone, were due for a setback and profit taking set in.

Commercial and commission house selling took corn futures lower. December corn was pulled by pressure from liquidation before Friday's first day notice.

Local and scattered commission house selling weighed on wheat prices.

In advance of the open came word that Tunisia would tender for 75,000 tons of U.S. corn. The USDA accepted Morocco's bid for 119,000 tons of U.S. wheat but rejected Jordan's bid for 100,000 tons of wheat.

Country movement of beans and grains continued to be light.

The midmorning prices:

Corn Dec 2.20 off 1/2, Mar 2.31 3/4 off 1 1/4, Ma 2.39 1/2 off 1 3/4, Jly 2.45 1/4 off 2 1/4.

(NOV. 29) UPI - The United Nations Security Council votes today on the Bush administration's proposed resolution that would authorize force against Iraq if it does NOT leave Kuwait by January 15th. Bush and Secretary of State Baker have been campaigning for the measure for weeks, and it is expected to pass. Yesterday, the Security council condemned atrocities committed by Iraq against Kuwaitis.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (NOV. 29) UPI - NATO will rely on European ''fire brigades'' rather than U.S. reinforcements to respond to flare-ups in post-Cold War Europe, a senior alliance official said Thursday.

The new plan for ''inter-regional'' troop transfers in Europe, to be discussed next week by NATO defense ministers, is a marked departure from a 40-year strategy tied to trans-Atlantic reinforcements.

''The risks to NATO security are likely to be much more multidirectional than they have been,'' said the senior NATO official, who requested anonymity. ''In the past we were focusing on a single monolithic Warsaw Pact threat,'' he said so NATO strategy was based on ''in-place forces'' in each region, supported by U.S. reinforcements.

''In the future we'll be looking to much more of a fire brigade situation where we might need to send forces to one particular area of the alliance to respond to a more localized crisis,'' the NATO official said. ''That could be done by moving forces within Europe rather than bringing forces from the United States.''

The planned change is part of a sweeping strategy review ordered at NATO's landmark London summit in July.

Highly mobile multinational forces will replace stationary and layered national divisions, which were designed to implement NATO's now- obsolete policy of ''forward defense.''

The ''ability'' to bring forces from the United States must be retained, the senior NATO official said, but he added that if the alliance can respond to crises ''with forces already in place in Europe rather than by a major transfer of forces from the United States, that's the way to do it.''

The defense ministers meet Dec. 6-7 as NATO's Defense Planning Committee, but completion of the alliance's new overall strategy is not expected until late next year.

''We want to get it right,'' the NATO official said. ''We're developing a strategy that we hope will last a long time.''

NATO strategy for decades was based on ''forward defense'' and ''flexible response,'' which called for immediately stopping a Warsaw Pact offensive at NATO's eastern frontier, with the use of nuclear weapons if necessary.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - Personal income inched up only 0.1 percent in October in the worst showing in more than a year while spending was flat, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

The report ''was another signal that a recession has started,'' said Norman Robertson, chief economist at Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh. ''The income figures were very, very weak.''

The $5.7 billion increase in income - to an annual rate of $4.7 trillion - follows gains of 0.5 percent in September and 0.3 percent in August, according to the department's Bureau of Economic Statistics.

Personal spending, which has been fueling the domestic economy, was unchanged in October after advancing 0.9 percent in September and 0.8 percent in August, the department said.

''This does not bode particularly well for a robust Christmas season for some retailers,'' Robertson said, noting most American families cannot afford to take on any more debt.

October's 0.1 percent increase in income was the smallest since no change in August 1989, and the month's flat spending was the worst showing since showing no change in May, a government spokesman said.

The data were adjusted for seasonal factors.

In addition, the Commerce Department said disposable personal income, or income after taxes and other major obligations, edged up 0.1 percent in October after increasing 0.4 percent in September and 0.3 percent in August.

As the economic picture worsened, Americans managed to stash a bit more money into their savings accounts. The government figures show the rate of personal savings edged up to 3.9 percent of income after taxes in October from 3.6 percent in September.

But the savings rate remains far below other nations.

The overall report generally was worse than expected by many economists. The consensus was a 0.2 percent increase in both personal income and personal spending during October.

DHAKA, BANGLADESH (NOV. 29) UPI - Anti-government protesters defied a curfew and emergency law throughout Bangladesh Thursday, clashing with security forces in continued violence that an opposition leader said has left 50 people dead.

Communications links between Bangladesh and the rest of the world, which had been cut for more than 24 hours, were restored Thursday, although virtually all outside transit services remained suspended.

Opposition leaders said residents defied the curfew and poured out into the streets in Dhaka and other parts of the country, chanting protests against the government of President Hussein Muhammad Ershad and demanding that he withdraw the state of emergency he imposed Tuesday.

State-run television sought to lure people away from the streets by broadcasting a replay of the 1990 World Cup soccer match between Argentina and England, and also showed the English movie ''Come September.'' Soccer is the favorite sport in Bangladesh.

The curfew was lifted briefly from 6 a.m. to 10 a.m. Thursday to allow students to leave universities in Dhaka that had been ordered closed, a high-level source in Dhaka said. The source said the curfew could be lifted entirely Saturday if the tension eases after Friday, the Moslem sabbath.

On Tuesday the government arrested several opposition leaders and placed under house arrest Sheikh Hasina, the leader of the left-wing Awami League party, and Begum Khaleda Zia, the chief of the centrist Bangladesh Nationalist Party. Zia escaped Wednesday, and the government began a dragnet for him.

On Thursday authorities allowed journalists to meet with Hasina, who said in a statement that 50 anti-government demonstrators have died in police gunfire during the week's violence.

Police in Dhaka declined comment on this figure, but they said one demonstrator was killed and six others were injured Thursday when anti-government demonstrators tried to break through a police cordon in Dhaka.

Similar anti-government demonstrations were reported in many parts of the country, journalists in Dhaka said.

Ershad, in announcing the emergency rule in Bangladesh, said the step was necessary ''to preserve national security and save the country from rampant violence.'' He accused oppostion parties of endangering internal security and Bangladesh's economic life.

The government also suspended all political activities, imposed press censorship and orderered universities closed for one month.

The government crackdown followed frequent and disruptive anti-government strikes in the past month by opposition parties that often resulted in clashes between rival groups.

An eight-party alliance of the Awami League and a seven-party coalition led by the Bangladesh Nationalist Party organized the anti-government rallies and strikes since October. The strikes were called to demand the resignation of Ershad and to insist on a general election under a neutral interim government.

Ershad seized power from an elected government in a bloodless coup in 1982 and obtained a five-year presidential term in 1986 elections that were boycotted by the major opposition parties. Opposition leaders say there cannot be free and fair elections under an Ershad government.

TOKYO (NOV. 29) UPI - Japan's industrial output in October posted a hefty 7.6 percent increase over a year ago, spurred by active production of transport vehicles, precision machinery and mainframe computers, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry said Thursday.

The increase followed a 5.3 percent year-on-year rise in September.

The ministry said its preliminary report established the production index for the month at 131.9 against the 1985 base of 100 before seasonal adjustments.

The October output was up 1.9 percent over the previous month.

The shipment index stood at 131.6 in October, up 8.2 percent over a year ago but down 0.8 percent from the preceding month.

The inventory index was up 0.2 percent over a year ago and up 2.3 percent over September, the report said.

TORONTO (NOV. 29) UPI - Olympia & York Developments Ltd. has raised close to $1 billion from 10 banks to refinance its Canary Wharf project in London, reports indicated Thursday.

The loan was in the form of a floating debenture, financed by six European and four North American banks, the Financial Post said.

The Post said the deal is the first phase of a refinancing package, aimed at reducing Olympia & York's exposure on the 12.5 million square- foot Docklands development.

Olympia & York is attempting to raise about $1 billion more in long- term financing, secured on the 54-storey Canary Wharf Tower, the Post said.

An unnamed source said reports suggesting that Olympia & York's restructuring of its oil and gas interests was part of an effort to raise cash to finance Canary Wharf were speculation.

Olympia & York said Tuesday it would restructure Interhome Energy Ltd. into separate oil and gas and pipeline companies that could lead to the sell off of the pipeline interests.

The source said Canary Wharf was in good shape and is well ahead with leasing efforts.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - The Food and Drug Administration Thursday approved a less toxic drug to cure African sleeping sickness - an often fatal parasitic infection spread by biting flies.

Sleeping sickness strikes about 20,000 people in Africa annually. There are usually fewer than 10 cases per year in the United States, mostly among travelers who have stayed in Africa for a long time.

The new medication, eflornithine hydrochloride or the ''resurrection drug,'' could save about 3,000 patients a year from premature death from sleeping sickness, the World Health Organization said. More than 50 million people in 36 African nations are at risk of contracting sleeping sickness.

''Although the patient population is small here, this is the first approval in any country of this drug for sleeping sickness, and it paves the way for its use in Africa,'' Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sulllivan said in a statement.

Currently, the disease is treated by drugs containing arsenic. Those drugs are associated with a high rate of severe side effects, and up to 10 percent of patients die or suffer serious nervous problems from the therapy.

The new drug, to be marketed under the trade name Ornidyl by Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals of Cincinnati, does not appear to damage the nervous system, the FDA said.

However, the FDA said Ornidyl can cause anemia and potentially dangerous declines in white blood cells and platelets in the blood. The drug's labeling warns that blood cell count must be checked twice a week.

The parasite that causes sleeping sickness is spread by tsetse flies which bite, much the same way as malaria is spread by mosquitoes.

There are two types of African sleeping sickness: the Gambian strain and the Rhodesian strain. The Gambian type starts with fever, progressing to anemia and painful swelling of the lymph glands. Later, the infection spreads to the central nervous system causing extreme mental and physical lethargy, along with tremors, convulsions and eventually coma and death.

The new drug, which is given intravenously, will be labeled for use to treat the later, most serious stage of the Gambian type. Studies have shown that, given intravenously, the drug inhibits the growth of the parasite that causes that infection. The drug has not been proven effective against the Rhodesian type.

Ornidyl costs about $140 for a two-week course of treatment, the World Health Organization said. Merrell Dow plans to distribute the drug at cost to hospital and health centers in Africa, WHO added.

UNITED NATIONS (NOV. 29) UPI - Following is the text of the resolution scheduled to be voted upon by the U.N. Security Council Thursday:

The Security Council,

Recalling and reaffirming its Resolutions 660 (1990), 661 (1990), 662 (1990), 664 (1990), 665 (1990, 666 (1990), 667 (1990), 669 (1990), 670 (1990), 674 (1990) and 677 (1990).

Noting that, despite all efforts by the United Nations, Iraq refuses to comply with its obligations to implement Resolution 660 (1990) and the above subsequent resolutions, in flagrant contempt of the council,

Mindful of its duties and responsibilities under the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance and preservation of international peace and security,

Determined to secure full compliance with its decisions,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Demands that Iraq comply fully with Resolution 660 (1990) and all subsequent relevant resolutions and decides, while maintaining all its decisions, to allow Iraq one final opportunity, as a pause of goodwill, to do so;

2. Authorizes member states cooperating with the government of Kuwait, unless Iraq on or before Jan. 15, 1991, fully implements, as set forth in paragraph 1 above, the foregoing Resolutions, to use all necessary means to uphold and implement the Security Council Resolution 660 and all subsequent relevant resolutions and to restore international peace and security in the area;

3. Requests all states to provide appropriate support for the actions undertaken in pursuance of paragraph 2 of this resolution; and

4. Requests the states concerned to keep the council regularly informed on the progress of actions undertaken pursuant to paragraphs 2 and 3 of this resolution.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) UPI - Coca-Cola Co. and Nestle S.A. said Thursday they have agreed to form a joint company to manufacture and market coffee and tea products worldwide.

The two companies said they had signed a letter of protocol calling for the negotiation of an agreement to form a joint venture company.

The new company will manufacture and market concentrates and beverage bases for the production of ready-to-drink coffee and tea beverages under the Nescafe and Nestea brand names.

The new company, to be owned and funded equally by The Coca-Cola Company and Nestle, will market its products worldwide, with the exception of Japan. It will supply concentrates and beverage bases primarily to the international network of the Coca-Cola business system for manufacture and distribution as ready-to-drink single-strength products.

It will be operated by a management team appointed by a supervisory board comprised equally of representatives of the two companies. The new company is expected to have an initial capitalization of $100 million, equally contributed by the founding companies.

Roy Burry, an analyst for Kidder Peabody & Co. in New York, said the move represented an effort by Coca-Cola to increase the distribution of its coffee and tea products, and especially to get them on supermarket shelves.

The products represent only about 1 percent of Coca-Cola's business, Burry said, and so the move is not expected to produce any reaction from Coca-Cola's competitors.

''It's a smart move but it's of little importance,'' Burry said.

In a joint statement, Roberto C. Goizueta, chairman and chief executive officer of The Coca-Cola Company, and Helmut Maucher, chairman and chief executive officer of Nestle, said, ''This is intended to be a clearly defined and long standing relationship to successfully develop a new business. The joint-venture company will operate as a separate business unit, drawing on the unique and complementary strengths of our two companies.''

Nestle, one of the world's largest food companies, is based in Switzerland.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - President Bush will consider congressional sentiment for a special session to take up the Persian Gulf crisis but isn't inclined to summon lawmakers back to Washington, his spokesman said Thursday.

''I think reluctant is a pretty good word,'' said White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

Calling it premature and unnecessary, the administration so far has resisted the idea of a special session of Congress to discuss or act on U.S. policy in the gulf. ''We still do feel that way,'' Fitzwater said.

But the question gained prominence as the United Nations moved toward backing a U.S. proposal for allowing the use of force in the standoff and more calls surfaced on Capitol Hill for lawmakers to return to town before Jan. 3 and possibly demonstrate a similar show of resolve.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., a proponent of such a session, predicted Thursday night that odds of it occurring before Christman were now ''better than 50-50.''

Fitzwater also lashed out at testimony on Capitol Hill urging Bush to allow more time for economic sanctions to work against Iraq - a refrain echoed by a growing number of Democrats, including Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn of Georgia.

''They were putting a timetable on how long we should wait,'' the spokesman said of testimony Thursday by two former chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. ''We have waited. We are waiting. We believe the sanctions are the primary method, but we're not willing to say how long we're willing to wait.''

Vice President Dan Quayle, speaking at Seton Hall University, also raised the specter that the United States risks a greater loss of life if it waits too long before moving in the dispute.

''The longer we refrain from action against Iraq, the more time Saddam Hussein has to tighten his grip on Kuwait, and the harder it may be to break that grip if and when war comes,'' Quayle said in South Orange, N.J.

''Does patience today risk greater American casualties tomorrow? And if so, is this a moral course of action?''

Fitzwater said Bush would hear out congressmen he will meet with Friday at the White House, but was not likely to change his mind.

''The situation is a little different now in the sense we've moved down the road in terms of the U.N. consideration of the matter,'' he said, ''but essentially our position has not changed.''

As to what such a session might produce, the spokesman added, ''We don't have any speculation on content at all because there's been no discussion. Well there's been discussion, but there's been no decision to go ahead with it.''

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, added his voice Thursday to those seeking a special session. And Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said such a meeting would help develop a national consensus on actions in the gulf.

The panel's senior Republican, John Warner of Virginia, said, ''It is my hope that the Congress and the president can establish as nearly as possible a consensus and common goals and that process I think should get under way now before the Christmas season.''

The administration also was watching the United Nations, where members of the 15-member Security Council arranged to vote on the new resolution approving the use of force in the standoff if Saddam has not withdrawn his troops from Kuwait by Jan. 15.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - Four years after he was imprisoned by the KGB and threatened with the death penalty for espionage, Nicholas Daniloff said Thursday he will be going back to the Soviet Union, this time as a university lecturer.

After 13 days of imprisonment and interrogation, Daniloff was released by the Soviet authorities in August 1986 and permitted to leave with his family. He had been entrapped by the KGB, apparently to provide trading material to win the release of a Soviet agent, Andrei Zakharov, arrested by the FBI in New York the previous month.

Daniloff, a former United Press International reporter and in 1986 a correspondent for U.S. News and World Report, was preparing to leave Moscow for home after a five-year stint in Moscow.

In the police trap, a former news source known as Misha handed him a package at a subway station. KGB officers instantly arrested him, bundled him into a van and drove him to Lefortovo prison where he was told that he faced the death penalty for espionage.

That began an international tug of war that ended a month later after the U.S. government began ordering the Soviets to drastically cut the size of their mission staff at the United Nations, a notorious cover for KGB agents operating the United States. The White House flatly rejected a straight swap of Daniloff for Zakharov.

After the U.S. government ordered the expulsion of 80 Soviet diplomats, most of them intelligence agents operating under embassy cover, a deal was finally made. Daniloff was released without a trial and Zakharov was permitted to enter a nolo contendere plea in federal court. After a brief non-jury trial, Zakharov was convicted and expelled from the United States.

As Daniloff explained in his book, ''Two Lives, One Russia,'' (Houghton Miflin 1988) the Soviet Union is a kind of addiction for him. His great-great-grandfather, a Russian noble, had also been imprisoned and Daniloff had spent part of his time in Moscow digging up records of his ancestor's political actions against the Tsar.

With perestroika now flowering in the Soviet Union and the KGB giving open news conferences admitting past crimes, Daniloff applied in February for a Soviet visa to go back to Moscow on a visit. The Soviet government said it would grant a visa, but only if the State Department granted a visa for a Soviet ''journalist,'' who was, in fact, a well- known KGB agent. The State Department refused.

Daniloff, now a professor at Northeastern University in the Boston area, applied again when his school set up an exchange program with Moscow State University.

He asked Secretary of State James Baker to raise his request with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze in one of their meetings this year. Shevardnadze agreed to the Baker request and issued orders that Daniloff should be granted a visa, without conditions attached. In 1987, the Supreme Soviet had ordered the charges against Daniloff to be dropped and the case was closed.

Daniloff plans to go to Moscow in May for three or four weeks to deliver a series of lectures to Soviet students on U.S. journalism.

Asked if he has any trepidation about going back to the place where he was told he faced possible execution for spying, Daniloff said, ''My fear is no more than 50 percent of what it was when I left.''

''I always said I'd return.''

LONDON (NOV. 29) UPI - Stock prices closed slightly lower in cautious trading Thursday on the London International Stock Exchange as the expected passage of a resolution in the United Nations authorizing force in the Persian Gulf revived worries of a shooting war.

Meanwhile, share prices closed little changed in directionless trading on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange.

London's blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which fell 15.2 points Wednesday, slipped 8.7 points to 2,135.6. The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 11.4 points to 1,674.8.

Volume amounted to around 415 million shares compared with 381 million shares changing hands on Wednesday.

The prospect of a shooting war kept investors wary throughout the day, with very little activity, analysts said.

Analysts said most professional investors were content to wait as foreign ministers from the world's most powerful nations gathered in New York to vote on a U.N. resolution authorizing the use of force against Iraq.

The vote in the U.N. Security Council would be the 12th and most serious taken since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, and appeared to have at least tacit support from all five permanent members and a majority of the council's 15 member states.

The resolution would allow the U.S.-led multinational force assembled in the Persian Gulf to attack Iraq and Iraqi-occupied Kuwait if Baghdad's forces do not withdraw by Jan. 15.

On the economic front, the Bank of England reported Britain's narrow money supply M-0 rose a seasonally adjusted 4.0 percent in the year to October - within the government's target range of 1 percent to 5 percent for growth in the fiscal year ended March 31, 1990.

The M-4 index, which includes bank and building society lending to the private sector, rose a seasonally adjusted $8.74 billion in October, unchnaged from its previous estimate.

M-5, the broadest aggregate, was also flat in October. In the latest 12 months M-5 rose 14.1 percent.

On the trading floor, among the most widely traded stocks, debt concerns at Barclay's Bank PLC revived bearishness in leading bank stocks. Barclays fell 20 cents to $7.06.

Rising oil prices pushed oil stocks higher. Shell added 6 cents to $8.77 and British Petroleum gained 2 cents to $6.51.

Bellweather chemicals group Imperial Chemical Industries 36 cents to $16.47 following gloomy remarks by its chairman Wednesday.

British Aerospace shares fell 14 cents to $9.95 after Britain's largest manufacturer announced cutbacks in its military aircraft divisions.

BAA, the airport management company, fell 19 cents to $7.48 on a block trade of 23 million shares sold by ADT, the Bermuda-based holding company.

Information group Reuters shares fell 53 cents to $11.59 after announcing its chairman would retire.

Book retailers W.H. Smith gained 12 cents to $6.23 after announcing expansion in the U.S. market.

Stock prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange closed slightly lower in thin trading. The closely watched German Stock Index, which added 5.36 points Wednesday, slipped 1.70 points to 1,418.92.

Analysts said investors took a wait-and-see attitude in advance of the expected United Nations resolution vote on Iraq.

OSLO, NORWAY (NOV. 29) UPI - Authorities are offering prostitutes a free weekend at a hotel to talk about their trade as part of a public campaign to stem the spread of AIDS.

''Would you like to get together off the street and get to know some more girls?'' asks an Oslo's Environment Agency pamphlet being distributed among prostitutes.

''The Health Directorate is organizing a free weekend at a hotel to talk about AIDS and prostitution and to enjoy each other's company,'' the pamphlet says.''Would you be interested in taking part in something like that?''

Head Physicican Finn Jensen of the environment agency said the organization will await reaction from prostitutes before continuing preparations.

''If we get enough interested responses, we will go ahead,'' he said.

The pamphlet also contains a five-page questionnaire on prostitutes' sex lives their attitudes toward AIDS, confidence in authorities and whether they have been exposed to police violence.

Invitations are being delivered to women in Oslo's red light district by two former prostitutes employed by the agency as social workers.

PITTSBURGH (NOV. 29) UPI - How do you replace 6,442 windows in the Empire State Building? One by one, of course, according to the Pittsburgh company that is doing the job.

Three Rivers Aluminum Co., better known as TRACO, is crafting the windows for the landmark 102-story building, some individually because of sizing differentials. The project is the first wholesale window replacement on the building since it opened in 1931 and is needed because some of the original windows leak air and on become caked with ice on higher floors.

TRACO officials say the new windows - energy conserving double-paned tempered glass models - are being installed at night when offices are empty. And that means the $5 million project could take up to two years to complete.

There are four basic window sizes in the Empire State Building but each opening is being measured individually, TRACO spokesman Phil Abraham said.

''If it's off a fraction of an inch (from the standard), we will custom build that window for that opening,'' he said.

One provison of TRACO's contract called for it to provide an exact match the the rusty shade of red that outlines the original windows in the historic landmark.

''We sent that (shade) to PPG Industries (also of Pittsburgh), they took their computer and matched it exactly and formulated the paint,'' Abraham said. ''This is the exact color from the day the building opened its front door.''

TRACO also hand-made 25 bronze-rimmed windows for the Statue of Liberty's crown during its recent restoration.

''The Statue of Liberty wasn't just a job. The Empire State Building isn't just a job,'' Abraham said. ''It's a prestigious project.''

JERUSALEM (NOV. 29) UPI - Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Thursday that Israel has not placed an embargo on new ideas for the peace process but declined to outline fresh proposals in advance of his meeting next month with President Bush.

But concrete efforts to further the Middle East peace process would have to wait until the Persian Gulf crisis is resolved because ''today it is difficult to talk logically with people,'' Army Radio quoted the prime minister as saying.

Shamir also criticized U.N. attempts to send observers and investigating teams to Israel and the occupied territories, saying the efforts fueled friction in the region.

The prime minister met with Bush more than a year ago and before the breakup of the Labor-Likud coalition government. Shamir now presides over a Likud-led coalition with the center-left Labor Party in the opposition.

In May 1989, the Israeli government outlined a peace proposal that included elections in the Israeli-occupied territories, but no new plans have been approved since the right-wing Likud gained control of the government.

Shamir dismissed as ''jokes'' reports in Israeli newspapers that he would not bring new ideas on the peace process to Washington next month. ''Nobody said such a thing and we don't have an embargo on new ideas,'' he said. ''It's just not true. If there is a need, then there will be new ideas. And there are new ideas.''

But Shamir declined to reveal any fresh proposals he might propose to the U.S. administration.

Shamir took a swipe at Washington's role at the United Nations during recent attempts to send U.N. observers to the occupied territories, especially after the Oct. 8 slaying of at least 17 Palestinians by Israeli security forces on the Temple Mount. Shamir hinted that Washington's power was insufficient and the Bush administration could be ''seduced to follow the road of giving in to extremism our enemies propose.''

''That tendency of increasing the involvement of the United Nations in Israel in different and strange ways - by sending different delegations, investigative committees, observers, visitors, ombudsmen - this entire tendency worsens the atmosphere,'' Shamir said.

Earlier Thursday, Justice Minister Dan Meridor dismissed the idea of an ombudsman for the occupied territories.

''Whoever expects that the Security Council, of which countries like Cuba and Yemen are members, will be a court that determines what is justice and what is not concerning Israel, I suggest that he will wake up from those dreams,'' Meridor said.

(NOV. 29) UPI - Push may yet come to shove today as the 15 member U-N Security Council prepares for a session in New York that could lead to a resolution on using force against Iraq. The resolution before the five permanent and 10 rotating Security Council members reportedly gives Baghdad until January 15th to decide if it wants to voluntarily get out of occupied Iraq. The United States has pushed hard for use of the so- called ''military option,'' and Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas says he expects that President Bush will call a special session of Congress before Christmas to get additional backing for his stand.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, who has backed the U-N in action against Iraq, says there is still a chance that war can be averted if Saddam Hussein decides to peacefully withdraw from Kuwait. The comments came as Mubarak voted in a Cairo suburb in parliamentary elections. Most opposition parties have boycotted the election that Mubarak's ruling National Democratic Party is expected to win. Thousands of police are guarding the 23-thousand polling stations throughout Egypt, and there are NO reports of any major problems.

A Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman bristled today over Western reports that prominent dissidents have been charged with major political crimes. The spokesman ripped into Western media for what he termed an ''inappropriate'' concern with China's human rights record. The Chinese foreign minister will meet with President Bush this weekend in what is seen as the most serious breach yet in the sanctions imposed on China after it used troops to crush a pro-democracy movement last year.

Former President Jimmy Carter says he would be willing to go to Lebanon to monitor elections if the war-torn country can end its 15- year-old civil war. But Carter said he does NOT think anyone anticipates ''quick'' elections in the nation. Carter is discussing the situation in Lebanon and economic development in the Mideast in a private two-day meeting with Lebanese, Syrian, Jordanian and Israeli leaders at the Carter Presidential Center in Atlanta.

The worst blizzard yet this season slammed into Minnesota with howling winds and cold temperatures, as warm-weather records were being set in the East ahead of a cold front. On the West coast, more bad weather news for Washington state. Rain, winds, floods and winter storm advisories are in the Washington forecast, with as much as 18 inches of snow expected in the mountains. Winds of up to 80 miles an hour blasted Montana as the blizzard marched on to Minnesota.

Air Force meteorologists say there is a 70 percent chance of favorable weather for the night-time launch Sunday of the shuttle Columbia. It comes just 12 days after the shuttle Atlantis returned from its top-secret military mission. PANAMA CITY, PANAMA (NOV. 29) UPI - A public opinion poll published Thursday shows that support for the U.S.-installed Panamanian government is slipping, as the one-year anniversary of the U.S. invasion approaches.

In a poll published by the Panama City newspaper La Prensa, 62 percent of respondents said they would not vote for President Guillermo Endara's coalition government if new elections were held, while 38 percent of those surveyed said they would support the government.

Endara took power during the Dec. 20, 1989, U.S. invasion that ousted military leader Manuel Noriega.

The government received overwhelming support in a Gallup poll conducted in January but Panama has been plagued with economic troubles in the past year, while Endara is viewed by many Panamanians as a weak president.

The economy is expected to grow by about 5 percent this year, according to the Panamanian Chamber of Commerce, but unemployment remains at 25 percent.

Union workers are threatening a national strike on Dec. 5 to protest the government's austere economic plan while less than half of a $461 million U.S. aid package has been dispursed.

''I don't think the poll will embarass anyone,'' said Vice President Guillermo Ford, when asked about the poll. ''We are trying day and night to find all the solutions to the serious problems of this country.

The La Prensa poll was conducted by the Panamanian company Dichter and Neira between Nov. 8-13 and surveyed 902 people.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - Scientists Thursday linked an inherited genetic defect to a rare cancer syndrome, a step that may help detect people at risk for the syndrome and shed light on the genetic basis of more common cancers.

Only about 100 families worldwide are known to suffer from Li- Fraumeni Syndrome, which renders them highly susceptible to breast cancer, various childhood cancers, brain tumors, bone cancer and leukemia.

Each family member has a 50-50 chance of inheriting the defective gene, and those who get it face about a 50 percent chance of developing cancer by age 30 and a 90 percent chance of getting cancer by age 70, researchers said. Only about 1 percent of the general population develops cancer by age 30.

In a study of four families with the syndrome, a team of cancer researchers identified the genetic culprit as a defective gene known as p53, which when healthy carries instructions for production of a protein known to suppress tumor growth.

The work opens the door to tests to detect which members of Li- Fraumeni families carry the defective gene, but researchers from Massachussetts General Hospital in Boston, the National Cancer Institute and University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston are proceeding cautiously until counseling and health care services can be assured for patients.

''At the moment, we are not testing anybody who is healthy,'' said the NCI's Frederick Li. ''It is devastating to be told you have an 80 or 90 percent chance of getting cancer.''

''The main benefit of this would be that some people could be told that even though they have strong family histories of cancer, they personally do not carry the gene and they can go in peace,'' Li said.

For gene carriers, the test may help detect cancers at early, more easily treatable stages and may also encourage such people to avoid risk factors, like smoking, that may trigger cancer. However, even when such patients are cured of one cancer they stand a substantial risk of getting another cancer, Li said.

Every person has about 100,000 genes - half inherited from their mother and half from their father - that carry the blueprint for everything from eye color to the risk of developing disease.

Previous work has shown about half of all common tumors have defective p53 genes, but researchers think most of those mutations are not inherited and occur during cancer development.

In contrast, Li-Fraumeni Syndrome patients are born with one healthy copy and one defective version of the p53 gene. Cancers appear to develop after some unknown factor - possibly environmental toxins like cigarette smoke - damages the healthy gene, lifting the natural brake on uncontrolled cell growth.

''This is a very exciting observation. It emphasizes the idea that there is a group of genes that are suppressor genes that play a major role in the development of human cancers,'' said Dr. Bert Vogelstein of Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions in Baltimore.

Other cancers that have been tied to inherited defects in tumor suppressor genes are retinoblastoma, a rare eye cancer, Wilm's tumor, which affects the kidneys and neurofibromatosis, which inolves the nervous system.

Besides showing that p53 mutations can be inherited in a rare cancer syndrome, Vogelstein said the findings raise the possiblity that other families more mildly predisposed to cancer may have similar inherited defects.

''Li-Fraumeni syndrome could be the tip of the iceberg,'' Robert Weinberg of Massachusetts Institute of Technology said in an article accompanying the study published in the journal Science.

Researchers are now trying to find out whether families with above average rates of breast or childhood cancer, but not as high as Li- Fraumeni families, may have similar inherited abnormalities.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - Japanese tourists who can't wait to see Walt Disney World will be able to make faster connections in Washington, due to a cooperative agreement announced Thursday by USAir and All Nippon Airways.

A spokesman for USAir said the airline plans to launch daily service Dec. 15 linking Washington Dulles International Airport and Orlando, Fla., to accommodate All Nippon passengers traveling to and from Tokyo.

''We will be a connecting service, to take the folks right on through,'' said USAir spokesman David Shipley.

The airlines said they also plan to seek government approval for ''code sharing'' on the Tokyo-Washington-Orlando route. Approval would allow the carriers to list flights under the same code in computers used by airlines and travel agents, Shipley said.

The cooperation is expected to trim about an hour off the travel time between Tokyo and Orlando, Shipley said.

The two airlines said the Orlando connection represents the first fruit of an agreement signed Thursday in Tokyo by ANA President Akio Kondo and USAir Group Inc. Chairman Edwin I. Colodny. USAir Group is the parent company of USAir.

The airlines said they plan to explore other opportunities for cooperation, including the coordination of scheduled service, joint promotional and advertising campaigns and the development of joint tour packages.

Shipley said the airlines plan to explore opportunities for coordinating scheduling on the West Coast, particularly in Los Angeles, where USAir maintains a strong presence.

GRAFTON, IL (NOV. 29) UPI - Larry Wright's guests Saturday will be wearing the latest in earthquake protective gear.

''We told people to wear a suit of armor, a hard hat, football helmet, shoulder pads, whatever,'' Wright said Thursday.

Wright and his wife, Marg, have invited 55 friends to shake it up Saturday night at their newly completed Grafton home, perched seemingly pecariously atop a bluff overlooking the confluence of the Illinois and Mississippi rivers.

Wright said the idea for the party came from his healthy disdain for Iben Browning's prediction that an earthquake Dec. 3 will rock the New Madrid Fault.

''I have a weird sense of humor,'' he confessed. ''I like to make fun of things that other people take seriously.

''I don't think we're in any great danger on Dec. 3,'' the 55-year- old retiree of a St. Louis advertising specialty firm said. ''If I thought there was going to be an earthquake I wouldn't be having a party.''

Wright said he'll don a leg brace to get into the partying mood. Wife Marg said she will wear an apron as protective gear.

''It's not a lead apron. That would be too heavy to wear,'' she said. ''It will just be a regular apron. That way I won't get dust on my clothes when the house falls in.''

The play room in the 6,000-plus-square-foot, 12-room house about 250 feet above the rivers will be decorated with black and yellow disaster area streamers, balloons and napkins proclaiming ''It's the Big One.''

Guest will be treated to an earthquake cake and an aftermath jello mold topped off with skewed, catastrophe-struck monopoly houses.

The more adventurous of Wright's guest can weather the rumbling of such rock favorites as ''Shake, Rattle and Roll,'' ''A Whole Lot Of Shakin' Going On,'' and ''I Feel The Earth Move Under My Feet,'' in the second-story wheelhouse.

For the less brave, kiddy-cocktails will be served in the basement of the brick, boomerang-shaped residence, Wright said.

Saturday's festivities are a breaking in - or possibly a breaking down - party for the Wright's Tara Point home where each room has a view of the river. The Wrights bought the property 12 years ago and finished building their house with a view moving in last month.

Of course the evening wouldn't be complete without a guest appearance by the quake predictor himself.

Wright's friend, Butch Schoultz, will be decked out in scholarly cap and gown and deliver a lecture on what to do when an earthquake strikes.

For instance, bend over and kiss something goodbye?

''It will be something along that line,'' Wright said smiling. ''A little comedy routine.''

ROME (NOV. 29) UPI - An unofficial delegation of Italian pacifists that returned home from Iraq with 68 Italian hostages said Thursday that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein is ''ready to dialogue'' with anybody and urged the Italian government to negotiate the return of other hostages.

The delegation was headed by Archbishop Hilarion Capucci, former Greek Catholic Patriarch of Jerusalem, who said he planned to return to Baghdad Sunday to seek freedom for more hostages, including non- Italians.

Capucci's delegation flew into Rome's Ciampino military airport late Wednesday with 68 Italian hostages from Iraq. Hundreds of relatives, many of them weeping, greeted them in emotional scenes.

He said Saddam told the delegation he is ''ready to dialogue, without any preconditions, even with those who are opposed to my positions.''

''I believe this offers a hope'' of avoiding war, Capucci said.

Capucci said Saddam and his aides listened readily to what the delegation had to say.

''They do not want war, they are looking for a way out,'' he said. ''The real solution is a global one, a solution of all the problems in the region.''

The official position of the Italian government is to discourage unofficial trips to Baghdad to win freedom for hostages on grounds they undermine the solid front against Saddam endorsed by the European Community.

But the 68 hostages were flown to Rome from Amman, Jordan, aboard a plane of the state-run Alitalia airline provided by the office of Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti and they were met at the airport by Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs Ivo Butini.

Andreotti's office also sent an Alitalia Airbus with medical supplies to Baghdad Saturday, the day the pacifist mission had a 55-minute meeting with Saddam Hussein.

At a news conference Thursday, Capucci said he met with Andreotti and the prime minister asked him to thank the members of his pacifist delegation ''for their work and the results it achieved.''

Capucci has been living in Rome since serving a three-year prison term in Israel for running arms to Palestinians in the occupied territories in the 1970s.

At the news conference members of the pacifist delegation called on the government, Parliament, political forces and labor unions to commit themselves to work for peace and humanitarian action to free the hostages.

So far around 260 Italian hostages have returned home as a result of unofficial missions to Baghdad and a foreign ministry spokesman said 180 Italian hostages remain in Iraq.

ATLANTA (NOV. 29) UPI - At least 57 people have been poisoned by a drug illicitly used for body-building, weight control and as a sleep aid, federal health officials used Thursday.

The Centers for Disease Control said it received the first reports of poisoning from the drug, gamma hydroxy butrate or GHB, in early August from the San Francisco Bay Area Regional Poison Control Center. Those reports prompted checks of other poison control centers that unearthed similar poisonings in eight other states.

California reported 25 cases including 17 from the San Francisco area; Georgia 15, all from the Atlanta area; Florida 7, 6 from the Tampa area; South Carolina 3; Minnesota 2; Arizona 2; and one each from Ohio, Virginia, and Texas.

''Although no deaths have been reported, most patients have required emergency room care; at least 11 were hospitalized, and nine required ventilator support or other intensive care,'' the CDC said.

''GHB has been marketed illicitly to body builders since May. It also has been promoted illicitly for weight control and as a sleep aid,'' the CDC reported.

In addition, GHB has been illicitly touted as a ''replacement'' for L-tryptophan, a food supplement that the government recalled in November 1988 after an outbreak of illness that killed more than 27 people.

The health agency sais GHB ''allegedly produces a 'high' which has led to its further used as an illicit drug.''

The federal health agency said the poisoning victims reported they had taken one-half to 3 teaspoons of GHB dissolved in water. Within 15 to 60 minutes one or more of the following symptoms occurred: vomiting, drowsiness, dizziness, loss of consciousness, irregular and depressed breathing and tremors. Also reported were seizure-like activity, respiratory arrest, low blood pressure and abnormally slow beating of the heart.

Some of the victims were found to also have been using other psychoactive drugs, including alcoholic drinks, amphetamines and marijuana, the investigators said.

In the U.S. the only legal use of GHB has been under Food and Drug Administration control for research and treatment of such ailments as narcolepsy. In Europe it has been used as an anesthetic adjunct and to treat alcohol withdrawal.

On Nov. 8, the FDA issued an advisory warning that non-authorized use of GHB was unsafe, illegal and should stop. ''Ill persons, physicians and emergency room staff are encouraged to reported suspected cases of GHB-related illness to their regional poison control centers and state health departments.''

The CDC said the FDA is investigating the source of the illicit distribution of GHB. Sale of the drug has been banned by California and Florida.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - "The economy stinks," said David Hersh, echoing the opinion of pawnbrokers across America. "We're beginning to see a lot of middle-class white people pawning things," said Hersh, manager of Sam's Pawnbrokers. "They're bringing in things like computers and expensive jewelry."

Sam's is in a predominantly black neighborhood only a mile from the White House but heavily infested with drug-related crime. "People are pawning like crazy," said Hersh, who knows a recession when he sees one, "but our sales aren't nearly as good as last year."

Hersh credits the sagging economy with bringing him some customers who in better times don't do their Christmas shopping in pawnshops. "People are coming in here looking for bargains in big-ticket items, " Hersh said. "Antique watches are hot now. People are buying them for Christmas presents."

At The Pawnbroker in Bridgeport, Conn., proprietor Joe Davis said, "Our customers are pawning a lot. This is a down-in-the-dumps town, an old factory town. Bridgeport's going backwards. The economy here stinks.

"By the 15th of the month, my customers are going to be bombing me with everything they own so they can buy their kids something for Christmas," said Davis, who believes pawnshops have an undeserved bad reputation. "We're like a bank for the little people," he said. "You won't see a big bank lending anybody money on a TV set."

In Dallas, Lou Williams reported his business was brisk at Big State Pawn in an upscale neighborhood on the north side of the city. The pawnbroker said even the Texas economy shows faint signs of improving.

"Some of our customers drive here in Mercedes and Jaguars," Williams said. "Some come to pawn and some come to buy. They can buy a piece of jewelry in here for $600 that would cost them $2,000 in a name-brand store."

At Big Easy Pawn Shop in New Orleans, Perry Peace had no complaints. He acknowledged the continuing recession in the Oil Belt states, but added, "The pawnshop business does well in any economy. When times are bad we lend more, of course, but we also sell more then because people are looking for bargains. "We're the poor man's bank," Peace explained. "Even when times are good, the working poor will still be with us."

Business was "quite slow" at The Pawn Shop in downtown Salt Lake City, according to Rachel Kezerian, who works there. "There's some Christmas shopping but merchandise is moving slowly," she said. As for pawning to get money for Christmas shopping, Kezerian said, "It's still too early. The desperate hours come later."

At Miami's CASH USA, owner B.J. Miner attributed the booming business at her pawnshop to the weak economy. "They're coming in to pawn jewelry, VCRs, TVs, stereo equipment, just about anything," Miner said. "We're getting people who tell us they've never been in a pawn shop in their lives."

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - Another bank regulator singled out Sen. Dennis DeConcini Thursday for "negotiating on behalf" of an alleged savings and loan kingpin during a 1987 meeting crucial to accusations of influence-peddling against the so-called Keating Five senators.

Michael Patriarca, head of the San Francisco regional office of the Office of Thrift Supervision and former S&L investigator for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, gave his version of an April 9, 1987, meeting between himself and three other bank regulators and Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., DeConcini, D-Ariz., John Glenn, D-Ohio, John McCain, R-Ariz., and Donald Riegle, D-Mich.

Earlier, former bank board Chairman Edwin Gray completed his third day as a witness before the Senate ethics committee, which is seeking to determine whether the senators applied improper pressure on regulators to benefit former S&L operator Charles Keating Jr. and his California-based Lincoln Savings and Loan. Keating contributed $1.3 million to the senators' political campaigns and other pet causes.

On Wednesday, Gray testified that DeConcini was the only senator to do "something wrong" during a private meeting he had with four of the senators on April 2, 1987, by offering a deal on behalf of Keating involving withdrawing a regulation limiting risky S&L investments in exchange for Lincoln making more home loans.

The rough day on the witness stand featured several attacks on his credibility and Thursday Gray complained of "real attempts to defame me, to assassinate my character."

Gray and the other bank regulators are the chief accusing witnesses against the senators. Patriarca said during the April 9 meeting in DeConcini's Capitol Hill office that the regulators "got the full-court press" from the lawmakers.

"Senator DeConcini seemed to be the host or master of ceremonies," Patriarca said. "He talked more frequently than anyone else. If was my impression, quite frankly, that Senator DeConcini was negotiating on behalf of Lincoln."

Patriarca and the other three regulators present at the meeting were deeply involved in an investigation into unsafe lending and financial practices and allegations of falsifying documents by Keating and Lincoln.

Of the alleged negotiating, Patriarca said DeConcini was "attempting to get us the regulators, to change our position on the examination ... to (one) more closely aligned with the position that Lincoln espoused."

In addition, Patriarca testified that Keating had unsuccessfully sought to give a job to his wife in Lincoln's parent company, Arizona-based American Continental Corp. On Monday, Gray testified that Keating unsuccessfully sought to hire him out of his job on the bank board with a lucrative offer to join Keating's businesses.

The eighth day of testimony before the panel featured the conclusion of the stormy appearance of Gray. Lawyers representing the senators continued to seek to establish Gray as waging a vendetta against the lawmakers.

Charles Ruff, Glenn's lawyer, asked Gray if Congress had been "bought and sold by the thrift lobby" during his tenure on the bank board, from 1983-87.

"I think they were greatly influenced," Gray responded. "I think the influence of the thrift lobby killed all of the reforms that we sought - in fact, I know that - from the time I became chairman of the Home Loan Bank Board."

William Taylor, Cranston's lawyer who heatedly attacked Gray's credibility one day earlier, pressed the witness on why he said and did nothing for more than two years before publicly protesting his treatment by the senators.

"I didn't consciously make a decision to remain silent," he said, adding that he was provoked by the senators after at least two called him a liar in press interviews.

"I was defending my honor when I was called a liar," Gray said. "Any man with honor would defend his honor against those kinds of charges if he knew that the charges that he was a liar were false. That's all I did."

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - The Environmental Protection Agency is investigating charges that a chemical company improperly manipulated scientific studies to minimize the possible health threat posed by dioxin, officials confirmed Thursday.

Disclosure of the EPA probe came as Greenpeace, the international environmental group, released a report detailing alleged irregularities in studies sponsored by Monsanto Co., a maker of pesticides and other chemical products.

Greenpeace also filed a petition with the EPA urging the agency to tighten its controls on dioxin. The petition maintained the EPA heavily relied on the Monsanto studies in setting its regulatory policies, but agency officials said that was not the case.

The petition cited "credible concerns that the agency's existing (dioxin) human effects data base is polluted by incorrect information, that the human health effects of (dioxin) may be far worse than originally believed, and that the polluted data has led the agency to 'go soft' on (dioxin)."

In its report, Greenpeace said the EPA's Office of Criminal Enforcement had begun preliminary inquiries into possible manipulation of three key dioxin studies sponsored by Monsanto.

Asked about the Greenpeace report, an EPA official who asked not to be identified said: "There is an investigation underway." The official declined to elaborate on the specifics of the investigation.

Glynn Young, a spokesman for Monsanto, said the company had not been notified of any EPA investigation and that it stood by the studies as sound and unbiased. At the same time, he said Monsanto had asked the EPA to review the studies again in light of the allegations.

Young said the allegations against the studies arose from litigation against Monsanto in which Greenpeace was an active participant. He characterized the Greenpeace report as a "rehash" of issues raised in court.

The Monsanto studies have been cited by some scientists in challenging federal policies that generally categorize dioxin as a highly toxic agent to humans. Those critics say while laboratory animal studies suggest high toxicity, harmful effects have not been verified in exposed humans.

Dioxin is a by-product in the manufacture of certain pesticides and herbicides most notably Agent Orange, the defoliant widely used during the Vietnam War. It also is generated in incineration and the bleaching of wood pulp for white paper products,

The three Monsanto studies at issue examined health effects among workers at the company's herbicide plant in Nitro, W.Va., who were exposed to dioxin during routine operations from 1955 to 1977 as well as in a 1949 industrial accident that released larger amounts of the contaminant.

The studies, published from 1980 to 1983, are important because they represent one of the most comprehensive assessments of dioxin's health impact on humans.

The Monsanto studies found no conclusive evidence of serious health effects - such as cancer or liver damage - due to dioxin exposure. As with other studies the Monsanto reports suggest the only consistent ailment among exposed workers was chloracne, a severe form of skin lesions.

Among other allegations, the Greenpeace report suggested the Monsanto studies were manipulated in that:

- Disease rates among dioxin-exposed workers were compared to illness in a "control" group of workers who supposedly were not exposed, but actually were. As a result, the report said, differences in disease rates between the two groups were muted.

- Dioxin-exposed workers were arbitrarily placed into different groups that were studied separately. The groups were so small in number that it became virtually impossible to detect statistically significant increases in disease among exposed workers compared to the unexposed.

- Some cases of cancer and heart disease among dioxin-exposed workers inexplicably were excluded from some studies.

Greenpeace said its report, entitled "Science for Sale," was based on independent analysis of the Monsanto studies, internal Monsanto memos and the sworn testimony of Monsanto employees and consultants.

EPA officials said that, as with other chemicals, the agency largely developed its dioxin policies on the basis of laboratory animal studies in which relatively low doses of dioxin caused cancer, birth defects and liver, kidney and nerve damage.

Those health effects have not been observed in studies of Vietnam veterans exposed to Agent Orange nor in forestry workers with long-term occupational exposure to dioxin-contaminated herbicides.

The EPA has acknowledged the uncertainty about dioxin's impact on human health but the agency has decided to err on the side of caution and has pushed the paper industry and others to reduce dioxin contamination.

RALEIGH, N.C. (NOV. 29) UPI - George Shinn, owner of the Charlotte Hornets of the National Basketball Association, has acquired ownership rights for the Raleigh-Durham franchise of the World League of American Football, it was announced Thursday.

In his first decision as franchise owner, Shinn, 49, named Roman Gabriel, former star quarterback at North Carolina State and with the Los Angeles Rams, as the club's general manager. Gabriel has served as President of the Class AA Charlotte Knights and Class A Gastonia, N.C., Rangers minor league baseball teams owned by Shinn.

An agreement is expected to be reached shortly for the Raleigh-Durham franchise to play its five home games at Carter-Finley Stadium, site of Gabriel's collegiate heroics on the campus of North Carolina State University.

''I am elated and excited about getting the World League franchise and particularly about putting it in the Raleigh-Durham market,'' said Shinn. ''I think the Raleigh-Durham area is one of the best untapped sports markets in our part of the country. The area has proved itself as a successful football market by the strong support it has given to the great universities in the area. All of the international business connections of the Research Triangle area are a plus for the franchise.''

Shinn's Hornets set NBA attendance records for an expansion team by averaging 23,178 fans in its first season. Including Wednesday night's game against Milwaukee, the Hornets have sold out 78 consecutive home games in its three-year history. Charlotte holds two of four top attendance totals in NBA history.

The WLAF has now named franchise owners in five cities. The league announced Wednesday that Raj Bhathal, owner of one of the largest swimwear companies in the United States, has been named majority owner for the Orlando, Fla., franchise.

Previous owners include Birmingham's Gavin Maloff, former owner of the NBA's Houston Rockets; San Antonio's Larry J. Benson, attorney, and Tom Landry, Hall of Fame football coach; and Sacramento's Fred Anderson, founder and owner of one of America's largest privately-owned companies, Pacific Coast Building Products, Inc.

Lynn said owners will be announced in Barcelona, Montreal and New York in the coming weeks. The league will own and operate the London and Frankfurt franchises.

The WLAF will begin play March 23, 1991, with a 10-week regular season climaxing with semifinal playoffs June 1-2 and the World Bowl June 9. Orlando will be the site of the first league meeting, player evaluation combine and player allocation draft during the period of Feb. 8-24.

Games will be televised by ABC Sports each Sunday during the season, with Brent Musberger and Dick Vermeil providing commentary. Also, USA Network will cablecast primetime games every Saturday and Monday night. TV 3 Catalunya of Spain will also carry World League games, while negotiations with other European national networks should be finalized in the next few weeks.

In adding Gabriel as the team's general manager, Shinn has hired a sports administrator with a legendary football resume. A member of the North Carolina Sports Hall of Fame and the College Football Hall of Fame, the 50-year-old Gabriel began his athletic career at New Hanover High School in Wilmington, N.C., and later starred at quarterback at North Carolina State in Raleigh. He earned All-Conference, All-America and Scholastic All-America honors with the Wolfpack.

After graduating from North Carolina State in 1962, Gabriel played 11 years with the Rams where he was selected All-Pro four times and named the NFL's Most Valuable Player in 1969. He spent five seasons with the Philadelphia Eagles where he was chosen NFL Comeback Player of the Year in 1973.

ST. PETERSBURG, FL (NOV. 29) UPI - Two traditional Davis Cup rivals are ready to slug it out for world tennis supremacy this weekend on a controversial surface.

The United States and Australia, who met for the Davis Cup title 31 consecutive times between 1937 and 1973, resume the world-class competition Friday with a pair of singles matches at the new Florida Suncoast Dome. The best-of-five Davis Cup final also features doubles competition Saturday and a concluding round of two singles matches Sunday.

The U.S. contingent picked a slow clay surface in an effort to frustrate the Australians and their traditional attacking game. Michael Chang, who won the 1989 French Open on red clay, takes a 3-1 Davis Cup record into Saturday's second match against Darren Cahill, after American Andre Agassi opens the competition against Richard Fromberg, making his Davis Cup debut.

''I think the Australians anticipated a good shot at winning and now they're feeling like their chances have been cut considerably and maybe that's causing a little spitefulness,'' says Agassi, the No. 4 player in the world. ''When I get on that court, I'm going to put somebody through a nightmare.''

Australian team captain Neale Fraser pulled a surprise in Thursday's draw by relegating 1987 Wimbledon champion Pat Cash to doubles competition, teamed with John Fitzgerald against 1989 Wimbledon doubles champions Jim Pugh and Rick Leach. Cash, who severed an Achilles' tendon in April, 1989, plunged to No. 632 in the world but has moved up to No. 82. His lack of recent playing experience on clay was a decisive factor in keeping Cash out of singles competition.

The U.S. ranks first with 28 Davis Cup championships, while Australia is second with 26, but the U.S. hasn't won the Davis Cup since defeating France in 1982. The Aussies edged Sweden for the championship in 1983 and 1986, with Cash on board each time. Cash calls the slow, red surface, ''an embarrassment to the U.S. Tennis Association,'' and he broke his racket in frustration earlier this week after a practice match.

''It's gotten better - it's gone from being horrendous to pitiful,'' Cash said of the American choice of surface. ''There's some places where the ball just doesn't bounce right. There's no way this should be used for the Davis Cup final.''

After rolling past Mexico and Czechoslovakia to reach the Davis Cup semifinals the U.S. team was nearly derailed by Austria in a grueling match at Vienna. After Thomas Muster beat Agassi to even the match 2-2, Chang trailed Horst Skoff 2-0 before reeling off the final three sets to rally the Americans into the final. Australia advanced to the final with narrow victories over France and New Zealand, followed by a 5-0 rout of Argentina.

The USTA's choice of a red clay court angered the Aussies, who claimed the surface didn't comply with Davis Cup rules that stipualte the surface to be ''in general use'' in the host country. The Australian team has also quarreled about the unusual 5 p.m. EST starting time for Friday's matches, coupled with a 1 p.m. start for Saturday's doubles.

''I'm quite upset with the USTA and the International Tennis Federation,'' said Fraser. ''We don't think what they've done is quite right. To me, the USTA just straight out broke the rules.''

In response, Fraser refused to name his final team until Thursday's deadline.

''I've changed my mind three times trying to figure them out,'' said ''ee times trying to figur

Tensions are high between these traditional adversaries even before the first double-fault or ace is dealt out. The Aussies have taken a calculated gamble that the Cash-Fitzgerald team can win the doubles competition before the switch back to singles Sunday, with Chang facing Fromberg and Agassi meeting Cahill.

''It's an opportunity of a lifetime to play in a Davis Cup final,'' said Cash, ''and I'm lucky to be in my third one. Obviously, it's great to be back in after a terrible run of injuries. The last few months have been pretty good. I'm very, very proud of myself at the moment.''

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) UPI - New York City's pension fund Thursday asked Exxon Corp. and two other companies in which it holds stock to sign an environmental code of conduct called the "Valdez Principles."

In a statement, the $16.4 billion fund said it has filed proxy resolutions with Exxon, Occidental Petroleum Corp., and Champion International Corp. asking them to sign the code, which calls for minimizing waste and the release of pollutants and for safeguarding natural habitats.

The fund owns 3.3 million shares of Exxon valued at $169 million, as well as $16.3 million worth of stock in Occidental, based in Los Angeles, and $5.5 million of stock in Champion, a Stamford, Conn., manufacturer of paper products.

The fund noted that Exxon's earnings had dropped $1.7 billion in 1989 from the previous year as a result of the March 1989 Alaska oil spill by the Exxon Valdez tanker.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - October sales of stock, bond and money market mutual funds totaled $10.6 billion, down from $11.2 billion a year before but ahead from September's $10 billion total, the industry reported Thursday.

Assets of all mutual funds were $1.035 trillion in October, ahead from $1.020 trillion in September, said the Washington-based Investment Company Institute, a mutual fund industry research and reporting organization.

Long-term assets - stocks and bonds - rose to $538.3 billion in October from $535.8 billion in September. Short-term funds for taxable and tax-free money market investments rose to $496.6 billion from $484.3 billion.

Institute vice president and chief economist Jacob Dreyer said total reported assets grew by $14.8 billion in October, with $4.5 billion of the increase due to an increase in the number of funds reporting to the company.

He said the balance was attributable to new sales, ''which remained positive despite the Persian Gulf crisis and related market jitters.''

He said that although stock and bond prices were ''quite volatile'' in October they changed little over the entire month. ''For the first time in a year, the changes in market valuations were a minor determinant of long-term mutual fund asset changes,'' Dreyer said.

Stock mutual fund sales totaled just under $4.4 billion in October, compared with the September total of slightly over $4.4 billion. October sales one year ago were $5.3 billion, the Institute reported.

Bond and income fund sales were $6.2 billion, vs. $5.6 billion in September and $5.9 billion in the year-earlier period.

October redemptions, at some $8.0 billion, rose from September's $7.1 billion but were down from $8.4 billion in the year-ago period.

October stock fund net sales were $1.1 billion, vs. $1.2 billion in September and $1.4 billion one year earlier. October bond and income net sales were $1.4 billion vs. $1.7 billion in September and $1.4 billion in October 1989.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (NOV. 29) UPI - Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu hosted a summit of black leaders Thursday that brought together many ideological foes but failed to lure Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezia, a key figure in recent faction violence.

''We were amazed at the spirit that prevailed,'' a clearly pleased Tutu told reporters after six hours of talks. ''They didn't scratch each other's eyes out and they were sitting within striking distance of one another.''

Tuto called the conference to try to unite black political leaders before power-sharing negotiations with the government and to settle an unprecedented wave of black violence.

Although Buthelezi rejected Tutu's invitation, the Nobel Peace Prize laureate brought together delegates from 10 black homelands or political movements, including Nelson Mandela of the African National Congress and the ANC's smaller hard-line ideological rivals.

Both the exlusively black Azanian People's Organization and the radical Pan Africanist Congress attended the summit despite their condemnation of the ANC's decision to begin talks with Pretoria and suspend its limited guerrilla war against white rule.

''Despite the short duration of the meeting, we believe it constituted a breakthrough in bringing together a range of leaders who had not previously met,'' a joint statement said. Tutu later announced further such summits would be held.

President Itumeleng Mosala of Azapo said he believed the meeting had sowed the seeds of unity among the country's 28 million blacks.

''The issue of the unity of organizations ... of black leadership in certain issues that effect the country is one of paramount importance,'' he said.

A jovial Tutu told reporters outside his official residence that church leaders were ''in a way looking for miracles'' to end the bloodletting, mainly between supporters of the ANC and Buthelezi's Zulu movement Inkatha. That conflict, largely confined to the Indian Ocean province of Natal for the past three years, exploded in black townships surrounding Johannesburg in August and left some 800 dead over the next six weeks.

Sporadic fighting linked to the ANC-Inkatha conflict continues and police reported 14 more deaths overnight in the troubled squatter camp of Zonkwezizwe east of Johannesburg and in the township of Thokoza. All 14 had been stabbed, hacked or shot to death, state-run radio reported.

The joint statement rejected as a ''racist ploy'' the characterization of the violence as black-on-black. It said the root cause of the bloodshed was ''the vicious system of apartheid'' and blamed a ''third force, including at least elements of government security forces'' for stoking violence.

Tutu had warned those who did not accept his invitation that they would be regarded as ''enemies of liberation'' but he toned down his fulmination

Thursday, saying any attacks ''exacerbate the tensions that are already present.''

(NOV. 29) UPI - The foreign ministers of the world's most powerful nations are gathered in New York City for a U-N Security Council vote that is expected to set a deadline for Iraq to get out of Kuwait or face military action. The Security Council vote today will be the 12th and most serious since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on August 2nd.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas says he thinks there is a ''better than 50-50'' chance that President Bush will call a special session of Congress to gain congressional backing for the U-S policy in the Persian Gulf. Dole says it is likely that the session would be held before Christmas.

Americans had a little extra to take home in their paychecks last month, and they squirreled most of it away in their bank accounts instead of spending it. The Commerce Department reports that personal income was up one-tenth of one percent last month, the smallest increase since August of last year. But personal spending levels remained steady with September's readings while the rate of savings inched ahead three- tenths of one percent, to three-point-nine percent of income. That means consumers are saving more and spending less as the economy hits a flat spot.

The seven-man crew of the shuttle Columbia are to fly to Cape Canaveral tonight for the final preparations for their early Sunday launch. The mission to carry 150-Million dollars in high-tech telescopes into orbit has been delayed for six months because of fuel leak problems.

Aides report that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev will make a one-day visit to the southwestern Republic of Moldavia tomorrow. The area has been racked by violent clashes between various minority groups. They fear that rising nationalism by the majority Moldavians may lead to uniting the republic with neighboring Romania.

Tensions are building again in the North Africa nation of Chad. Neighboring Libya is reported mobilizing its armed forces, and France says it will send a company of Foreign Legion paratroopers to Chad, where a Libyan-backed rebellion threatens the government.

A police official in Buenos Aires says an anti-terrorist unit has broken up an extremist cell that intended to assassinate President Bush on his visit to Argentina last week. The spokesman says one person has been arrested in the plot. Bush is scheduled to visit Argentina on December 5th... the third stop on a five-nation tour of South America.

The World Health Organization says changes must come in heterosexual intimacy if the world is to lower fears of AIDS spreading to 30-Million people world-wide by the year 2000. The projection is based on current trends and could be lowered if heterosexual couples practice ''safe'' sex.

DALLAS (NOV. 29) UPI - Scientists have genetically engineered rats with a disease similar to a form of human arthritis, a step that may help find the cause and improve treatments for the disabling illness, it was reported Thursday.

The research has created a new model for scientists researching a form of arthritis. Previously experiments had to be done in mice with symptoms that were not close to those found in humans.

''For me the ... rats are the result of a 10-year quest,'' said Dr. Joel Taurog of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center, where the research was conducted.

An estimated 37 million Americans suffer from arthritis. About 500, 000 of those patients suffer from spondyloarthropathies, which include crippling spinal ailments, disorders striking children and writer's syndrome, which affects the eyes, urinary tract, fingernails, finger joints and skin.

''It is a startling, significant finding,'' said Dr. Lawrence Shulman, director of the National Institute of Arthritis, Musculoskeletal and Skin Diseases in Bethesda, Md., at a crowded news conference in Dallas.

In addition to providing an animal model, Shulman said the study ''indicates genes are directly responsible in the pathogenesis (cause) of multi-organ diseases like (arthritis).''

Because the disease spread so rapidly in the genetically engineered rats, scientists said they think arthritis is largely caused by heredity, not environmental factors.

In research published in the journal Cell, Taurog and his colleagues said they inserted two human genes implicated in causing spondyloarthropathies into fertilized rat eggs, causing the eggs to produce a protein, dubbed type HLA-B27.

The team found that the rats produced from the genetically engineered eggs developed ''arthritis symptoms appeared almost instantly.''

''What surprised all of us was the fact the rats developed diseases just as we see in humans, affecting the eyes, heart, genital tract and so forth,'' Shulman said.

Officials said they planned to use the same process to create rat models for other forms of arthritis.

''This model, however, was developed specifically for spondyloarthropathies,'' said Paula Hughes, executive director of the North Texas chapter of the Arthritis Foundation. ''We hope to expand the research to other arthritis fields, but we're going one step at a time.''

CAIRO, EGYPT (NOV. 29) UPI - Violent clashes between supporters of the ruling National Democratic Party and backers of independent candidates marred Egypt's parliamentary elections Thursday, which officials said drew a heavy voter turnout.

Results of the vote, boycotted by most major oppostion parties, were not due until late Thursday, but it appeared likely that President Hosni Mubarak's NDP would win by a clear margin.

Security sources said dozens of people were injured in isolated violent clashes and that three NDP candidates in Gharbia, a rural Western area, were held several hours against their will by opposing factions before being released unharmed.

''Unknown elements have stormed polling stations and clashed with voters waiting to vote,'' one source said. ''The elements were apparently involved in a systematic campaign to harm the elections.''

He said a NDP candidate in Ismailia, a city on the Suez Canal, escaped uninjured when an unknown assailant fired at him with a gun and that four police officers were injurd in clashes between rival factions in Beni Suwaif.

Officials said about 70 percent of Egypt's 16 million eligible voters went to the polls to elect 444 members of Parliament. It was one of the highest voter turnouts in years.

Mubarak called the elections last month after the country's highest court ruled that the previous elections, held in 1987, were unfair because they favored NDP candidates.

The government changed the election laws to conform with the court ruling. But opposition parties boycotted Thursday's elections becuase they were not consulted on the changes.

However, hundreds of independent candidates and candidates from smaller parties are vying for seats against members of the NDP.

Mubarak cast his ballot in the plush northern Cairo suburb of Heliopolis and told reporters at the polling station that he was still hoping Iraq would withdraw from Kuwait in the face of a possible U.N. resolution authorizing the use of force in the Persian Gulf crisis.

''We can reach peaceful settlements even one hour, or even one minute, before the eruption of any war,'' Mubarak advised Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

Mubarak will not be directly affected by the poll because his six- year term in office ends in 1993.

Thousands of armed police were mobilized to guard the country's 23, 000 polling stations, which closed at 5 p.m.

Cairo Radio reported one ruling party candidate from the Nile Delta town of El Mahala died of exhaustion.

The ongoing gulf crisis and the country's lackluster economy have overshadowed the elections, but campaign rallies have drawn large and excited crowds. The new election laws allow candidates to appear on the ballot by name, rather than simply by party affiliation, presenting voters for the first time with a choice of personalities.

Interior Minister Maj. Gen. Abdelhalim Mussa admitted that 15 members of the outlawed Moslem brotherhood and 10 members of more radical Islamic groups were standing for election despite a ban against radical fundamentalist candidates.

SOFIA (NOV. 29) UPI - In a victory for hundreds of thousands of striking workers, Prime Minister Andrei Lukanov resigned Thursday following crisis talks among Bulgaria's leading political forces on forming a new government.

Lukanov, a reformed communist whose supporters overthrew hardliner Todor Zhivkov a year ago and won a narrow parliamentary victory in the June elections, announced his resignation in a short statement on the television evening news.

''I resign from the post because some social forces, including the trade unions, make imposssible the fulfillment of the government '' he said.

''Therefore ... I resign.''

Tens of thousands of protesters who surrounded the Parliament building to await the expected resignation cheered wildly on hearing the news.

There were no details given immediately about the makeup of the new government.

The resignation followed the resumption of talks led by President Zhelyu Zhelev and leaders of all political forces represented in Parliament and came on the fourth day of a general strike by hundreds of thousands of workers nationwide.

The strikers were protesting deteriorating living conditions, including growing shortages of basic foods and energy. There are long lines for meat, milk and cooking oil, some of them extending up to three days for the monthly allotment of 30 liters of gasoline.

Bulgarian radio interrupted its regular programming at midday to broadcast a statement by presidential spokesman Valentin Stoyanov that the political forces had an agreement on resolving the crisis and that details would be issued later in the day.

Thousands blockaded key streets and squares around Sofia, tying up public transportation, despite warnings by Mayor Alexander Karakachanov that he would break the blockades by force if necessary.

The mayor retracted the threat at a rally, saying he would not use police to open the blocked junctions. ''I hope in a few hours after the decision is announced, tension in the streets will ease,'' he said.

Key intersections have been blocked since Wednesday, stalling seven trolley and 10 bus lines. About 150 military buses were used to transport people.

The barricades accompanied the nation's first general strike as the official union' 3.5 million-member federation voted to join a walkout by the independent union Podkrepa, with a half-million members.

Both trade union federations denied any connection with the groups barricading the intersections and Transport Minister Atanas Popov said gypsies were blocking railways and robbing freight cars.

At the airport, two unidentified aircraft from the former communist VIP fleet have tried twice to take off without permission of the control tower, a spokesman for the independent union said.

Striking workers at the airport are allowing foreign aircraft only in and out of the airport. The union spokesman said Podkrepa has received reports that people involved in financial fraud would try to leave the country if Lukanov's government was in danger.

Demokratsia, the newspaper of the independent Union of Democratic Forces, the largest opposition group in Parliament, said civil peace can be maintained only by a caretaker Cabinet with extended powers.

It urged President Zhelev, who is widely respected, to formulate a proposal for naming such a Cabinet.

The number of strikers is variously listed as 40,000 by the government and 870,000 people in 91 cities and towns by Podkrepa.

ATLANTA (NOV. 29) UPI - The number of AIDS cases in Europe jumped 61.9 percent between March 1989 and March 1990, with the largest percentage increases occurring in Eastern Europe, federal health officials said Thursday.

The AIDS surge in Eastern Europe, however, is not being fueled by unsafe sexual practices or the use of drugs as in the West, but by transfusions of contaminated blood and inadequately sterilized needles in hospitals, the Centers for Disease Control said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

The CDC, quoting information from the World Health Organization, said also that many of the Eastern European AIDS cases are occurring in children either through injections or transfusions.

''This nosocomial (hospital) transmission seems to be a new phenonemon in Eastern Europe,'' said Dr. Bradley Hersh, an epidemiologist at the CDC.

While the numbers in the European AIDS epidemic is significant, the problem is still far worse than in the United States where 154,917 AIDS cases had occurred as of Oct. 31 and 95,774 deaths. About 35,376 AIDS cases had been reported in Europe as of March.

Of the AIDS total in the 32 European countries surveyed, nearly 40 percent occurred in homosexual-bisexual men and 30 percent in intravenous drug users. About one-third of the adult cases were in women, a contrast to the U.S. pattern in which only about 10 percent adult AIDS patients are women.

The highest AIDS incidence rates per million population were in Switzerland 190.2, France 173.2, Spain 135.1, Denmark 112.4, and Italy 105.3. In comparison, the cumulative incidence rate in the U.S. is 515.7 per million population.

While the greatest increases in new AIDS cases took place in Eastern European countries, those nations still had few cases and rates were less than six per million population, except in Romania, where the rate was 20 per million.

The largest annual increases were in Romania 4680 percent, Poland 338 percent, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics 271 percent, and Bulgaria 133 percent.

The CDC, quoting WHO, said reasons for the Eastern European AIDS increases may be attributed to the later introduction and recognition of the AIDS virus in those countries and improved AIDS surveilland and reporting.

The epidemic in Romania, the CDC reported, represents the second major outbreak of AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, infection in a hospital setting. Last year, the Soviet Union experienced a surge of AIDS caused by the use of unsterilized needles.

''Most AIDS patients in Romania appear to have acquired HIV infection through transfusions of unscreened blood and through reuse of inadequately sterilized needles and syringes, which resulted from shortages of injection and sterilization equipment.''

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) UPI - The Daily News, with one eye on the past as it looks to save its future, received permits Thursday for hawkers to sell copies of the strikebound tabloid at close to 120 subway and commuter railroad stations, officials said.

The Metropolitan Transportation Authority granted the permits as pressure mounted on News management to solve lingering circulation problems that have hampered its ability to get copies of the newspaper into the hands of readers during the five-week strike.

Union officials have said mounting revenue losses and circulation problems may force executives of The Chicago Tribune Co., which owns the News, to shut down the newspaper at a Dec. 11 meeting scheduled to discuss the paper's fate.

''Shut down is a likely prospect'' at the meeting, Ted Kheel, a well- known attorney advising the unions, told the city's Civil Service and Labor Committee on Wednesday.

Kheel used the opportunity to ask the City Council to call for the formation of a ''Super Board of Mediation'' to help resolve the bitter labor dispute.

News management, which only has agreed to participate in federally supervised mediations so far, was not available immediately for comment Thursday.

Federal mediator Kenneth Kowalsky, meanwhile, said another meeting had been arranged for Monday, Dec. 3, between management officials and representatives of the drivers' union, perhaps the most powerful of the nine striking unions and the one that initiated the job action Oct. 25.

''Everybody is willing to meet,'' Kowalsky said, declining to discuss the substance or status of negotiations.

MTA spokesman John Cunningham said the News paid $50 each for permits that allow hawkers to peddle the newspaper in 60 subway stations and 58 Long Island Railroad and Metro North stations.

News' hawkers, many recruited from homeless shelters, have said they receive free copies of the paper, which they usually sell for 25 cents, knocking a dime off the usual newsstand price, but News management has denied giving out copies gratis to enhance circulation figures.

In other strike developments Thursday, New York Civil Liberties Union Executive Director Norman Siegel called on Police Commissioner Lee Brown to appoint an independent civilian investigator to look into the arrest of striking news reporter Eddie Borges.

Borges, who was detained for resisting arrest on Nov. 16 at a union rally outside the News's Midtown headquarters, said he only was trying to record the badge numbers of police officers when he was handcuffed and brought to the local stationhouse.

Police also reported four more arrests for strike-related violence early Thursday.

(NOV. 29) UPI - The nuclear-powered Galileo probe, fresh from an eye-opening encounter with Venus, is on course for a dramatic flyby of Earth Dec. 8, the second of three such astronomical bank shots required to boost the craft on to mighty Jupiter.

The $1.5 billion probe, launched Oct. 18, 1989, from the space shuttle Atlantis, is scheduled to flash past Earth a week from Saturday, sailing just 592 miles above the Atlantic Ocean east of Florida at 3:35 p.m. EST Dec. 8.

During the encounter, Earth's gravity will bend Galileo's path, putting the probe into a different orbit around the sun and setting up a second, low-altitude Earth flyby in early December 1992 that will finally boost the craft on toward a 1995 encounter with its target, the giant planet Jupiter.

''Galileo continues to perform beautifully,'' project manager William O'Neal said Thursday from the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif.

''The spacecraft health is excellent. At this point, we don't have to do anything on the ground, we don't have to do anything on the spacecraft to have a successful Earth gravity assist.''

Throughout the flybys, Galileo's state-of-the-art instruments will record valuable data about the moon and the Earth, the planet's magnetic field and its interaction with the supersonic solar wind.

Scientists got a glimpse of what they can expect from the showcase probe when Galileo flew past Venus on Feb. 10, recording data about the electrically charged solar wind, its interaction with the cloud-shrouded planet and taking photos that show a swirling atmosphere and what may be giant storm systems.

While the data is not necessarily revolutionary, it nonetheless will help scientists fill in the blanks about a hellish planet choked by carbon dioxide, the victim of a runaway ''greenhouse'' effect. Such information could one day shed insights into processes governing Earth's atmosphere.

''We're living in an atmosphere that we're changing,'' said Michael Belton, team leader of Galileo's imaging science team. ''The ... carbon dioxide content is growing at an enormous rate. The limit to that, i.e., 100 percent carbon dioxide, is Venus.

''If you (don't) want the Earth to change into something like that, then you better learn something about how atmospheres work with carbon dioxide in them, how they respond to that, how they change their dynamics. These are all broad issues that everyone should be interested in. There's much to learn.''

But the primary goal of the Galileo mission is the exploration of Jupiter.

To reach the giant planet, Galileo was launched to Venus for the first of three gravity-assit flybys required to increase the probe's velocity enough to make it to Jupiter.

The three-bank celestial billiards shot was designed after NASA canceled plans to build a rocket powerful enough to launch Galileo directly to its target. As a result, the science team got a chance to gather bonus data about Venus and Earth.

Six months before reaching Jupiter around Dec. 7, 1995, Galileo will drop an instrument package into the planet's violent atmosphere before beginning an unprecedented 20-month orbital tour expected to revolutionize knowledge of a planet that represents three quarters of the solar system's planetary mass.

Sailing through a ballet of ever-changing orbits, Galileo's electronic ears and eyes will study Jupiter's atmosphere, its whirling moons and its space environment in exquisite detail, beaming back closeup photographs 20 to 1,000 times better than the spectacular pictures taken by the Voyager probes.

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (NOV. 29) UPI - Shortstop Jose Uribe of the San Francisco Giants was released on bail Thursday after being arrested in his native Dominican Republic on charges of beating two women, officials said.

Uribe, who has a three-year $3.85 million contract with the Giants, was arrested Wednesday on charges of punching one Mexican and one American woman. The women also said he abused them morally by saying obscenities.

Domingo Porfirio Rojas Nina, Uribe's lawyer, said the shortstop was released on $27,000 bail Thursday by an appeals court in San Cristobal city, 17 miles southeast of the capital.

''Uribe was released on bail, but cannot leave the country until the case is resolved in the courts,'' said Mario Pina Garcia, a court official.

Doctors attending the women said they should recuperate from the beatings in about 10 days.

Rojas said the two women ''enterred Uribe's house to provoke him.'' He added that the women told Uribe ''they would make his life impossible.''

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - The Beach Boys symbolize the carefree life of youth, but now the pop musicians think young people ought to do more with their lives than just have fun, fun, fun.

The Beach Boys, who rocketed to musical fame with such hits as ''Fun, Fun, Fun'' and ''Surfin' USA,'' joined President and Mrs. Bush, singer Tiffany, Baltimore Oriole Cal Ripkin Jr. and other celebrities at the White House Thursday to recognize a group called StarServe, organized to encourage young people to get involved in community service.

StarServe is a partnership between the Kraft-General Foods Foundation, The (Mike) Love Foundation and the United Way of America. StarServe is sending 94,000 elementary schools materials to help teachers of grades 4-12 integrate community service into lesson plans.

''The idea is real simple. People ought to look at what they can do in their school, in their community, to get involved,'' Beach Boy Mike Love said in an interview before the event. ''It could be as simple as calling the elderly, helping shut-ins or serving lunch at the local homeless center or cleaning up a beach.''

Bush challenged every young person in America to serve their community.

''Barbara and I believe that if, at an early age, you learn to serve those in need, it will become the way you live your whole life, bringing a sense of meaning and adventure that simply can't be met,'' Bush said.

Love, who quipped he is ''49 chronologically but because I'm into health and meditation I have the body of a 19-year-old Adonnis,'' said the Beach Boys first met Bush 12 years ago and took an immediate liking to him.

''In fact, he's the only candidate we've ever done a fund-raiser for, '' Love said. ''He's a good guy, down to earth, a straight-shooting guy. ''

And when Love and his fellow musicians first heard Bush discuss his ''Points of Light'' initiative - intended to spur the public into volunteerism, ''We came away very inspired to do something with our never-ending vibrations,'' Love said.

So inspired, in fact, that the group is working on a few songs with a community service theme that may be included on their next album celebrating the Beach Boys' 30th anniversary on Dec. 31, 1991.

One song, Love said, will be titled, ''One to One,'' which he described as a ''rap groove thing.'' Another tune may be called ''Points of Light,'' which he said is a ''beautiful ballad and somewhat of an anthem. You know, each one of us is a point of light and we're trying to ignite those lights that are dimming.''

The Beach Boys treated the invited guests, including many young people, to a rendition of their most recent No. 1 hit, ''Kokomo'' and, in tribute to Mrs. Bush, ''Barbara Ann.''

#90333u1251 11/29/1990 ~United Press International

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - President Bush signed a landmark immigration bill into law Thursday, hailing it as the most comprehensive change in 66 years in the way America admits immigrants.

But beyond regulating huddled masses, the Immigration Act of 1990 seeks to increase the influx of doctors, scientists and other skilled workers, unite immigrant families and streamline the process for deporting illegal aliens convicted of crimes in this country.

''This bill is good for families, good for business, good for crime fighting and good for America,'' Bush said at a White House signing ceremony. ''We welcome both it and the generation of future Americans who it will bring in to strengthen our great country.''

The new immigration bill overhauls current law that stresses unification of immigrant families over admitting immigrants with needed skills, which critics say has worked against Europeans. Currently, about 85 percent of all immigration comes from Latin America and Asia.

The new law will increase total immigration from 540,000 per year in 1989 to 700,000 per year in 1992-94. Of that total, 520,000 visas during each of the three years would be reserved for immigrants with family members in the United States.

Beginning in 1995, annual immigration levels will be set at 675,000, with 480,000 visas set aside for family reunification.

The law does not cover immediate relatives of U.S. citizens, like spouses, minor children and parents, who are admitted without regard to visa allocation limits. It is estimated that 220,000 of those immigrants enter the United States each year.

Bush said provisions in the new law covering skilled workers and investment ''will promote a more competitive economy.''

Specifically, immigration based on jobs will increase from the current 54,000 a year to 140,000 per year, with special emphasis on highly skilled workers in demand in the United States. Some of those include doctors, nurses, scientists, veterinarians, electrical engineers, computer experts and therapists.

In addition, there are 10,000 employment visas set aside for those who invest at least $1 million in a new enterprise in the United States and hire at least 10 workers.

The law also eases or eliminates decades-old prohibitions on foreigners because of political beliefs, as well as exclusions for homosexuals, prompting Bush to call it ''the most comprehensive reform of our immigration law in 66 years.''

In the area of law enforcement, the law will aid the Justice Department in deporting illegal aliens convicted of crimes in this country.

''This legislation better equips the Department of Justice to combat the scourge of illegal drugs and their accompanying violence,'' said Attorney General Dick Thornburgh. He said the law ''provides for the swift and effective deportation of aliens who have committed violent or drug-related crimes.''

Justice Department officials said they were still studying the law to determine how to carry out the deportations, which would be done after the alien has completed his prison term.

The new immigration ceilings do not include refugees getting asylum because of political persecution in their homeland. This fiscal year, an estimated 131,000 of those immigrants will get refugee status, mostly from East Asia and the Soviet Union. The law also includes a provision for an 18-month-long stay of deportation for Salvadorans now here illegally.

Opponents of the bill said it will take jobs away from Americans and allow an excessively high amount of immigrants. Nevertheless, the new law is not nearly as controversial as the 1986 immigration bill that permitted 1.7 million foreigners who came to this country illegally before 1982 to apply for amnesty from deportation.

''Immigration reform began in 1986 with an effort to close the back door on illegal immigration,'' Bush noted. ''Now as we open the front door to increased legal immigration, this bill provides long-needed enforcement authority.''

John Curtin, president of the American Bar Association, hailed improvements in the new bill that would ''foster economic growth, promote cultural diversity and generally abolish ideology as a ground for excluding aliens.''

But, Curtin said, ''We are disturbed that the legislation also includes provisions which may impede the ability of persons ... to secure representation and could exclude bona fide applicants for political asylum.''

He said, ''We hope that we can work with the administration and Congress to modify these troublesome provisions early next year.''

LAS VEGAS (NOV. 29) UPI - Nevada-Las Vegas, seeking to become the first team to win back-to-back NCAA titles since the John Wooden-coached UCLA teams, agreed to stiff sanctions Thursday for the 1991-92 season in return for the opportunity to defend their national basketball crown in this year's tournament.

The Runnin' Rebels, who won the national championship last April with a resounding victory over Duke, had their chance to defend their title denied in July when the NCAA's Committee On Infractions banned them from the 1991 tournament.

But university officials and coach Jerry Tarkanian made an emotional appeal of that suspension last month before an NCAA committee in Chicago and were given the opportunity Thursday to select between two other options.

''We submitted to the NCAA a list of alternative penalties in lieu of the ban on post-season play for this year,'' said UNLV President Robert Maxson. ''We now have received two alternatives back. The first has the coach (Tarkanian) sitting out the 1990-91 tournament and our team sitting out the 1991-92 tournament.

''The second has no live television for the team in 1991-92 and the team also not playing in the post-season that year. The university has decided to accept the second alternative.''

Maxson said the university's greatest concern was not of future penalties but to find a way to give the top-rated Rebels a rare chance to repeat.

''We thought both (options) were fair, but the optimum word - the key thing - is there will be no penalties against the national champions this year,'' the UNLV president said. ''We do regret that next year's team will not be eligible for the post-season. But it was very important to us that the national champions have the right to defend.''

Tarkanian was in Vancouver, British Columbia, promoting an upcoming game in that city Thursday and was not immediately available for comment. However, Maxson said he had talked over the sanctions with the coach.

''He's (Tarkanian) obviously pleased with the decision that was reached,'' Maxson said.

The NCAA's original decision to ban UNLV from the 1990-91 post-season was the culmination of a 13-year legal battle with Tarkanian, which went all the way to the Supreme Court. The penalty was said to be for violations committed 15 years ago, when the NCAA ordered Tarkanian suspended for ''recruiting and organizational violations.''

During the summer, school officials presented a written appeal on the ruling and in early October they appeared before the NCAA Council for an oral presentation. The NCAA decided to rehear the appeal on Oct. 28, and that time Tarkanian and UNLV officials presented four compromises that would allow the Rebels to defend their title.

One option would be to ban the team from playing in the 1992 tournament. The second was to ban just Tarkanian and not the team from the tourney - something that Tarkanian had already volunteered - and the final two options were multi-layered, involving restrictions on recruitment and a monitoring of the school's basketball program.

The Runnin' Rebels won the school's first NCAA championship in dramatic fashion last April, overwhelming Duke 103-73 in the most lopsided championship game in history.

With four starters, Larry Johnson, Stacey Augmon, Anderson Hunt and Greg Anthony returning for the 1990-91 season a repeat title seemed likely until the NCAA's ruling.

UNLV could also face further sanctions as the NCAA is investigating possible violations in the recruiting of Lloyd Daniels, who never played for the school.

(NOV. 29) UPI - The world's attention is turned toward the United Nations headquarters in New York City. The foreign ministers of the world's most powerful nations are gathered in at the U-N for a Security Council meeting that is expected to approve a resolution that authorizes the use of force to get Iraq out of Kuwait. Approval appears certain, with at least tacit support of the five permanent members of the Security Council and a majority of the 15 member states.

The State Department confirmed today that Secretary of State Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze will meet in Houston on December 10th and 11th. The talks are part of on-going meetings to plan for the next super-power summit in January. Both men are in New York for the U-N Security Council session today.

If personal spending is one of the fuels that makes the economy go, then things began to sputter a little last month. The Commerce Department reports that personal income levels were up one-tenth of one percent but personal spending was unchanged from September. All of the extra income, and then some, apparently went into the bank as personal savings grew by three-tenths of one percent, to three-point-nine percent of income.

Former Senator John Tower says it appears as if former President Reagan participated in a deliberate cover-up of White House involvement in the Iran-Contra affair. Tower was head of a three-member commission Reagan named to investigate the scandal. Tower says in his memoirs- excerpts of which were published today in Dallas- that Reagan used a script prepared by aides to contradict an earlier statement when he testified before the commission. He says the statement denied earlier remarks about White House approval of a shipment of missiles to Iran.

MIAMI (NOV. 29) UPI - A federal judge accepted a guilty plea Thursday from embattled General Development Corp., opening the way for home buyers who were defrauded by the company to file claims for up to $160 million in restitution.

A special master appointed by the court to oversee that restitution program said potential victims of the Florida development company will be contacted within the next several months.

"We're setting up shop now. I have my marching orders," special master Thomas D. Wood said following the one-hour court hearing. Wood estimated 10,400 home buyers will be eligible to file claims for restitution.

U.S. District Judge Lenore C. Nesbitt sentenced General Development to five years probation after accepting the revised plea agreement - the third to be submitted by company lawyers and prosecutors. Nesbitt rejected two earlier plea agreements because of concerns over the restitution plan. On Thursday, she said her earlier concerns had been met.

Under the revised plea, General Development agreed to plead guilty to a conspiracy charge and to pay up to $160 million in restitution. The Florida development company and its two top executives were indicted in March on charges they defrauded thousands of home buyers by inflating the value of properties sold in the company's nine Florida communities.

Nesbitt also rejected previous plea bargains reached with former General Development Chairman David F. Brown and President Robert F. Erhling, saying the maximum sentences allowed under the agreements were unacceptable. Lawyers for those executives are now prepared to go to trial, which is currently scheduled to begin Jan. 7.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Norman Moscowitz told Nesbitt Thursday the government plans to file a superseding indictment Wednesday charging Brown and Erhling with additional crimes, and naming two other defendants in the case. As a result of Nesbitt's ruling Thursday, General Development is expected to contribute $1 million to finance the start-up of the restitution plan.

Wood said claims would be evaluated by a team of appraisers before being submitted to Nesbitt for review. Ultimately, those claims will be submitted to a bankruptcy court judge in Miami. The company has been operating under Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection since April.

Home buyers who were defrauded by General Development will be given the same status as the company's unsecured creditors, Wood said. Although officials have estimated that those claims may eventually total $160 million, there may not be enough money to cover all such claims, Wood said.

LIMA, PERU (NOV. 29) UPI - A rescue team found a French photographer alive and well after a grueling week in the mountain jungles of the Amazon, police said Thursday.

''I thought I was dead,'' Pascal Odile told one of the rescue workers, who described the photo-journalist, found Wednesday afternoon, as exhausted, dehydrated and barely able to stand.

Rescue workers from the Civil Brigade flew Odile in a military helicopter to a hospital in the Andean city of Cusco, 345 miles southeast of Lima.

Odile, a photographer for the French news agency Sipa Press, was one of 10 television journalists thrown into the turbulent waters of the Apurimac River when their two rubber rafts capsized Wednesday, Nov. 21.

Photographer Cyril Contadrioulus was the only member of the party still missing. Members of the group said they felt chances of finding Contadrioulus alive were good, because he is an expert in jungle survival techniques.

Group members told reporters that the rafts overturned in the river near the town of Atalaya, where the river joins the Ucayali River.

The journalists, mostly from French television channel FR3, said they were attempting to film their adventures navigating the entire Amazon River system from the Apurimac and Ucayali rivers in Peru to the Amazon River across Brazil to the Atlantic Ocean - a trip of some 4,200 miles.

One survivor, Claudio Naumuller, filmed the accident and returned to France with another expedition member, Walter Didier, on Wednesday. Other members of the group are still in Peru.

GUATEMALA CITY (NOV. 29) UPI - President Vinicio Cerezo walked out of a live television interview part way through the broadcast Thursday, after the show's host refused to soften his line of questioning about the country's economy.

Cerezo, who was a guest on the local television show Tele-Prensa, stood up part way through the broadcast, told the host he was disappointed, removed the microphone from his jacket lapel and left the studios.

The president's surprising exit came after journalist Eduardo Valdizan, the show's host, fired at Cerezo a serious of difficult questions about the state of the Guatemalan economy.

Valdizan argued that the country's galloping inflation in the last year is the result of excessive public spending.

''You want to put me on the accused's bench and you have come prepared with a box of special effects to draw attantion to specific aspects without viewing the whole picture,'' Cerezo said.

''If we continue like this, I regret it, but I will have to leave,'' he said.

Economist Jose Molina said inflation in the last year reached a record 74.42 percent.

The Guatemalan economy grew between 3.5 and 4 percent annually in Cerezo's five-year term, but the whole population has not felt many of the positive effects of growth.

Local and international aid groups say poverty in Guatemala rose from 72 percent of the population in 1986 - Cerezo's first year in power - to 85 percent in 1990.

Cerezo has said the growth has not been evenly distributed because ''a group of bad businessmen have not raised workers' wages to the same degree that prices have increased.''

Cerezo is scheduled to hand over power Jan. 14 to the winner of a run-off ballot between the top two candidates in last Nov. 11 election.

LONDON (NOV. 29) UPI - A medieval encyclopedia on animals fetched $5.813 million Thursday, the second highest price paid for a manuscript, Sotheby's auction house said.

''Bestiary,'' written in England between 1250 and 1260, is illustrated with animals real and imaginary from hedgehogs to unicorns. It was auctioned at Sotheby's to London antiquarian bookseller Quaritch for 2.97 million pounds.

''With its 112 illustrations on vellum pages, the 'Bestiary' is one of the most richly illustrated of all bestiaries, which are very rare and a particularly English phenomenon, indicating perhaps that the English love of animals goes back a long way,'' said Sotheby's spokeswoman D'Este Bond.

Bond said the only manuscript that has sold for more was the 12th century ''Gospels of Henry the Lion,'' which went for $14.5 million in 1983.

The sale of ''Bestiary'' replaced a record held by the English manuscript ''Hours and Psalter of Elizabeth de Bohun,'' which sold for $2.74 million in 1988.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - United Press International Thursday named Alberto Schazin, vice president and general manager for South America, as head of its business operations in Mexico and Central America and appointed Upendra Mishra as bureau chief in Mexico City.

Schazin, a 32-year veteran with UPI, will coordinate all of the company's affairs in Latin America from his present base in Buenos Aires, according to Michael Keats, senior vice president-international operations.

He replaced Salvador Barros who resigned.

Keats said that Mishra's appointment would afford a valuable link between the UPI reporting team in Mexico City and client editors throughout Mexico and the Central American region.

Mishra joined UPI in 1987 from The News of Mexico City after previously working as Latin American corresponmdent for the Indian newspaper, the Hindustan Times.

A native of Uttar Pradesh, India, he spent two years as a visiting research scholar at El Colegio de Mexico and gained a masters degree in International journalism at the University of Southern California, Los Angeles.

Schazin, who was born in Argentina, has served as bureau manager in Buenos Aires and in Chile, Peru and Brazil during his career with UPI. He was named vice president and general manager for South America in 1987 and is presently a member of the board of the Inter American Press Association.

(NOV. 29) UPI - The White House says President Bush will consider congressional feelings for a special session to take up the Persian Gulf crisis but is NOT inclined to summon the lawmakers back to Washington. Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters that he believes ''reluctant'' would be a good word to use to describe how Bush feels about a special session at this time.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole had said just yesterday that he felt there was a ''better than 50-50'' chance for a special session, what with the U-N Security Council ready to approve the use of force in the region. The Security Council session is scheduled to get under way at about 3 p-m, E-S-T. It appears certain now that the United States has lined up enough votes for approval of the resolution, which will set a deadline for Iraq to get out of Kuwait.

A German telethon has raised four-Million dollars for what is rapidly becoming a growing international effort to ship food to the Soviet Union. Moscow reportedly is short on milk and has only a three- to five- day supply of meat. And other shortages are reported throughout a country, where long lines to buy scarce goods have been part of daily life for decades. Western diplomats say the latest problems are NOT so much that of low supplies as troubles within the Soviet distribution system.

Journalist Nicholas Daniloff says he is returning to the Soviet Union... just four years after he was imprisoned by the K-G-B and threatened with the death penalty for espionage. Daniloff says he is returning to the Soviet Union as a university lecturer. Four years ago, Daniloff was preparing to leave the Soviet Union after a five-year stint when a K-G-B set-up ended in his arrest for spying. Daniloff was held for 13 days before being released in a complicated deal that also involved a Soviet agent.

A radio station in Maumee, Ohio, near Toledo, has filed a 500-thousand-dollar lawsuit against the discredited singing group Milli Vanilli, charging fraud at a concert last summer. The suit asks for 200 dollars for each person who attended the station-sponsored concert. Milli Vanilli was stripped of its Grammy Award last week after it was discovered that its two members never sang on any of the songs they were supposed to have recorded.

The medical examiner's office in Milwaukee has ruled that 89-year-old Joseph Neumaier apparently died of natural causes while visiting his wife's grave on their 64th wedding anniversary. Mary Neumaier died about two years ago, and her husband was known to have visited the grave every day.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (NOV. 29) UPI - Eric Bieniemy, who battled one of the country's toughest schedules to finish within 14 yards of the national rushing title, Thursday was named the United Press International's Big Eight Conference Offensive Player of the Year.

Bieniemy was the near-unanimous choice of a 36-member panel of sports writers and broadcasters from acoss the six-state Big Eight area. The only other player to earn a vote was Oklahoma State's Gerald Hudson, whose 264-yard effort in his final game gave him the top rushing average in the country.

A 5-foot-7, 195-pound firebrand, Bieniemy impressed coaches throughout the Big Eight with his competitive nature. He was a clear choice of the league's coaches when asked which Big Eight player they would most like to use to start a program. Bieniemy is the second consecutive Colorado player, and only the second Buffalo on record overall, to win the Offensive Player of the Year award. Colorado quarterback Darian Hagan was last year's winner.

''All season long he's been our bread-and-butter guy,'' said Colorado Coach Bill McCartney. ''He's just a real gritty guy. He competes hard every time with or without the ball. He's a real special competitor. One that you rarely get to coach.''

Earlier in the season, the Buffaloes coach said, ''He's such a fiery, competitive guy. He always gets everyone excited. He's the kind of guy an offensive lineman will block for because he's got the same temperament that they do. He would perfer to run inside the tackles rather than outside. Of course, that's a special kid who does that.

''It's his chemistry and temperament and makeup mentally that separates him from other kids.''

An off-season incident relative to his nature led to Bieniemy being suspended for his first game, but he piled up 149 yards and three touchdowns against Stanford in his first action of the season. He also had three-touchdown games against Texas and Kansas. He was held under 100 yards just once (99 yards against Texas) and turned in a 217-yard effort against Missouri.

It was after a slightly injured Bieniemy had 174 yards on just 18 carries against Kansas that Heisman Trophy talk began to include him. McCartney put it off, saying the following two weeks - against Oklahoma and Nebraska - would be the real Heisman difference.

All Bieniemy did was rip Oklahoma for 188 yards and a touchdown. He added 137 yards against Nebraska and scored four fourth-period touchdowns to knock the Cornhuskers from the unbeaten ranks.

''Bieniemy is as competitive as anyone I've ever been around,'' McCartney said. ''It's that fire within him that distinguishes him. He's got so much grit and so much compeitive urge and instinct, that's what seperates him. His ability to run inside, outside, his ability to catch the ball and his willingness to block, all of those things are really first rate.''

Hudson is the third Oklahoma State back since 1982 to win the national rushing title. The 5-9, 207-pound senior from Waxahachie, Texas, had eight 100-yard efforts as the one static element in the Oklahoma State attack. He averaged 5.9 yards a carry. In addition to his 264-yard gae against Iowa State, Hudson had a 255-yard rushing total against Missouri, giving him the top two rushing days in the Big Eight this season.

RAVENSWOOD, WV (NOV. 29) UPI - The United Steelworkers of America said Thursday that Ravenswood Aluminum Corp. rejected its latest proposal in a contract dispute that has idled 1,800 USW members since Nov. 1.

USW representative Joe Chapman said representatives of the company refused to discuss any aspect of the offer, which was made Wednesday during talks under a federal mediator. The company, in a statement, called the union's latest offer

"disappointing."

"The union made some movement in their offer, but the company and the union remain miles apart," said Earl Schick, vice president of labor relations. No further talks were scheduled.

The work stoppage is the first in the facility's history resulting from a contract dispute. It began less than two years after the plant was taken private in a leveraged buyout.

In its latest proposal, the union offered to withdraw its demand for continuation of a price-based bonus plan in exchange for restoration of wage rates that existed in 1983, a union official said. That would mean an average increase of $1.34 an hour over the current wage rate.

According to the union, the price bonus has been paying workers as much as $2 an hour and represented well over ten percent of each worker's take-home pay.

The union also said its latest proposal included the elimination of 50 percent of non-wage items, and lowered the cost of one-third of those remaining, according to a union official.

"Our proposals represented a significant pullback on our part," said Jim Bowen director of USW District 23. "But it took the company less than 15 minutes to tell us it would not accept them, that we were still far apart and that it would have nothing further to say."

According to the union, the company has demanded elimination of the price bonuses and cost-of-living protection. Instead, it has proposed a profit-sharing plan, a USW spokesman said.

The union rejected the proposal originally because the company would not guarantee workers would receive as much in profit-sharing as they did under the old plan, the spokesman continued.

"This is the first time in my 24 years of bargaining that a company involved in a work stoppage has refused to discuss its reasons for rejecting a contract proposal," Chapman said.

Chapman said the union's proposal differed sharply from the one on the table on Nov. 1, when the company refused an offer to continue negotiations, broke off talks and locked out the workers, who are members of USW Local 5668.

The Ravenswood Works had been owned and operated for several decades by Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corp., a publicly owned company headquartered in Oakland Calif. RAC acquired the facility in a leveraged buyout in 1989 and has operated it since then as a closely held, private corporation.

According to the union, steelworkers made contract concessions for Kaiser in 1985. They extended certain sacrifices in 1988 in return for the bonus plan, which has paid an average of $8,000 to each employee during that period.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) UPI - Assets of the nation's 526 money-market mutual funds rose by a relatively modest $198.0 million to $423.76 billion in the week ended Wednesday, according to the Investment Company Institute, a research arm of the U.S. mutual fund industry.

Elsewhere, two other financial reporting organizations said average yields for money-market mutual funds were mixed, as were deposit and lending rates at competing U.S. savings and loan institutions.

The Investment Company Institute reported Thursday broker-dealer fund assets rose by $87.2 million to $166.38 billion, assets of general-purpose funds declined by $105.8 million to $149.92 billion, and institutional fund assets increased by $216.6 million to $107.45 billion.

Institute vice president and chief economist Jacob Dreyer said rising yields on Treasury bills, commercial paper, short-term certificates of deposit and other direct money-market instruments hardly altered asset levels.

"But as the yield differential favoring money-market funds over alternative investment outlets narrowed," Dreyer noted, "the inflow of monies into funds slowed considerably from the pace of the preceding week."

The institute, a national association of the American investment company industry, reports the assets of money-market funds to the Federal Reserve Board each week.

The Donoghue Organization, of Holliston, Mass., said average seven- day simple yields were 7.27 percent, down from 7.35 percent. But 30-day simple yields were at 7.34 percent, also down from 7.38 percent. The average maturity of fund portfolios fell to 50 days from 51 days.

Donoghue's noted that total assets of the 689 taxable and tax-free money-market mutual funds it tracks rose above the $500 billion mark for the first time since the first such fund was launched in 1972. They totaled $501.09 billion vs. $499.40 billion a week earlier.

The Bank Rate Monitor in North Palm Beach, Fla., gave average rates as follows: money-market deposit accounts, 5.83 percent, down from 5.84 percent; Super-Now accounts, 4.95 percent, down from 4.96 percent; six-month certificates of deposit, 7.33 percent, off from 7.36 percent; 1-year CDs, 6.39 percent, off from 7.43 percent; 2 1/2-year CDs, 7.50 percent, down from 7.53 percent; and five-year CDs, 7.72 percent, down from 7.75 percent.

The average rate for a one-year, adjustable-rate mortgage was 8.03 percent, down from 8.04 percent the previous week.

The average rate on a 15-year, fixed-rate mortgage fell in the latest week to 9.48 percent, a decline from 9.53 percent. The average rate for a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage eased to 9.79 percent, off from 9.84 percent.

The average rate for a four-year automobile loan was at 12.25 percent, up from 12.23 percent.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) UPI - Expectations of a U.N. Security Council vote authorizing the use of force to eject Iraq from Kuwait combined with technical factors to push the dollar sharply higher Thursday in thin New York trading. A vote by the United Nations body was set for late Thursday afternoon.

Currency traders said the dollar also benefited from rumors that armed forces in the Persian Gulf had gone on alert and that shots had been fired, which set off purchases of the dollar as a "safe haven" currency.

They said the Japanese yen in particular skidded against the dollar, citing predictions that a major earthquake would shortly hit Tokyo and that a number of Japanese financial and other companies were in trouble. "Earthquake, war, pestilence - you name it," said Francoise Soares-Kemp, vice president for currency with Credit Suisse. "It's been quite a day."

In late New York trading, the dollar stood at 1.5030 German marks, well up from 1.4855 Wednesday, and 133.15 at yen, up from 130.05. The British pound plunged to $1.9440 from $1.97.

Other New York dollar rates: 1.28 Swiss francs, up from 1.27; 5.0765 French francs, up from 5.0150; and 1,130 Italian lire, up from 1,118.

While the Security Council's likely passage a U.S.-drafted resolution on the use of force to drive Iraq from Kuwait stimulated buying of the dollar, Soares-Kemp said year-end technical pressures also drove the rally.

"It's not a move that I think is terribly surprising, other than the fact it happened in one morning," said Robert White, a vice president and foreign exchange manager for First Interstate Bank in Los Angeles.

He pointed to the "growing concern of markets with regard to the stability of a lot of the Japanese corporate and financial institutions," given the crash of the Tokyo stock market and a slowing Japanese economy.

In Europe, the dollar closed higher on renewed apprehension about warfare in the Persian Gulf following U.N. action, analysts said.

"The dollar strengthened slightly across the board. The key factor was the U.N. resolution on the Gulf crisis and the feeling that there will be a move towards war, restoring the dollar's position as a safe haven," said Steven King, a currency analyst at the investment house James Capel in London.

In Frankfurt, the dollar rose to 1.4865 marks from 1.4845. The greenback also moved up in Zurich, to 1.2680 Swiss francs from 1.2580. In London, the pound weakened, fetching $1.9575 compared with $1. 9745.

The dollar also rose in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to, respectively: 5.0260 French francs vs. 4.9880; 30.71 Belgian francs vs. 30.59; and 1,117.95 lire vs. 1,108.80.

Earlier in Toyko, the dollar soared to a three-week high against the yen on remarks made Wednesday by Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan expressing concern over the dollar's weakness. The dollar closed at 130. 15 yen, up from 128.90.

The dollar staged a powerful Thursday morning rally on Greenspan's comments about the inflationary threat from a weak dollar, said senior foreign-exchange manager Noburu Yokohashiat of Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank.

But some dealers said the Tokyo rally was more technical, as players sought to discover the top of the current dollar price range.

In Zurich, gold closed lower, at $386 an ounce from $386.50, but closed up in London to $386.50 an ounce vs. $385.

Silver rose in both Zurich, closing at $4.15 an ounce vs. $4.12, and London, at $4.13 an ounce vs. $4.10.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $388 an ounce, ahead from $385 Wednesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled the new December gold contract at $388.90 an ounce, up from $385.70.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.11 an ounce, down from $4.145. Comex silver finished trading at $4.085 an ounce, down from $4.125.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - American motorists, already suffering from sticker shock at the gas pump, are about to get another jolt beginning Saturday when the federal tax on gas increases an additional 5 cents a gallon.

The increased tax, from 9 cents to 14 cents a gallon on unleaded fuel and 15 cents to 20 cents on diesel, was engineered by the Bush administration and Congress in the waning days of October as part of the 1991 budget deal.

It will affect virtually every segment of the nation's air, rail and ground transportation system.

The gas tax is expected to bring in revenues of $45 billion over five years, while a separate airline user tax will generate $11.8 billion during the same period, according to federal estimates.

Transportation tax increases, among the first to go into effect following the budget agreement, come at a time when fuel prices have soared to record levels resulting from instabililty in the Persian Gulf.

In October gasoline prices had already jumped to a nationwide average of $1.33 per gallon for unleaded regular fuel, a 17-cent increase since August, the Department of Energy said.

The average national price for a gallon of unleaded regular gas at self-service pumps stood at $1.31 on Nov. 26, the latest available figure, the Energy Department's Energy Information Agency reported.

While motorists can expect across-the-board increases, holiday airline passengers will be greeted with a 10 percent user tax on tickets, up from 8 percent.

In addition, airline passengers will soon pay higher fees on international flights and airport-levied taxes for modernization that will go into effect in mid-1991.

Although gasoline prices have stabilized somewhat during the past month, the continued uncertainty in the gulf over the possible outbreak of war could push up prices further. Increasing prices on gasoline and home heating oil also could weaken an economy widely believed to be on the brink of a recession.

Economists generally agreed that the 5-cent gas tax alone would not significantly alter the driving patterns of motorists. But they added that the tax - coming after 60 percent increases in many areas since Iraq invaded Kuwait - could slow consumption.

''It's not by itself large enough to make a big difference,'' said Michael Canes, chief economist at the American Petroleum Institute. But he added that in the aggregate, ''The pump prices are probably going to effect gas purchases.''

Canes said institute data showed a drop in gas consumption during October, a slowdown he expects to continue.

Public transportation officials around the nation said ridership on rapid transit lines, subways and buses appears to be increasing, though they were unsure whether the increase is due to higher fuel prices.

''We are seeing increases but it's hard to tell whether the Middle East crisis is having an effect,'' said Michael Healy, spokesman for San Francisco's Bay Area Rapid Transit system.

Healy noted that passenger use has increased 2 percent to 3 percent since last year when volume swelled nearly 12 percent following the 1989 earthquake.

Healy added that BART has enhanced service by adding trains and extending hours of service in the morning and evening hours.

(NOV. 29) UPI - Secretary of State Baker is conducting intense, last-minute talks with U-N Security Council foreign ministers, trying for still more support for a resolution to approve the use of force against Iraqi forces in Kuwait. The Security Council is to meet at about 3 p-m, E-S-T, to take up the U-S-backed resolution, which will give Iraq until January 15th to get out of Kuwait.

The unofficials delegation of Italian pacifists who returned to Rome from Baghdad with 68 Italian hostages says Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is- quoting now- ''ready to dialogue'' with anybody. The delegation is urging the Italian government to open talks with Saddam on freedom for the remaining Italians held in Iraq and Kuwait.

White House news secretary Marlin Fitzwater says President Bush is NOT inclined to call Congress back to Washington for a special session to discuss the Persian Gulf crisis. Fitzwater says he thinks ''reluctant'' is a good word to describe the president's attitude toward a special session at this time.

The newly confirmed U-S ambassador to Lebanon pledged today to make every effort to gain the release of six American hostages held with six other foreign nationals. Ambassador Ryan Crocker is the first U-S envoy in Beirut in more than one year... the result of a raging civil war in the Lebanese capital.

The Salvadoran army says rebel attacks on military installations north of the capital at San Salvador and in an eastern province claimed hundreds of casualties in the last week. And the rebels warned in a statement today that they will fight with everything they have against what is termed ''all elements that prevent the move to democracy and justice in the country.''

Engineers at Cape Canaveral started the countdown today for the fifth pre-dawn launch attempt of the shuttle Columbia on an astronomy flight that has been delayed for six months because of fuel leaks. The shuttle is scheduled to blast off early Sunday on a 10-day mission.

At least one economist says today's report on the personal income of Americans shows that the recession has begun. The Commerce Department says personal income rose only one-tenth of one percent in October... the worst showing in more than a year.

The Food and Drug Administration today approved a less toxic drug to cure African sleeping sickness- an often fatal parasitic sickness that is carried by flies. The World Health Organization says the new drug could save about three-thousand people a year from premature deaths.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (NOV. 29) UPI - Fred Akers, who failed to duplicate the same level of success he achieved at Texas, resigned under pressure Thursday as Purdue football coach.

Akers announced his resignation during a news conference called following two days of meetings with Purdue president Steven Beering and athletic director George King.

''I wish Purdue nothing but success,'' Akers said. ''I met briefly with our players and said farewell to them and wished them luck. Hopefully they will stay with things and continue to work and go on and realize the dreams we had.''

No successor was named immediately, but school officials were expected to come up with a replacement soon because of a need for recruiting.

Akers, 52, had four years remaining on a contract that paid a base salary of $125,000 a year.

Purdue sports information director Jim Vruggink said the meetings among Akers, Beering and King began Wednesday and continued into Thursday. Both sides agreed ''some time ago'' to meet after the season for an evaluation, Vruggink added.

A published report earlier Thursday said Akers refused to resign, then called his assistants - who were on the road recruiting - to tell them to return to campus and recommend they start looking for other jobs.

Akers has produced four losing seasons at Purdue, compiling a record of 12-31-1. The stumbling Boilermakers were 2-9 overall this past season, including 1-7 in the Big Ten. The only team they beat in conference was Northwestern.

The nine losses were the most ever sustained by a Purdue team in a single season.

Akers came to Purdue after coaching at the University of Texas from 1977-86, where he compiled an 86-31-2 mark. He also spent two years at Wyoming.

Purdue's home game attendance has plummeted by nearly 23,000, with an average of 40,799 fans attending clashes in the 67,861-seat Ross-Ade stadium. The best attendance of the season was at 57,031 for a homecoming game against Ohio State. In 1986, average attendance at home games was 63,110.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) UPI - Stocks closed lower in light trading Thursday, done in by profit taking before a United Nations vote on a resolution authorizing the use of force to drive Iraq out of Kuwait.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 8.66 Wednesday, fell 16.34 to close at 2518.81.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index lost 0.76 to 173.15. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 1.53 to 316.42. The price of an average share slid 13 cents.

Declines led advances, 851-636, among the 1,999 issues crossing the Big Board tape. Volume totaled 140,920,000 shares, compared with 145,490,000 traded Wednesday.

Stocks drifted with modest losses for most of the day, hitting their lows in early afternoon, pressured by rumors that shots had been fired in the Persian Gulf. The Pentagon denied the rumors - but not before the Dow had fallen to a 25 point loss.

The market recovered but faded slightly again before the close as investors who were already jittery about the situation in the Mideast saw an opportunity to take profits, especially before the United Nations Security Council vote.

The 15-member U.N. Security Council met late Thursday to debate a proposed resolution that would authorize the use of force to drive Iraq out of Kuwait.

The resolution calls for Iraq to withdraw its 400,000 troops from the tiny emirate by Jan. 15. If Iraq does not, the resolution gives the U.S.-dominated multinational force deployed in the region, numbering about 500,000 men and women, permission to use "all necessary means" to eject Iraqi troops. The resolution was approved by a vote of 12-2 with one abstention early Thursday evening.

"I think we just had some people taking profits here," said Ron Doran, director of institutional trading at C.L. King & Associates in Albany, N.Y. "Over the course of day, we had rumors, denied of course, that shots were being fired and so forth," he noted. "There was an all-out drop there until the Pentagon said it wasn't true. But that's the type of market we're going tosee until we get some stability in what's going on over there."

Doran said he thought the U.N. resolution, which has been talked about for days, has been factored into the market. "The question is, though, what is the next step going to be? And when you have rumors that shots have been fired that just magnifies the jitters," said Doran.

On the trading floor, Texas Utilities was the most active issue, unchanged at 36 1/2. Philip Morris followed, down 5/8 to 48. Glaxo was third, up 7/8 to 32 3/4.

Among other blue chips, AT&T lost 1/4 to 31 5/8, IBM fell 3/8 to 112, and McDonald's lost 1 1/8 to 28, but General Electric gained 1/2 to 53 1/8.

Lehman Brothers reportedly commented to its sales force on rumors that McDonald's is considering permanent price cuts on its basic products, like hamburgers and milk shakes. The brokerage was said to warn that if the prices are cut, the fast-food giant's profit margins could fall sharply in the short term. But McDonald's chief financial officer Jack Greenberg said the rumors were "absolutely untrue and totally unfounded."

Elsewhere, Nashua plunged 8 3/8 to 30 1/2 after saying it expected fourth-quarter profits below analysts' expectations. CBS added 4 7/8 to 165 3/4 after reports that it is weighing a possible stock-buyback program.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 172,066,540 shares, compared with 182,371,290 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices rose in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index added 0.90 to close at 299.87. Advances led declines, 270-260, among the 815 issues traded. The price of an average share rose three cents. Composite volume totaled 14,717,300 shares vs. 14,731,320 traded Wednesday. B.A.T. Industries led the Amex issues, down 1/16 to 10 7/8.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index rose 0.69 to 355.75.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - Scientists Thursday reported what they say is the first direct evidence linking a virus known to cause neurological disease in horses and sheep to psychiatric problems in humans.

A team of American and German researchers examined the relationship between the Borna virus and human illness by copying a piece of the virus's genetic material and seeing if it spurred formation of antibodies in blood taken from people with schizophrenia or personality disorders.

The body's immune system produces proteins called antibodies to help fight off infectious agents like viruses. Because it is difficult to detect viruses themselves, doctors test for the specific antibodies they trigger to determine if someone is infected with a particular virus.

In a study published in the journal Science, the researchers found blood samples from three of seven German psychiatric patients produced antibodies to the Borna virus, compared with none of the samples from healthy people.

The people involved in the study were from parts of Germany where the Borna virus is widespread in horses and sheep. Researchers do not know exactly how the virus, which appears to invade the nervous system, is transmitted.

Previous studies of humans and rats have indirectly linked the virus to psychiatric and behavioral disorders.

Recent work in Germany and the United States showed psychiatric patients have antibodies in their bloodstream similar to those triggered by the laboratory-made piece of virus. However, those studies could not directly link those antibodies to the Borna virus.

With the latest results in hand, researchers are now trying to identify the whole Borna virus both in animals and humans.

''Once we do that, this information could lead to diagnostic tests for infected patients and eventually to anti-viral agents to treat the infection and possibly psychiatric diorders as well,'' said Janice Clements of Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions, a co-author of the study.

Other institutions taking part in the work were Colorado State University in Fort Collins, Colo., and Justus-Liebig University-Giessen in Germany.

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - President Bush has selected outgoing Florida Gov. Bob Martinez as the nation's new anti-drug director, and is expected to announce his nomination Friday, sources said Thursday.

The sources said Martinez, who quietly left Tallahassee, Fla., for Washington Thursday, was expected to join the president at the White House for a mid-afternoon announcement.

Martinez, a Republican, was defeated in his bid for reelection on Nov. 6 by Democrat Lawton Chiles. He would replace William Bennett as director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy.

The position is subject to Senate confirmation, and he has already lined up the backing of Florida's two senators, Democrat Bob Graham and Republican Connie Mack. Chiles has also expressed support for him.

Bennett announced his resignation as anti-drug director on Nov. 8. His final day on the job is Friday. With the backing of Bush, he is expected to become head of the Republican National Committee in January.

Administration sources first disclosed on Nov. 18 that Martinez was being considered as Bennett's successor, and the governor has acknowledged discussing the post with White House aides.

Martinez, 55, who term as governor ends Jan. 8, has experience in fighting drugs.

He served as the point man for the National Governors' Association on drug policy, spearheaded drives for workplace drug testing and got the state legislature to expand the death sentence to cover drug kingpins.

Although the White House appears impressed with his credentials, Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, said he would prefer someone with more experience and not ''someone who has lost an election and needs a job.''

Martinez' office announced his departure from Tallahassee Thursday about three hours after he left the state capital, but did not give a reason.

''The governor will overnight in Washington. Information about his Friday schedule will be released later,'' Martinez' office said in a terse statement.

Asked what Martinez would do in Washington, press secretary Jon Peck said, ''I dunno. It's a nice city, lots of places to play tourist in.''

WASHINGTON (NOV. 29) UPI - The National Dairy Board, which uses farmers' money to promote milk sales, is illegally lobbying for federal approval of a synthetic hormone that makes cows produce more milk, a lawsuit charged Thursday.

The Food and Drug Administration has not decided whether to license the genetically engineered hormone for use. It is examining the drug's effects on cows but repeatedly has said milk from cows injected with bovine somatatropine (BST) is safe, a view not shared by groups opposed to the drug.

Suit was filed by the Foundation on Economic Trends, a longstanding critic of BST. It asked for an injunction against any further activities in support of BST and that might influence state or federal decisions about it.

"The (board) is not authorized to conduct promotion or research for genetically engineered animal drugs that have not received government approval for commercial uses," the suit said, arguing the 1983 law that created the board prohibits "any funds collected under the order from being used in any manner for the purpose of influencing governmental policy or action."

At issue was a $1 million contract the Dairy Board negotiated with a Washington public relations firm to handle the BST issue for the dairy industry. Plans called for use of materials to tell "influencers," such as nutrition experts, that BST was safe, with so-called consumer education to begin after an FDA decision.

"They knew it was illegal to do a pro-active campaign and they did it anyway," foundation president Jeremy Rifkin said, citing letters in which Dairy Board officials said there would be no consumer campaign until FDA acted.

The lawsuit contended the Dairy Board worked with other milk and drug industry trade associations to place advertisements, make public presentations about BST and distribute brochures and other materials about BST.

In addition, the Foundation on Economic Trends petitioned the FDA to suspend its review of BST until the four companies who developed the drug stop industry trade associations from promoting the drug. An FDA spokesman said there would be no comment until the petition could be reviewed.

The National Institutes of Health have scheduled a two-day meeting next week to gather the consensus of researchers, physicians, consumers and public interest groups on BST. FDA scientists took the unusual step last Aug. 24 of publishing material from 120 studies that they said showed BST posed no threat.

DETROIT (NOV. 30) UPI - Ford Motor Co.'s $2.5 billion purchase of the British luxury carmaker Jaguar has all but exhausted Ford's ability to exceed current fuel economy standards, a company executive said Thursday.

Ford is now required to count Jaguar cars sold in this country among its import fleet, which also includes the Korean-made Festiva minicar and the Australian-built Capri, said David Kulp, manager of Ford's fuel economy planning and compliance office.

Jaguar had been paying between $5 million and $8 million a year in civil penalties for exceeding the federally mandated corporate average fuel economy standards, known as CAFE, between 1985 and 1988, Kulp said.

Because Ford bought Jaguar in late 1989, the luxury carmaker could pay another $6 million to $7 million for exceeding the CAFE standard for last year, he added.

That standard is now set at 27.5 mpg for both domestic and import cars sold in the United States.

Ford said this week it has reduced the content of North American-made parts of its new full-sized Crown Victoria and Grand Marquis sedans, which debut next March as 1992 models, below the 75 percent level, thereby being allowed to count them as part of its import fleet for CAFE purposes.

Under federal law, a car must have a domestic parts content of at least 75 percent to be classified as a domestic model.

By lowering the content and reclassifying those large, V8-powered cars as imports, Ford eases pressure it felt to meet CAFE standards among its North American-made cars.

Kulp told UPI, however, that there are no plans to do this with future new large cars, like its redesigned Lincoln Mark VIII coupe due in the early 1990s. This is partly because the Jaguars have substantially lowered the mileage ratings of its import fleet.

''We do not have any plans to do this further,'' Kulp said. ''The intention was to rebalance our fleets, and there is not any real need in the longer term to be considering further movements into that fleet. And with Jaguar in the import fleet, it becomes less prudent a decision.''

Ford also remains committed to importing and selling the Festiva just so it can balance its import fleet with a fuel stingy subcompact. ''With the purchase of Jaguar, we must now keep a fuel-efficient car in there,'' Kulp explained.

On the domestic side, Kulp said Ford will just barely meet the 27.5 mpg standard on its 1991 models, saying that credits that may be used from other years when it exceeded the standard are now exhausted.

''By 1990, we will have used those credits,'' he said.

A major part of the strategy to continue meeting future CAFE standards depends on how many of the new, fuel-efficient Escort and Tracer subcompacts Ford can sell.

Ford has said it must sell about 500,000 of these cars a year just so it can go on selling its larger, less miserly models. Kulp acknowledged that means Ford must virtually sell two Escorts for every Lincoln Town Car luxury sedans.

Kulp said he feels Ford will be able to meet any small increases in CAFE standards during the near-term through steady technological improvements.

But he reiterated that more drastic proposals, like the one proposed by Sen. Richard Bryan (D-Nev.) to raise fuel economy by 40 percent by 2001, will be hard to achieve.

''We do not see 20 percent more by 1995 or 40 percent more by 2001,'' he said, adding that there must be talks between government and industry that take into account legislation that will hamper higher fuel economy gains, like tighter emissions requirements and new crash standards.

''We still do not know what effect the Clean Air Act will have,'' Kulp said, referring to the far-reaching law Congress passed earlier this year.

''And new safety standards will add between 100 and 150 pounds to a car and 200 pounds to a truck, which works against fuel economy.''

UNITED NATIONS (NOV. 29) UPI - The U.N. Security Council approved Thursday the use of force to drive Iraqi troops out of Kuwait if President Saddam Hussein has not ordered their withdrawal by Jan. 15, the first such authorization in more than 40 years.

The 15-nation council authorized the military measure with a 12-2-1 vote. China, one of the five Security Council permanent members with the right to veto any resolution, abstained and Cuba and Yemen voted against.

Secretary of State James Baker, who presided over the meeting, said the presence of 13 foreign ministers at the council meeting was a testimony of the seriousness of Persian Gulf crisis.

''Our aim today must be to convince Saddam Hussein that the just, humane demands of this council and the international community cannot be ignored,'' Baker said at the start of the meeting.

''If Iraq does not reverse its course peacefully, then other necessary measures - including the use of force - should be authorized,'' he said. ''We must put the choice to Saddam Hussein in unmistakable terms.''

President Bush, speaking with reporters shortly after the U.N. vote, called the resolution ''a very powerful statement and everybody ought to understand how strong it is and how important it is.''

''Everybody wants a peaceful resolution. I think this would drive home the point to him that he's got to get out of Kuwait,'' he said.

In Washington, Iraq's ambassador to the United States, Mohammed Al- Mashat, attacked the resolution as ''selective,'' because the U.N. has not imposed sanctions against Israel for its occupation of the West Bank and other Arab lands.

''It is scandalous and shameful,'' Al-Mashat said. ''It doesn't receive our respect.'' But he said, ''We are not scared of it. It will not make any difference. The only thing that makes a difference is negotiating for peace.''

Voting for the resolution were the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France, Canada, Colombia, Cote d'Ivoire, Ethiopia, Finland, Malaysia, Zaire and Romania.

The resolution said Iraq has refused to comply with U.N. resolutions ''in flagrant contempt of the council'' and gave Iraq ''one final opportunity, as a pause of goodwill,'' to withdraw the 400,000-plus troops that have occupied Kuwait since Aug. 2.

It ''authorizes member states cooperating with the government of Kuwait, unless Iraq on or before January 15, 1991, fully implements ... the foregoing Resolutions, to use all necessary means to uphold and implement the Security Council Resolution 660 and all subsequent relevant resolutions and to restore international peace and security in the area;

The council requested all states to ''provide appropriate support'' for the actions undertaken to force Iraq to withdraw.

Nine votes are needed to pass a resolution if none of the five permanent members - the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, China and France - casts a negative vote, which consitutes a veto.

It was the second time the U.NM. authorized use of force. On July 7, 1950, the council voted 7-0, with three abstentions, to allow a multinational force under U.S. command to fight with South Korea against North Korea, which was mostly helped by the new communist regime in Beijing.

The Soviet Union did not participate because it was boycotting the U. N. to protest the fact that the Chinese U.N. seat was occupied by the exiled government in Taipei. The Korean War lasted three years.

Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah Al-Ahmad Al-Jaber called Thursday's meeting a ''landmark of united stand to condemn aggression and to ensure that the future will be ruled by international law.''

Before the vote, Iraq's U.N. Ambassador Abdul Amir Al-Anbari accused the United States of trying to subjugate other countries to the ''American order '' of denying Iraq a peace dialogue and of imposing a ''logic of arrogance and brutality.''

Al-Anbari said the resolution was issued under the ''U.S. hegemony .. . which has shown an arbitrary and biased behavior'' toward Iraq and he repeated his government's demand to link the withdrawal of Iraq from Kuwait to the Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

''Middle East's problems cannot be isolated from each other,'' Al- Anbari said.

Yemen's ambassador to the U.N., Abdalla Saleh Al-Ashtal, said his country could not support the resolution, despite voting for previous resolutions calling for an Iraqi withdrawl from Kuwait.

He said the wording of the resolution was ''so broad and vague'' that the use of force would not be limited to just implementing previous resolutions and that it would undermine the democratic process in the gulf region, which has been severely hurt economically by the U.N. trade sanctions.

''We have no alternative to peace,'' Al-Ashtal said.

To win further support for the resolution, Baker met with some of the foreign ministers attending the meeting. He met Wednesday with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and with British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd and Finnish Foreign Minister Pertti Kullervio Passio on Thursday. French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas also consulted Thursday with his Chinese counterpart, Qian Qichen.

The talks involving delegates of the five Security Council permanent members were aimed at maintaining unity among them in dealing with the crisis.

NEW YORK (NOV. 30) UPI - Business services, a typical activity of mid-sized companies, will be the fastest growing industry of the 1990s, while manufacturing is expected to suffer, a national survey said Thursday.

But mid-sized companies in general will weather recessionary conditions in the U.S. economy differently, according to their location and activity.

In the latest of its twice-a-year outlooks for mid-sized companies, American Express Corp. said the New England and mid-Atlantic regions will be hardest hit, while the Pacific Northwest, Pacific Southwest and south Atlantic regions will fare the best during the economic slowdown.

A mid-sized company is defined as having sales ranging from $2 million to $100 million and with 50 to 500 employees. The firms are typically in manufacturing retail or wholesale trade and business or personal services.

Business services include computer and data processing, advertising, legal services, management consulting and equipment leasing.

Computer and data processing is expected to grow by 16 percent a year, the American Express report said.

The wholesale and retail trade sector is expected to fare better than manufacturing - but not as well as the service sector, as free-spending, consumption-oriented baby boomers of the 1980s become middle-aged savers in the 1990s.

The largest decline in retail growth is expected to be tobacco products, American Express said.

The survey also found that a recession will hit economies in 42 states, with only Texas, Florida, Arizona, Nevada, Hawaii, Colorado, Utah and New Mexico expected to escape.

In the Pacific Northwest, Alaska may gain from higher oil prices caused by the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. The region is also expected to gain from increased demand for commercial aircraft from Asian countries, while the timber economy will contract with the construction industry.

But the region's service economy is expected to benefit from increased tourism and an influx of retirees.

The Pacific Southwest, dominated by California, is expected to show strong job growth in manufacturing and trade, as well as moderate gains in defense and high-technology employment.

Like the Pacific Northwest, the south Atlantic region will experience strong growth in its service industry to support tourism and a growing population of retirees.

The declining fortunes of the New England and mid-Atlantic regions reflect slumps in defense, real estate and financial services. The weak real estate market will hurt construction and banking, while the slowing economy may force local governments to raise taxes, exacerbating sluggish business conditions, American Express said.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) UPI - First Boston Corp. said Thursday it formed a subsidiary to provide cellular telephone service in rural areas.

The new operation, called First Cellular Acquisition Corp., will be based in Atlanta and plans to provide capital to holders of cellular licenses in rural areas still not reached by such service, said Earle MacKenzie, president of First Cellular.

''The current licensee would contribute his license and First Cellular would contribute capital and management expertise'' to First Cellular, MacKenzie said.

MacKenzie decline to disclose the projected investment, but said his company is looking for two other investors to match First Boston's contribution.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (NOV. 29) UPI - Argentine Interior Minister Mera Figueroa said Thursday that rumors of a plot to kill President George Bush during his visit to Argentina next week are not true.

Figueroa told reporters Thursday evening the rumors were leaked by ''some state organism'' that he declined to identify and he said President Carlos Menem ''has decided to investigate the origin of the information.''

He said the information was published as a result of ''inexact information that has some grains of truth, that came from a state organization and this is extremely serious.''

The truthful parts of the plot, according to the minister, was that police arrested a Bolivian man, Carlos Monzon, on Nov. 22 for holding ''false documentation.''

Figueroa said Monzon ''is accused of being a member of a terrorist organization'' in Bolivia but that the accusation has not been proven.

''I will wait until the judge in the case hands down his ruling,'' he said.

A reporter for the newspaper Diario Popular, which published the information Thursday, identified his source to United Press International as the Argentine federal police and said the judge in the case, Alberto Duran, confirmed the plot in his written ruling.

Police Commissary Julian Blanco told UPI early Thursday a non- Argentine man was arrested in a suspected plot to kill Bush. The official said the arresting officers were members of the Special Operations Group, the SWAT team of the Province of Buenos Aires.

Asked if it was true that a far left terrorist group was planning to kill Bush Blanco replied, ''This information is correct. I can't deny that our organization is working on this case.''

Bush is to visit Argentina on Dec. 5, the third stop on a five-nation South American tour.

Diario Popular said about 30 Argentine and Chilean left-wing terrorists planned to ambush the president while he visited the Palermo race track.

It said the terrorists were veterans of the unsuccessful 1986 assasination attempt against former Chilean President Augusto Pinochet, now Chile's army commander, and of a bloody, temporary takeover of an Argentine army barracks in January 1989.

Referring to the reported plot, Buenos Aires Province Gov. Antonio Cafiero said, ''Argentina, like any other country in the world, cannot avoid the presence of these tiny sectors that do not have, at least not in the Province of Buenos Aires, any possibility of expansion.''

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) UPI - World financial markets, fueled by expanding U.S. investment overseas, will ''come of age'' in the next five years, according to a survey of more than 600 international financial executives released Thursday.

Despite growing U.S. internationalization, the study found, New York has been eclipsed by London as the world's financial center, while Frankfurt, Germany, is likely to take on much greater global financial importance.

Financial opinion-makers see eastern and central Europe's transformation from a Marxist backwater to free-market systems as the most important economic trend of the 1990s, upstaging the European Community's 1992 unification plan.

Commissioned by the Sequor Group, a unit of Los Angeles-based bank holding company Security Pacific Corp., the survey found Japanese institutions likely to focus on the emerging Pacific Rim economies in the 1990s.

Suggesting U.S. business leaders' enthusiasm for reform in the Soviet Union will lead to an economic ''super-partnership,'' the report said U. S. corporate involvement in Soviet ventures could double in five years.

Similarly, U.S. companies ''plan a greater proportional increase in investment in Eastern Europe than in any other area of the world,'' the report said, adding that by 1995 three in 10 big American corporations will be active there.

The main theme of the report, though, was that, over the next five years, global financial markets - about which so much was said in the 1980s - will come into their own during first half of the 1990s.

''During the next five years, the international financial market will undergo what is likely to be its most dramatic and significant period of growth in the 20th century,'' the Sequor Group study concluded.

Interviews with 603 top financial officers, money managers and traders of the world's largest banks, insurance companies, pension funds and institutional players of the like, conducted by Louis Harris and Associates Inc. indicated ''the global financial market will come of age'' by 1995.

The study said U.S. investment activity overseas would be a driving factor in this internationalization process. Respondents predicted the share of American securities trading done overseas would triple by 1995.

The study said that more than two-thirds of top U.S. companies plan to issue publicly traded debt abroad by five years from now - double today's level - and that a third of U.S. corporations will issue stock abroad - triple the number that have done so to date.

But U.S. companies and institutions lag behind those of many other nations in their plans for international involvement, the report said.

By 1995, the median percentage of U.S. foreign securities trading is estimated to reach 19 percent, compared with 29 percent for the European Community and Pacific Rim nations such as Taiwan, Thailand and New Zealand.

But Japan was expected to hold at just 18 percent, preferring to focus on its leading trade and investment role in the Pacific Basin, with increased activity expected in Taiwan, South Korea, Thailand, Malaysia, China and New Zealand.

The survey found that London, with a less restrictive regulatory climate, has a ''small, but consistent and enduring,'' edge over New York as the best market in which to raise capital or trade global securities.

''New York, on the other hand, is give much higher grades than its rivals in technology and clearing and settlement,'' the study said, referring to payment in securities deals and transfer of securities ownership.

But London is likely to lose ground over the next five years as the Frankfurt financial market assumes a bigger role following the unification of Germany and the restoration of free markets in Eastern Europe, said the study.

NEW YORK (NOV. 29) UPI - The Federal Reserve Board said Thursday the basic U. S. money supply, known as M1, rose $3.6 billion in the latest reporting week. The broader monetary aggregate M2 increased $2.7 billion, but the broadest measure of all, M3, decreased $700 million.

M1, including cash, checking accounts and NOW accounts - money available for immediate spending - increased to a seasonally adjusted average of $823.6 billion in the week ended Nov. 19 from a revised $820. 0 billion the week before.

Over the past 13 weeks, M1 averaged $820.7 billion, up 5.2 percent from where it stood over the previous 13-week period, the central bank said.

The more broadly defined M2 averaged an estimated $3,319.0 billion in the latest week, up from a revised $3,316.3 billion. M2 includes M1 plus passbook savings, small time deposits such as money-market deposit accounts, consumer money-market mutual funds and other short-term assets.

M3, defined as M2 plus large time deposits, securities repurchase agreements longer than one day at banks and thrifts and institutional money market funds, averaged $4,083.0 billion in the latest week, down from a revised $4,083.7 billion, the Fed said.

UPPER SADDLE RIVER, N.J. (NOV. 29) UPI - Western Union Corp. Thursday launched a tender offer for $250 million to $350 million of its outstanding 19 1/4 percent senior secured notes and 16 percent notes after an exchange offer expired.

A group of 12 bondholders has threatened to force Western Union into bankruptcy proceedings if the company does not meet certain conditions in its tender by next week.

The tender follows the expiration of Western Union's exchange offer for up to $530 million of outstanding 19 1/4 percent senior secured notes and 16 percent notes.

The exchange offer, in which the company proposed to issue new notes and common shares in exchange for its notes, expired at midnight Wednesday due to a lack of interest.

The tender announced Thursday will expire at midnight Dec. 27.

Under the tender offer, Western Union would buy a minimum of $250 million and a maximum of $350 million principal amount of its outstanding 19 1/4 percent and 16 percent notes at a cash purchase price of $500 per $1,000 principal amount of notes.

The bondholders, in a letter received Wednesday by Western Union, said they would not consent to amendments of or tender any 19 1/4 percent notes unless certain conditions were met. These include prohibitions on affiliate transactions, limitations on borrowings, and prohibitions on dividends and repurchases of capital stock, were met.

A spokesman for Western Union Thursday had no comment on the bondholders' letter, but referred to a document filed Thursday with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

In the document, Western Union said the proposed amendment to its 19 1/4 percent note indenture includes the conditions listed.

Otherr conditions outlined by bondholders, however, were not addressed in the document.
